Brigham is friendly disposed toward the overland mail companis. People visiting Salt Lake are watched in their movements the same as they would be if they were known to be murderers or incendiaries; strangers never converse except in low tones so that they cannot be heard off the sidewalks. The spy system here is equal to that in Vienna or Paris. Men and women are frequently found curled up under the fence inside the yard to listen to people passing along the streets. Men have been known to come and listen under the window of strangers, when lights have been seen at what they considered unusual hours. To report anything to Brigham to attract his attention would be accountred a good work.

The Wonders of the Port of London.

A recent number of Chambers's Journal contains some facts and statistics with regard to the trade and commerce of London, which are so marvellous in appearance that they might be esteemed fabulous were it not for the figures which accompany them, and the respectable source, from which they emanate. It says:

The custom house port of London extends from London bridge to the North Foreland, on the Kent coast, and the Naze, on the Essex coast, including not only the Thames, but the wide estuary before the river. This mighty port has grown up gradually. There were no docks in London until the present century, which has witnessed the expenditure of twelve millions sterling in the construction of docks on either side of the Thames. Six thousand ships now enter these docks annually, and the cry is "still they come!" All the docks are filled, though some do not pay well.

There are shipped off now yearly from the port of London alone commodities to the value of thirty millions sterling, beside those from other ports of the United Kingdom, and there is imported still a larger quantity of colonial produce. The ships which actually belong to the port of London are not less than 3,000 in number, averaging about 300 tons each, or 900,000 tuns of commercial shipping, in all—a stupendous quantity to enter and depart from one single river. It is a quarter of the total amount for the whole kingdom. Five hundred of these are steamers, and one-half of all the mercantile steam navy of England belongs to and is registered in the port of London. No less than 30,000 ships enter the port of London yearly—more than 80 per day! Some of these ships make many voyages, but there are 30,000 arrivals with 30,000 cargoes. The vessels average 200 tuns each, giving us an aggregate of 6,000,000 tuns.

The coasting trade of London is most wonderful. Of the 30,000 vessels just named, 18,000 bring cargoes from other British ports, and 9,000 of these go back empty, mostly to coal ports. Five million tuns of coal are burned annually in the metropolis, and about 12,000 cargoes of coal are brought into the Thames annually—one every hour, and a handsome surplus. The spread of railways from London has had very little effect in diminishing trade by other modes of conveyance. The canal boats carry more than before railways were constructed, and the number of carriages and horses employed in Great Britain, the use of which railways were designed to supersede, is greater than it was before these railways were made. But the grandeur of the foreign trade of London strikes the imagination still more forcibly.

All the corners of the earth seem to be brought to a focus in the river Thames. Twelve thousand ships now enter there yearly, bringing nearly 12,000 cargoes of all that the earth can produce of value and beauty. Every forty minutes during the year a ship passes Gravesend, bringing stores from some colonial or foreign clime, in many cases much more than London's own protection. For instance seven eights of all the coffee brought to all the parts of the United Kingdom; seven ninths of the live stock; one half of the sugar, tobacco, wool, fruit, rice and hides nearly one-half of the bacon, ham, barrel salt, meat, butter, cheese, eggs and lard; five-sixths the spices, and no less than fifteen-sixteenths of all the teas. London consumes just as much of all this as she wants, and sends the rest into the provinces and abroed.

Two million empty oyster shells were once brought over to London in one ship for the sake of that beautiful lining which constitutes the mother-of pearl used for many fancy and ornamental purposes.—One fact most instructive is observable in this vast trade of the port of London, viz: what ever is brought over, in whatever ship, from whatever place, and by whatever person, it is sure to find a market.—The price may be beaten down, if the demand is languid, but they never think of saying "we don't want any."

Notwithstanding the vast commercial importance of London, the great American trade is mostly within the grasp of Liverpool, because the Merser is nearer to America than the Thames, and cotton is most needed in Lancashire, and because the chief articles sold to America, such as metals, hardware, earthware, &c., are fabricated nearer to Liverpool than to London.

A City in the Rockey Mountains.

The resident population of Virginia, Nevada Territory, on the 1st of July was estimated at 15,000, the daily average number of transient visitors being as many more. Main street, which is the Brodway and Wall of that city, to some three quarters of a mile in length, is crowded with people of every grade and description, a large proportion being elegantly dressed males and females. The buildings on Main street are mostly brick; the first story iron, open in front. This gives a light, cheerful appearance to the street, especially in the night time when brilliantly lighted with gas. Many of the buildings in this city are provided with vaults and salamanders; all the four and five story brick and iron front fire-proof buildings now going up have one or both of these indispensable features. Some of the streets are so blocked up with lumber, brick and mortar, that teams are at times unable to get along; common laborers get from $3 to $5 a day, without board. The city supports four daily newspapers, a theatre, opera house, several churches, and any number of melodeons and negro minstrels; to say nothing of the institutions alredy enumerated above.

No one who has not been there can form an idea of the amount of treasure to be seen passing through Main street. At Wells & Fargo's banking house and express office it is not uncommon to see tons of "silver bricks" wheeled in and out in the course of an hour. The shape resembles the ordinary fire-brick, but are much larger, and from 985 to 990 per cent fineness; which is 10 to 15 per cent less than pure silver—averaging some $1,800 each. The sight drafts sold frequly amounting to $100,000 a day. Sums of $20 and upwards are usualy paid in $20 pieces. No paper currency there, or in any of the mining towns west of the Rockey Mountains—Salt Lake City being the only place where paper circulates for money. So much for a city less than six years old.

A BRIDE WORTH HAVING.—The Rockingham (Va.) Register publishes the marriage of Miss Lucy F Roller, the daughter of a wealthy farmer in that country, and adds:

She was what we would call an independent girl,, sure enough. Her bridal outfit was all made with her own hands, from her beautiful and elegant straw hat down to the handsome gaiters upon her feet! Her own delicate hands spun and wove the material of which her wedding dress and traveling cloak were made, so that she had nothing upon her person when she was married which was not made by herself! Nor was she compelled by necessity or poverty to make this exhibition of her independence. She did it for the purpose of showing to the world how independent Southern girls are.

THE RUSSIAN BALL.—Of this gigantic exhibition of shoddy vulgarity and folly the journal of commerce says; "Lustrous diamonds in many instances only served to make coarseness." Shoddy largley predominated. The Shoddyites, save the reporter of the world, fell upon Ball & Black and also upon Tiffany, and bore away from those brilliant bazaars all manner of diamonds and rubies and opals—not indeed by purchase, but by loan upon usury. Shoddy being of that nature as joyously to pay ten per cent, upon the value of such bright and shining baubles, in order that for a single happy night it may dazzle and stun deluded barbarians with a show of magnificence, and mayhap inveigle the same into bonds of holy and profitable wedlock with the daughters of Shoddy.

☞ A little girl of three years, from beyond the Mississippi, who had never seen an apple-tree in full bloom, beheld one in Ohio. She lifted her hands in the attitude of devotion, and exclaimed—"See God's big bouquet!"

☞ There is a couple in Cincinnati who have been engaged to be married for the past five years, but no time has occurred within that period when they were both out of prison at the same time.

☞ Wisely and slow; they stumble that run fast.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., NOV. 26, 1863.

Proclamation,

In accordance with established usage, and because it is eminently fit that an enlightened and Christan people should make frequent acknowledgment of there humble dependence upon Almighty God for all the blessings of life, I do hereby appoint Thursday, the 26th day of November instant, as a day of praise, Thanksgiving and prayer, and recommend that, suspending all ordinary business, the people of this State do assemble in their places of public worship, in their houses and by the family fireside, and keep this day as becomes them with reverence and gratitude towards our Heavenly Father, and with sincere and hearty good will towards our felow-men. Let the kindly affections which unite the families togather receive a new and stronger impulse from the good cheer of this day; and in the midst of our abundance let us not forget the broken-hearted and the poor Many of our people will be absent from the religious and social gatherings of this Thanksgiving; dwelling in tents and in open field, in armes gallantly defending our heritage of liberty our homes and property. Let the united prayers of this whole Let the united prayers of this whole people arise to the God of battle for them, that He will give them victory and the Nation re-established in unity and peace. That He will shield from want and sorrow the families of these heroic soldiers, and that He will comfort those who mourn for the heroic dead in the camp, the hospital, and on the battle-field.

The people of Michigan have been prospered in business during the year that is past beyond all previous example. Let them be thankful; but put away pride and the inordinate love of gain, which leads us too often to make merchandize of the most sacred cause. Let us observe this day with humility; truthfulness and honestly towards ourselves, our fellows and our Creator.

In testimony whereof I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed (L. S.) the great Seal of the State, at the City of Lansing, this 3d day of November, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three.

AUSTIN BLAIR.

Folly in High Places.

We clip the following from the letter of a Washington correspondent. Can these miserable men who now attempt to steer the ship of state, find any parallel for their atrocious levity in history? The only one that now occurs to us that corresponds at all is the familiar one of Nero fiddling while Rome was burning, set on fire by his own orders too:

"The approaching winter will be the gayest season Washington ever saw.—The preparations that are being made for every description of dissipation are on the most stupendous scale. The population of the capital will be far greater than during any preceding winter. The capacity of the hotels and boarding houses for accomodating the people who will be here, was exhausted long ago. There is not a vacant house in the city or in Georgetown. Hundreds of people have engaged houses in Baltimore, and will ride to this city from that one every morning. The hotels and boarding houses here will charge the most fabulous prices.—Balls, routs, and parties will be the order of the day. Money will flow like water Extravagance in dress, in equipage, and in sumptous living, will mark the daily life of the degenerate successors of Washington, of Jackson, of Harrison, of Polk. In all these fashionable follies the President's houshold, we are gravrly informed takes the lead. Already Jenkins has given a gushing description of the new and elegant outfit of "the President's lady," and has dilated upon the georgeous halls and banquets that are to be given at the White House. God help the poor this winter, whose husbands and fathers have been forced off to the wars, while they are starving at home, with coal at $11 a tun, sugar 18 cents per pound, coffee 40 c'ts a pound, tea $1,50 a pound, muslin 31 cents a yard, and flannel too dear to be bought. Balls and banquets at the White House; blood and balls of another kind, on the battle-field; and starvation and anguish in the dwellings of the poor. So we go. This is the fruit of "republican" rule.

☞ During our absence an article got into the HERALD last week, attacting the private character of Wilber F. Story of the Chicago Times at which we very much regret. That gentleman is one of the most talented journalists in America, and although differing with the Administration in its war policy, we have not the smallest doubt but that he is honestly and sincerely loyal to the Federal Constitution, and the Union of the States under that instrument

☞ Dr. Geo. W. Underwood, a druggist at Hilladale, has been held in $1,500 to appear at Circuit Court to answer for the crime of abortion. An attempt to fasten him for seduction failed through the limitation clause of the statute, the offence having been committed more than two years since. The name of the girl is Mary Miller, now or until lately, a servant in the Doctor's family.

The Exchange of Prisoners.

The NEW YORK Evening Post publishes a Washington letter containing the following:

The question of a resumption of the exchange of prisoners with the rebel authorities at Richmond is an absorbing one at the present time, and I have reason to believe that the President and Secretary of War are much exercised by it. It is probable that the exchange will soon be made; but the clamor in some of the newspapers for it is exceedingly reckless an unjust. The principle involved is one of immense importance; and, if the Government gives way to the unjust demands of the rebel leaders, hereafter it is at their mercy. It should be born in mind that, if the Government accede to the demands of the South now, it must do the thing in reference to our colored soldiers who are imprisoned as felons in the rebel jails. It can do nothing for the white officers who commanded the black troops, but who have been captured. The President, it is said, complains that the journals in the North which blamed him three months ago for not suspending the exchange altogether, because the rebels would not surrender white officers of colored regiments, now blame him for not submitting to still more monstrous demands.

One gentleman, who is deeply interested in this subject, and who has been on to Washington, urges the President to submit to any demand rather than leave our soldiers to starve in Richmond jails. Some of the officials of the war department very properly reply to such requests as that. "Then we may as well stop the war; for all that Jeff Davis has to do to end it is to threaten us with starvation of our troups now in his hands if we will not acknowledge the independence of the Confederacy." It is probable that the Government will arrange the difficulties in some way with the rebel Government. It will doubtless give way on many points to meet the public sentiment of the country; but I am shure from what I have heard from the lips of more than one of the members, that it dislikes to read arguments in loyal journals attempting to show that it should submit to the Rebel demands at every hazard, even at the expense of manliness and honor.

Russia.

A letter from St. Petersburgh published in the NEW YORK Times says that the war preparations continue upon a scale unprecedented in the history of Russia.—An immense recruitment has been ordered throughout the empire. Very large earthworks and stone forts have been constructed at St. Petersburgh, Cronstadt, Helsingfors, and other places. The old granite forts at Cronstradt are to be covered with 12 inch rolled iron plates. Ten or twelve monitors, and two or three iron clads, of a different construction have been ordered, and will be ready for sea in May or June next. Large quantities of cannon, and shot and shell have been ordered from England and will be delivered during the winter. All the Government shops are being enlarged and every effort is making to render Russia indedendent of other countries in war material, as she is already in food and clothing for her armies. On the first appearance of the war cloud, the Russions dreaded it very much, although they were determined to do their utmust to sustian the Emperor, if it come to that. Now, however, the feeling has entirely changed, and they do not dread it at all. In fact, they rather court it than otherwise. Alexander's popularity is immense, and increasing every day.

OUR UNIVERSITY YOUTH.—The Cincinatti Gazette throws a stray shot or two at our University goslings who paid court to Vallandigham. It conjectures that "the transportation of these innocents for the purpos, was like one of those show pieces gotten up for Democratic meetings during the campaign, in which a collection of young females in a locomotive pen, were represented as beset and reduced to the last extremity, by the beseeching motto, "Fathers save us from negro equality!" And it further suggests that "the parents of this Windsor baby-show had better take these sucking Wolverines to their own care, or place them in hands which will not use them in the disreputable spectacle business." As a reward for the toil and eloquence of these youths, it remarks that "the nursing Michiganders were cramed with moral precepts, like young ducks with wet Indian meal, all of which were to show them the way to become great, good and patriotic, like the speaker." This will do for the present.

Out of a draft association of 20 members formed in Hilsdale, five were drawn; to pay whose commutation money it required $300 more than the entire capitol of the concern. Out of another assoctation of 72 persons, formed in the same place, five also were drawn; jus enough to absorb the entire amount subscribed.—100 conscripts left Grand Rapids for the regions of war on Thursday, 19th idst, The ladies of the place sent them off with a liberal supply of good things for the jonrney.

Miscellaneous Items.

The quota of Chicago under the President's new call is 3000.

A matrimonial intelligence office has been opened in St. Catherines, Canada. Ladies sending in their names or initials are requested to enclose a photograph for the inspection of those about to make a choice.

The fur trade of the Northwest for the season has just closed. St. Paul, which is claimed to be the largest fur market in the country, shows the following statement of business; 3,500 buffaloes, 850 bears 1650 red foxes, 28,000 mink, 250,000 musk rat 2258 otter, 640 fisher, 1600 martin, 79 cross fox and 3500 wolves, killed during the season.

The greatest horror has deen created in an uptown fashionable hotel, in New York by a strike on the part of the hotel, for $1 per day for the board of poodles. The dog's board is $7 per week! The excitement among the ladies with poodles is now tremendous, and there even is, if possible, more debate and indignation about it, than in the strikes of the great machine shops.

A bold attempt was made last week to rob Walter H. Stowe, the money clerk of the American Express Company, at Chicago. His residence was entered by burglars, and his pockets rifled in the hope of finding the keys to the safe of the Express office. Fortunately he had given them to another clerk, and the burglars succeeded in only getting a small amount of postal currency from his pocket.

Nashville has become a metropolis for amusements. There are two theatres which are crowded nightly to their utmost capacity, and one circus. The audiences are warmly loyal. National songs dances and plays, are immensely popular; and every patriotic sentiment is cheered to the echo. "Any allusion to Gen. Rosecrans invariably brings down the house with its loudest thunders of applause.

Applications from rebel prisoners at camp Douglas who are anxious to take the oath of allegence are constantly made to Col. DeLand. Upwards of 500 such applications are now on his table. Many of the prisoners write in strong terms of censure against the secession goverment and state they were conscripted into service, against their will, and good judgement. They are anxious to take the oath, and remain North till after the war. But as there is no arrangement at present for allowing prisoners of war to take the oath of allegiance, their labor is in vain.

The people of Vanderburg and Gibson counties. Indiana, last weke donated 340 loads of wood to the families of soldiers in the army.

Secretary Wells has written. in reply to a communication from New York merchants urging greater zeal in the persuit of the rebel privateers, that all the vessels which can be spared from the blockade service, have already been dispatched after them, and every means in the power of the department have been used.

The residence of Luke Osborn, about a mile from Sandusky, was burned Wednesday evening. Loss $10,000, Insurance $8,000.

The soldiers in the army from Trumbull county, Ohio, so far as they voted, cast 605 ballots for Brough and 7 for Vallandingham.

WANTED—CORRESPONDENCE.—Here is a sample of the fruit that the system of advertisiug indicated by the heading to this paragraph is producing. The item is from the Lonisville Journal:

"Three hundred prisoners arrived in this city a short time since, amongst whom were five of the romantic young ladies who recently decamped from Zanesville, Ohio, to share the perils and hardships of our soldiers on the battle-field. They were discovered immediatly upon arriving in this place, and sent back to Camp Chase, from whence they have doubtless been sent to their parents. They were young, intelligent and pretty, but already lost to all senses of virtue and conduct becoming ladies."

STRIKES.—Combinations of workmen to obtain higher wages are again becoming frequent. We hear of strikes at Washington, New York, Boston. and all over the country. This is the natural result of the increased cost of living. in consequence of the high price of everything a man eats, drinks, wears or uses: A cold winter is coming, and the prospects is not very pleasant to a laboring man who receives no higher wages than he did two years ago, and yet has to pay double for everything he purchases. These strikes therefore are reasonable, and to be expected if an increase of wages could not be obtained any other way. Most of them will succeed, and they ought to when the demands are based on justice. Employers may as well make up their minds to this; in fact they ought to have anticipated such movements and made an increase of wages corresponding to the increased cost of living. Any buisness which will not allow liberal pay to workmen in times like these, ought to be abandoned at once for something that will pay better. There is no difficulty in finding such.

War News.

CINCINNATI, Nov. 23.—Maj. Gen. Foster has arrived; and will leave for Knoxville to-day.

Official advices from East Tennessee up to 11 o'clock Sunday morning are encouraging. At that time firing at Knoxville was heard by our extreme outposts from Cumberland Gap.

Adj. Stanly, of the 15th Kentucky cavalry, arrived at Cumberland Gap yesterday. He gives a hopeful view of the situation of our army. Gen. Burnside still holds out, and has notified the citizens that he would certainly hold Knoxville. The rebel citizens estimate the force opposing him at 36,000.

Knoxville is not fully invested. The enemy have withdrawn from the south side of the river, and we forage there.

The artillary fighting on the 19th and 20th was very severe, The enemy sustained a happy loss.

Brig. Gen. Saunders, wounded at Campbell's Staition a few days ago, has since died.

Col. Woolford is slightly wounged.

The Commercial says the withdrawl of the enemy from the South side of Knoxville is significant of a diecisive repulse Burnside is holding Knoxville under instructions from Grant, and it is not to be supposed, therefore, that the forces under Thomas, Hooker and Sherman, are wasting there time during these momentous hours, We are in hourly expectation of recoiving intelligence of a most startling character.

The Times Washington special says that an officer on Gen. Bank's staff writing to a friend in that city, says a large quantity of cotton was captured near Brownsville, and an expedition had been sent up the river to get all they could find.

The Union men at Brownsville who hailed with delight the capture of the place by our forces, were forming themselves into defensive organizations and rendering valuable service as scouts.

The cotton which will be thrown into market by our occupation of Texas, will reach 250,000 bales. The amount stored on the Rio Grande, we believe is immense.

BALTIMORE, Nov. 23.—The transport Delaware, from Port Royal and Stone bar the 20th, reports the capture of the rebel steamer Banshee, from Nassau, with a cargo of great value.

A Morris Island letter says that shell were fired in Charleston on the 17th inst., falling in the most populous part of the city. On Sunday night a very heavy rebel fire was continuously poured into our batteries from the rebel works. nothing new in the fleet.

By the Fulton we learn that the sea wall of Sumpter has been entirely destroyed. The rebels were building a bomb-proof on the ruins. The bombardment still continues.

NEW YORK, Nov. 23.—The President, on Saturday, in course of conversation, remarked that the next two weeks would be the most momentous period of the rebellion.

It having been doubted that General Burnside was to be relieved by General Foster, it is now stated that the order was issued on the 16th; and that Gen. Burnside is ordered to report to the Adjutant General here.

WASHINGTON, Nov. 23.—It was published here to day, and telegraphed North, that the Army of the Potomac at daybreak commenced an advance on the enemy, but gentlemen who arrived from the front to-night are entirely ignorent of the alleged movement. The announcement was premature.

Advices received from the army of the Potomac to night, say deserters come into our lines almost hourly. The most intelligent and probably well informed, estimate Lee's effective strength at from 50,000 to 60,000.

A man of high connection in a rebel state says Lee is in hourly expectation of an attack by Gen. Meade, and prepared at every point to give him a terrible reception. The permanent and temporary rebel works on the Rapidan are being strengthened and enlarged to a vast extent.

CAIRO, Nov. 23.—The steamer Ander. has arrived with six hundred bales of cotton from Memphis for Cincinatti.

Roving bands of guerrillas infest the river below, a hundred of whom, under the notorious Sol Street, entered Hickman Ky., last Thursday, and plundered the stores and houses, and captured four or hve unarmed soldiers.

Hon. Lucien Anderson, recently captured at Maysfield by the rebels, passed through there en route for home. He was released on condition that he should procure the release of Trusten Polk.

The Provost Marshal General orders that hereafter all appointments of employes under District Provost Marshal Generals shall be referred, through the proper channel, to him, and prescribes some minor regulations tending to insure a more through organization and discipline of the subordinate officers.

Eighteen thousand hogs are now in pens in the vicinity of Indianapolis, awaiting their turn to be slaughtered.—Meanwhile they are fed on new corn at $1 per bushel.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,

C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the 9th day of November in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Sarah A. Cole, minor. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Benjamin L. Baxter, gardian of said minor, praying for license to sell the said estate of said minor for reasons stated in said petition.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 21st, day of December next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the next of kin of said minor and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ROBERT R. BEECHER,
Judge of Probate.

WANTED

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, tudk, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table top or work stand, with directions so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilites for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

☞ For further particulars, apply to
J. D. DALE, General Agent,
Rochester, N. Y.
or A. M. BADGER & Co.

$100 REWARD.

For a Medicine that will cure Coughs, Influenza, Tickling in the Throat, Whooping Cough, or relieve Consumptive Cough, as quick as

COES COUGH BALSAM.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in its nasive town. and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quattity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it so as to enable the patient to expectonate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy it its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to children of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

☞ No Family should be Without it.

It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you. It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures is has made.

☞ The Hudson Gazette says: Recently a young lady entered the music store of W. W. Whitney, Toledo, for the purpose of purchasing a piece of music entitled "When I sleep, I dream of thee;" but by one of those ludicrous mistakes which will sometimes happen in the best of families, she astonished the great music man by enquiring if he had the music entitled, "When I dream I sleep with thee!" The mistake brought a modest blush to the face of the fair inquirer—ditto Whitney. We believe Mrs. W. hasn't heard of the affair yet. When she does there will probably be—music.

FORTUNATE ESCAPE.—As the evening train from Toledo was on its way west on Thursday evening last, a singular affair occurred. It appears a little child about 6 years of age, left its mother, a passenger and walked out of the door of the car and straight off the platform. The train was stopped as soon as practicable; and a party sent back to find the child or its body. After proceding a short distance they met the little one following the train, and entirley uninjured.

The report was adopted. The amount of State and County tax is about $14'000 less than last year.

Temperance Meeting.

At a somewhat spontaneous meeting of citizens of Tecumseh, held at the Presbyerian Societie's Lecture Room on Friday evening, Nov. 20th, B. L. Bexter was called to the chair, and Wm. VanCamp was appointed Secretary.

On motion the following committee was appointed to report Resolutions and business for the evening, to wit:

Rev's. McCloud, Taylor and Wishard; P. Bills, M. Y. Hood and E. Landon.

The committee reported the following preamble and resolutions, which after a careful discussion, were unanimously adopted:

WHEREAS, there is a fearful state of things in ou. Village as regards the matter of Intemperance, inasmuch as there are a large number of places where intoxicating liquors, and sold as a beverage, and that contrary to the known laws of the State, and whereas, we are thereby having raised up around us a race of drunkards, therefore

Resolved, That it is the duty of every good citizen to do all within his power promptly to prevent and arrest this state of things,

Resolved, The it is especially the duty of our Town and Village Boards to see that the Liquor Law of this State is duly enforced within the limits of their several jurisdiction, and that all known violations of it, are prosecuted and punished.

Resolved, That a committee of five be appointed to circulate among our citizens a petition to our Town and Village Board respectfully requesting of them a thorough and effective enforcement of the law of the State with regard to the sale of intoxicating drinks, and pledging to them our cordial sympathy and support in all such prosecutions as shall seem to them desirable for violations of the same.

The following persons were appointed said committee, viz: Wm. Hayden, M. Y. Hood, E Landon, Simeon Davidson, E. Tindall.

Resolved, That the time has come for the friends of Temperance to take immediate action to bring the public mind to such a sense of danger and duty, as will most effectually enable us to stay the tide of intemperance in our village and its vicinity, and that therefore, when we adjourn, it shall be to meet again, in a larger public meeting to be held at Bidwell's Hall in the Village of Tecumseh, on Saturday evening Nov. 28th, 1863, at 7 o'clock, to listen to a Temperance Address from the Rev. Mr. Gallager of Hillsdale, and such other addresses and the transaction of such other business as the occasion may suggest.

On motion adjourned accordingly.

B. L. BAXTER, President.
WM. VANCAMP, Secretary.

☞ We have heard of people asking for bread and receiving a stone. We should consider ourselves much worse treated, after asking for Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus, to have some other kind palmed off on us. We state this that our readers may enjoy the same pleasure we have, viz: to eat a better biscuit than was ever made with any other Saleratus or soda. Most of the merchants have it for sale. See that the name of Herrick Allen is on the wrapper, and no mistake can occur.

These Bitters
are not offered to the public as a medicine which will cure all the "ills which flesh is heir to," but as a remedial agent—a great regulator of the system.
In the Bilious districts of the West and South there has, for a long time, been much needed an article of Stomach Bitters, which, if taken in proper quantities, and at the proper time, are a sure preventive of Bilious Fever,
Fever and Ague,
Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia,
Indigestion,
Jaundice,
Kidney Complaints,
and all diseases of a similar nature.
These Bitters
are composed of rare and powerful roots and herbs, which make them
Highly Tonic.

Soldiers in the Army and
OUR PEOPLE AT HOME
Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,
AT A
VERY LOW FIGURE,
OUR WATCHES ARE ALL WARRANTED TO KEEP TIME ONE YEAR,
AND THE BUYER IS ALLOWED THE
PRIVILEGE OF EXAMINATION
BEFORE PAYMNT IS REQUIRLD.
IMPROVED DUPLEX, RUBY ACTION,
A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. IMPROVED DUPLEX in FULL RUBY ACTION, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants, and persons traveling, will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.
SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING
LEVERS.
Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our IMPROVED DUPLEX, and superior adjusted movements with "Stop," to be used in timing horses, etc; has FOUR INDEXES for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.
☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to expressman when the goods are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and, if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.
The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction of two dollars on either watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.
Money may be sent by express at our expense.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large percentage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with cogs otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly four years constant use."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS [02 Cents] per pound above COST.

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the Tea buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others

If he is no judge of Tea, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This system [illegible] no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest; that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40

The Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing Machine is the best regardless of price, for Family Sewing,

Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording.

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam which is warranted not to rip in wear even if the seam breaks at intervals and also under all circumstances it survive the washtub.

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction or the alance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be put wrong. It is simple, durable, the good, simple, Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it. Phila Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the high priced machines.—Pennsylvanian

"Technically in the opinion of the committee it renders the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858

Taking into consideration simplicity of construction, durability and doing all work for which a machine is required, we unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving beyond doubt that two threads are not as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 2 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Phila Ledger Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of those we have in use in our own family."—Hen on Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has in so short a time acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable." Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

Dimness of Vision.	Pain in the Back
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System.	Eruptions on the Face.
Hot Hands	Pallid Countenance.
Dryness of Skin.

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those direful diseases?

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy death by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis, or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Life is but A Span.

Life is but a span—of horses.
One is Age, the other Prime;
Up and down the hill our course is—
"Go in, ponies, make your time!"

Boyhood plies the whip of pleasure,
Youthful folly gives the stroke,
Manhood goads them at his leasure—
"Let 'em rip, they're tough as oak!"

"Hi, ha, there! the stakes we'll pocket;
To the winds let care be sent;
Time 2:40, whip in socket—
Give 'em string, let 'em went!"

On the sunny side of fifty
Prime is drowned in Lethe's stream;
Age is left, old and unthrifty—
Life then, proves "a one horse team,"

Age jogs on, grows quite unsteady,
Reels and slackens in his pace;
"Kicks the bucket," always ready,
"Gives it up"—Death wins the race!

A Gift by the Way-Side.

The old farm house clock had just struck seven, and over all the hills the purple vapors of twiliget were coming down, waking spicy odors among the sweet fern in the pastures and the blue wild grapes ripening in the woods, while the whip-poor will sang sadly on the mossy rails of the broken down fence that skirted the ravine, and the katy-dids chirpped shrilly through the morning-glory leaves above the window!

'Seven o'clock!' echoed Silas Miller, just as though he had not been watching that slow creeping minute hand for the last half hour. "He will soon be here now—my boy will soon be here!"

What a strange softening of the rugged features, what an unwonted quiver of the harsh voice there was, when he uttered the two simple words "My boy!" Yes, it was his boy who was coming back from the smoke of half a dozen battle field; no wonder that the thought sent a thrill through his iron nature. His soldier—his hero!

"Surely I ought to hear the stage horn" he said, feverishly pacing up or down the narrow path, where the maple leaves lay like a carpet of pale gold. "Listen, Sybil, don't you hear it?'

"It's too early yet, father."

The light figure came stealing out to his side and both together leaned over the garden gate, gazing into the opal gloom of twilight with wistful, searching gaze.

She was not pretier than many another New England girl yet there was a delicate type of beauty in her face and form that belongs as much to the frozen North, as its pine forests and rifts of eternal snow. Pale brown hair, with auburnt lights crossing its surface at times, eyes like the blue larkspur, and lips that had stolen the dewy crimson of a wild rose; in pearls and blue crape. Sybil Miller would have been a beauty; in her dress of gray gingham she was something far better and nobler.

Suddenly the old man started, and uttered an indistinct, glad cry.

"It's he, Sybil; don't you see, beyond the elder bushes! Child, don't hold me back; let me go and meet my boy!"

"No, father, you are mistaken; it is not Laurence; Laurence is shorter by half a head, and that is not his quick, and buick, and buoyant step!

"You're right, Sybil, said Silas Miller almost petulently. Why do these vagrant soldiers go wandering by, giving honest folks such a start?"

"I suppose he did not know we were watching for Laurence," said Sybil, half smiling in the dusk.

'It was only this morning that a beggar, disgracing—I won't say wearing—the United States uniform, came by and had the audacity to ask me for money."

"Did you give him something?"

"Give him something?" repeated Silas, angrily. "I'd have him starving first!—I have no patience with these strolling beggers. Here's another specimen of the kind I suppose. No my man you need not trouble yourself to recite your pitiful story.'

For the tall figure with halting step and coat thickly powdered with dust, had paused in front of the gate, and Sybil could just discern dark piercing eyes, and a forehead curiously traversed by a crescent shaped scar, apparently newly healed.

"I have nothing for you," said Silas, sharply, "Yes, yes I know what you would say, but it's no use. If you are deserving the proper authorities will take care of you and if you are not the county jail is the best place for you. Don't tell me about want; what have you done with your bounty money and your pay, if you are what you pretend to be—a soldier?"

Even through the twilight Sybil could see a scarlet flush rising to the scarred forehead.

"Sir, you are mistaken. I did not beg.'

"No, you'll prefer to play the bully, I've no doubt. But I'm not a proper subject for you so be about your business my man.'

The soldier turned silently away, with a step more halting perhaps and a head more depressed, and passed slowly away into the gathering dusk.

"Father," whispered Sybil, reproachfully, "had you forgotton that our Laurence too is a soldier?"

"No," returned Silas, abruptly. 'I remembered it, and it convinced me all the more that a man paid and pensioned like our Laurence, has no need to beg on the public highways."

"But, father, he did not beg."

"Becouse I would not allow it child.—I pay taxes for the support of such as he, and I swear I will do no more!"

Footsore and weary, the travel worn pedestrian had set himself down on a mossy boulder by the roadside when a quick, light foot-step came up a little by path, leading from the back door of the farm home, through blackberry pastures, and mownfields, and a slight figure bent above him.

"Do not mind my father's words; he was angry and unreasonable," she said hurriedly. "I have little to give, but I want you to take it for the sake of my soldier brother."

Before he could speak she had unfastened from her neck a blue ribbon with a tiny gold piece suspended from it, placed it in his hand, and was gliding away across the fields like some little gray nun, in her sober hued dress.

He rose up, as if to follow and overtake her, but it was too late, and as he bent his head over the gleaming token something very like a tear dropped upon its circlet of tiny stars.

"And now tell us everything that has happened to you, Laurence? Oh, Laurence when I waked this morning it seemed all a dream that you had come back to us again in very truth.

The broad, handsome, sun burned soldier looked smilingly down into the radiant face that nestled against his shoulder and a serious shadow stole into his eyes.

"I can tell you Sybil, it came very near being nothing more than a dream once or twice. I have had more hair breadth escapes than you know of, little sister. I did not tell you did I, of that skirmish along the Potomac where I stood face to face with death, an ugly death too, at the point of rebel bayonets, when some brave fellow charged down on 'em and saved my life with his own right hand."

"Who was it, Laurence?" said old Silas, with trembling lip and dilated eyes. "I would give my best wheat field for a chance to grasp that right hand."

"I don't know—I never came across him again. Probably he was in some other regiment. All I know is that he had fiery black eyes, and an odd scar on his forehead, shapad exactly like a Moorish crescent."

"And a straight nose, a heavy black mustache?" interrupted his sister.

"Exactly."

"Father," said Sybil turning with sparkling and crimson cheek to where Silas Miller sat, "the wandering soldier whom you turned from your door last night was the man who saved our Laurence's life."

Silas rose up from his chair and took an uneasy turn across the room and back, his iron features working strangely.

"It can't be helped now," he said, in a tremulous voice; "but its the last soldier I'll ever send away with empty hands from this door. The man who saved our Laurence's life! Oh Sybil, if I had only listen to your words!"

But she never spoke of the little lucky piece of gold. She fancied it might seem like ostentation, this shy, fastidious little wild flower of the hill.

* * * * * * *

"My Sybil going to be married among the fine folks down in Boston! Well, I spose I might have expected it, and yet it does seem kind o' hard," soliquized Silas Miller, dropping the happy, timid letter in his lay, and looking out thro' diamond spectacles upon the snowy, sun bright hills I wonder who it is. I should like to see the man that's going to marry Sybil Miller

Silas would have been a proud man could he have beheld his pretty daughter that self same night in her evening dress, with geraniums lighting up her brown hair and glowing on her bosom. No wonder that Captain Lesslie's face brightened with grave quiet pride, as he looked down on his fair betrothed,

"Sit down here, dearest; in this quiet little music room," he said with caresing authority, I can't share your sweet eyes and sweeter words with the world any longer. I must have you all to myself for a while.

She looked up with a blushing smile, then down again.

"Well," he asked as if she had spoken.

"I was wondering, Allen—that scar on your forehead!"

"What of it?"

"Why it is such a singular shape—almost a halfcircle. I never saw but one like it before.

Did you not? And where was that?

"A poor soldier passed our gate once with just such a scar on his forehead, and,

She paused, for Allen Leslie had quietly taken from some inner receptable in his coat a tiny piece of gold with a narrow blue ribbon passed through it. He held it smilingly up.

"Do you know who gave this to me?"

"Gave it to you, Allen."

'To me, a footsore, weary wanderer, who had missed his way among your tangled roads You fancied me a deggar—it was not so. I had money, friends position yet I ssood sorely in need of a kind word just then, for my brain was throbbing, my limbs weary, my wounds scarce healed. That foot-march cost me a weary fever. Yet I do not regret it; for—'

He took her hand tenderly into his, and added.—

For although I might have known that my Sybil was beautiful, yet had it not been for that blue ribboned piece of gold, I never should have known how good and true she was.

Advice to Young Men.

A fair correspondent, who signs herself "A Martyr to Late Hours," sends us the following sensible advice to young men, with a request that it be published. We give place to it in our columns, merely saying the advice is very pertinent, and hope those whom it hits will profit by it.

Dear gentleman, between the age of eighteen and forty-five, listen to a few words of gratuitous remarks. When you make a social call of an evening, on a young lady, go away at an reasonable hour. Say you come at 8 o clock, an hour and a half is certainly as long as the most fascinating of you in conversation can, or rather ought to desire to use his charms. Two hours, indeed, can be pleasantly spent with music, chess or other games to lend variety; but kind sirs, by no means stay longer. Make shorter calls, and come oftener. A girl that is a sensible, true-hearted girl, will enjoy it better, and really value your acquaintance more.

Just conceive the agony of a girl who, well knowing the feelings of a father and mother upon the subject, hears the clock strike ten, and yet must sit on the edge of her chair, in mortal terror lest papa should put his oft repeated threat into execution, that of coming down and inviting the gentleman to breakfast. And we girls understand it all by experience and know what it is to dread the prognostic of displeasure. In such cases a sigh of relief generally accompanies the closing of the door behind the gallant, and one don't get over the feeling of trouble till safe in the arms of Morpheus. Even then sometimes the dreams are troubled with some phantom of an angry father, and distressed—for all parties—mother, and all because a young man will make longer calls than he ought to.

Now, young gentlemen friends, I will tell you what we girls will do. For an hour and a half we will be most irresistibly charming and fascinating; then, beware, monosyllable responses will be all you need expect, and if, when the limits shall have been passed a startling query shall be heard coming dawn stairs: "Isn't time to close up?" you must consider it a righteous punishment, and, taking your hat and depart, a sadder and it is to be hoped a wiser man. Do not get angry, but the next time you come be careful to keep within just bounds

We meant to rise early these pleasant mornings, and improve each shining hours, but when forced to be up at such unreasonable hours at night, exhausted nature will speak, and as a natural consequence, with the utmost speed in dressing, we can barely get down to breakfast to escape a reprimand from papa, who don't believe in beaux—and a mild reproving glance from mama, who understands a little better poor daughter's failings, but must still disprove outwardly to keep up appearance. And now, young men, think about these things, and don't throw down your paper with a pshaw—but remember the safe side of ten.

Never Trifle with Affection.

How often in this life are we inclined to trifle with those whose love is the dearest object of our existence. How often does foolish pride or a wicked desire to show our independence, tempt us to scorn the kind offices of our best friends. How often does the heart, turned against its idol by some real or fancied grievance, rebel all the advances, refuse to accept the explanations, or even the humiliating acknowledgment of an error committed by that idol, thinking, perhaps, that as it has humbled itself thus far it may be induced to creep in the dust before the virtuous(?) indignation of that self willed, stony heart. And how often does some little look or word of reproof, although we know well enough that it is intended only for our good, cause a coldness to arise between us and those who are everything to us, shutting out the bright sunlight from our minds, leaving us in darkness bordering on despair. Oh! who can live without love! Boast if you will, your independence; proud, haughty mortal; the time comes when you must see your folly, when you must acknowledge that help from others is not to be disdained, for possibly you might go sick; will not then kind words of sympathy and the soft hand that soothes your fevered brow, be acceptable? And perhaps you may be called to die, will not the hand that wipes the death damp from your brow, and closes your glazed eye, be a precious boon? Then scorn not affection, but seek after it early and late. Strive to so live that every one may prize your acquaintance.—Above all, do not keep at a distance from you those who would love you if they were permitted.

Breachy Cattle.

We are too apt to underate the intelligence of the domestic animals under our charge; and yet a moment's reflection should teach every farmer that cows, horses, sheep and pigs are very apt pupils; and most farmers or farmers' boys, are quite proficient in teaching them to do mischief. This we find many persons when turning stock into or out of pasture instead of letting down the bars, leave two or three of the lower rails in their place; and then by shouting or beating, perhaps force the animal to leap over.—This is capital training, the results of which are seen in the after disposition of the animals to try their powers of jumping, where a top rail happens to be off, and this accomplished, to set all fences at defiance, and make a descent upon the corn or grain field, as their inclination, ability, or hunger may prompt them.—Another good lesson is to open a gate but a little way, and then, as in the case of the bars, force the cattle forward and by threats and blows, compel them to pass through. The result of this teaching is shown in the determined spirit manifested by some cattle to make a forcible entry into the stable, yards and fields.

Wounded Soldiers.

In his report of the Chicamauga battles, B. F. Taylor records the following solemn, yet creditable fact: "If anybody thinks that when our men are stricken up on the field they fill the air with cries and groans, till it shivers with such evidence of agony, he greatly errs. An arm is shattered, leg carried away a bullet pierces the breast, and the soldier sinks down silently upon the ground, or creeps away if he can, without a murmur or complaint; falls as the sparrow falls, speechlessly, and like that sparrow, I earnestly believe, falls not without note by the father. The dying horse gives out his fearful utterance of almost human suffering, but the mangled rider is dumb. The crash of musketry, the crack of rifles, the roar of guns, the shriek of shells, the rebel whoop, the Federal cheer, and that indescribable undertone of grinding, rumbling, splintering sound make up the voices of the battle field."

☞ A story-appropos of our election is told of a Western candidate that came upon "a poor white man," who had a vote to give if he did have to do his own milking. The candidate, Jones, asked if he should hold the cow, which seemed to be uneasy, and the old man consenting very readily, he took her by the horns and held fast till the operation was done. 'Have you had Robison, (his rival,) round here lately?' he asked. "Oh yes. He's behind the barn, holding the calf!"

Sharp Reply.

Ministers get joked sometimes, as well as other people. Witness the following: A minister was traveling where the road was hard to find, and he requested a man by the wayside to direct him, naming the place where he wished to go.

"Well," says the ledger, "keep on just as you are now going, about a mile and a half; there at the cross-roads you will see a minister, who will direct you to the left a couple of miles, and there at the forks of the road is another minister, who will direct you to the right about three miles, and so on; at every fork of the road is a minister to inform you which road to take."

'Ah; what do you call ministers?' asked the parson.

"Why," says the other, "those things that stand up at the forks and crosses of the road, with something like a hand on them.

"Finger-boards you mean; but why do you call them ministers?" asked the parson.

"Because they are always pointing the way to other people, but never go themselves."

The parson was satisfied.

Not Guilty.

A man named Josh was brought before a country squire for stealing a hog, and three witnesses being examined swore they saw him steal it. A wag having volunteered as counsel for Josh, knowing the scope of the squire's brain, arose and addressed him as follows:

"May it please your Honor I can establish the man's honesty beyond the shadow of a doubt, for I have twelve witnesses ready to swear that they did not see him steal it."

The squire rested his head for a few moments on his hand, as if in deep thought, and with great dignity arose and brushing back his hair, said:

"If there are twelve men who did not see him steal it, and only three who did, I discharge the prisoner."

Michigan Relief Association.

Hon. J. W. Edmunds has forwarded to us the report of Mrs. E. Brainard, dated Washington, Nov. 1st, in relation to her labors among the Michigan soldiers in the hospital, at Gettysburg. This lady for the past three months has devoted herself assiduously to the wants of our sick soldiers, and without doubt has been the means of preserving many from a death to which negligence and inattention would have speedily brought them. Mrs. B's report states that during the early part of her stay at Gettysburg, the hospital affairs were in a very confused state. The soldiers had been deprived of their just dues in order to liquidate a debt, of $2,000 which had been contracted for the hospital; through mismanagement, and through negligence on the part of some one the sick were rapidly going into decline. On the 8th of September, however, a reformation took place. Those who were able were removed to other places, the different hospitals were consolidated into a general hospital, and the number of patients reduced to about 400 those remaining being the worst cases. At present there are only 21 Michigan men in that hospital, and but three of these require particular attention. There have been but six deaths of Michigan men since Mrs. Brainard's last report. She speaks in most glowing terms of the hospital at York, considering it the best regulated one she ever visited. Fifty Michigan men were confined at that place, and all, with the exception of three, were able to sit up part of the time. The paymaster had visited them the previous day, and some of them received their pay for the first time in six months.

In addition to the stores taken from Washington her report states that large supplies had been received from New York and that about $500 in cash had been distributed during her stay at Gettysburg. Mrs. Brainard concludes her report by saying: "I believe I have acted for the best interests of the brave defenders of our nation's honor, and as far as possible have endeavored to carry out the wishes of those that employed me. If in some points I have failed I shall be glad to receive instruction."

How Morgan Escaped.

A Columbus dispatch says that Col. Dick Morgan, and the six Captains who were confined in the lower range of cells, had, by means of two small knives, dug through the floor of their cells, which is composed of cement and brick-work.—Underneath the cells is an air chamber, extending the whole length of the building. Of this fact the prisoners seem to have been aware. Once in the air-chamber, one of them could crawl to its terminus and dig down in the soft earth with their knives until the bottom of the foundation of the wall was reached; then, digging out under, the thing was completed. Meanwhile, ropes had been manufactured of the bed-ticking, and all arrangements were complete for their final escape. Everything being in readiness only a little strategy was necessary for the escape. Everything being in readiness only a little strategy was necessary for the escape of Gen. Morgan. He occupied a cell on the second range, just over the one occupied by his brother Dick.

On Friday evening, as the prisoners were being locked up for the night, the Morgans were allowed to exchange cells with each other. After Dick had seen everything prepared, he permitted his brother John to take his place. Some time during the night the prisoners crawled through the hole they had dug under the wall, but had skillfully concealed, taking their rope with them. They escaped from the prison immediately between the main building and the female department. Once in the yard, and their escape was comparatively easy. They went to the south-west corner of the outer wall, near the big gate, and threw their rope over the top, where it secured itself on one of the spikes. On this rope, and by the aid of some timbers near at hand, they clambered to the top, and easily descended on the outside. There are no guards on the outer walls after a certain hour. The prisoners were dressed in citizens' clothes and not in prison habiliments.

Capt. Hines, who is a mason and bricklayer, seems to have had charge of the work which resulted in the escape of the prisoners.

A note was left for the Warden of the prison, of which the following is a copy:

"CASTLE MERION, CELL No. 20, Nov. 27th, 1863.—Commencement, Nov. 4th, 1863. Conclusion, Nov. 20th, 1863.—Number of hours for labor per day, 3.—Tools, 2 small knives.

Recruiting and Exemptions.

Under the late order of the War Department, a great portion of the difficulty experienced in examining drafted men is expected to obviated. When the enrollments of each sub-district is corrected, the names are to be printed in alphabetical order and posted up in at least five different places, in each town, and if there are any names thereon that should not be enrolled by reason of alienage, non-residence, unsuitableness of age, or manifest permanent physical disability, those persons, upon substantiating their claims for exemption conclusively to the Board of enrollment, can have their names erased. This arrangement will make the of examination after the draft is make, comparatively light, and will be the means of placing the men in the field at an earlier day than at present. Under the new orders issued by our State authorities, every man is made a recruiting officer. For every recruit presented to the headquarters of the Provost Marshal of each Congressional District, and accepted, $15 is paid to the person so presenting him, and $25 is paid to every accepted recruit who has served at least nine months in the U. S. army. Such favorable inducements as the above, together with the extraordinary large State and Goverment bounties, ought not to fail to fill up the quota without a resort to draft.

The News.

From Knoxville we have reports of more fihting, and also of a charge made by a detachment of the 2d Michigan upon the rebel rifle pits, 500 yards from our works. At first this charge was successful, but the rebels being superior in numbers, our Michigan boys were driven back with heavy loss. Among the killed are mentioned the names of Adjutant Noble and Lieut. Halpin, of the 2d, Major Byington being taken prisoner. The death of Lieut. Col. McCormick, of the 17th, is also announced. At a late hour last night intelligence was received by way of Cincinnati that a severe fight had taken place, resulting in the defeat of the rebels with the loss of 500 prisoners, said to be Wheeler's division. Further particulars will be received soon.

The reports received a few days since, stating that the rebels were making extensive preparations to obstruct the navigation of the Mississippi, seem to have had some foundation in fact. We now have reports of boats being fired into by rebel batteries at various points on the river, in one instance involving the loss of several lives.

The President at Gettysburg,

At the dedication of the National Cemetery at Gettysburg, on the 19th inst., the number assembled was between forty and fifty thousand. At the conclusion of the oration by Hon. Edward Everett, the Marshal introduced President Lincoln, who spoke as follows after the immense applause had subsided:

"Four score and seven years ago our fathers established upon this continent a government subscribed in liberty and dedicated to the fundamental principle that all mankind are created equal by a good God. (Applause.) And now we are engaged in a great contest; contesting the question whether this nation—any nation—so conceived, so dedicated, can long remain. We are met on a great battle-field of the war; we are met here to dedicate a portion of that field as the final resting place of those who have given their lives that the nation might live. It is altogether fitting and proper that we should do this; but in a large sense we cannot consecrate, we cannot hallow this ground. The brave men, living and dead who struggled here have consecrated it far above our poor power to add or to detract. (Great applause.) The work we will little heed. Let us long remember what we say here. (Immense Applause.) It is for us, rather, the living, to be dedicated here to the unfinished work that they have so nobly carried forward.—(Great Applause.) It is rather for us here to be dedicated to the task before us; for us to renew devotion to that cause for which they gave the full measure of their devotion; then let us resolve that what they have done shall not have been done in vain; that the nation shall, under God, have a new birth of Freedom; and the Government of the People founded by the people, shall not perish."

☞A stranger in a printing office asked the youngest apprentice what his rule of punctuation was. "I set up as long as I can hold my breath, then I put in a comma; when I gape I insert a semicolon; and when I want a chew of tobacco, I make a paragraph."

Down the Mississippi.

A correspondent of the Chicago Tribune says that Memphis is intensely secession, even though the American flag flies from the Custom House, denoting the opening of trade. Trade is tainted with secession; social life is filled with it and even religion has its share. A more stringent policy will have to be adopted before quiet and peace exists. One great truth is evident; we fraternize too much with the secession doctrine, and mingle too freely in its sentiments, forgetting in our kindness and willingnese to forgive our brethren in arms against the Government, that forbearance ceaces to be a virtue. Were we to exercise the same bitterness of opinion—the same fierceness of hate that the secessionists exercise towards us, this rebellion would be more equally quelled; and I fear that the fact of retaliation will have to be exercised on our part before we can succeed.

From Island No. 16 to the mouth of White River, Arkansas, the guerrillas are in great force, ready to attack all trancient steamers, only deterred occasionally by the gunboats. Seven new gunboats will soon be on their way to these localities, and then our commerce will be more protected. At Helena, Gen. Buford is also playing guerrilla with his forces, so that you see that two can play at that game. The ironclad fleet of Admiral Porter watches closely these rebel hordes and send their storm of iron hail and leaden rain, occasionally to the terror of the few inhabitants who remain. Bloodhounds baying in the woods, their savage cries reverberating through the cypress swamps of Louisana, denote the latest method of conscription in the Southern armies.

Baton Rouge still contains the same Frenchified character it maintained before the rebellion. Its beautiful State House, whose outlines still preserve their symmetry and grace, is within a mere shell, bearing marks of fire and destruction. A shell from the Essex has marred the beauty of the northeast tower, but the green grass and shrubbery which surround it, with the fine enclosure untouched by the hand of war, rendered it interesting even in its desolation. Further within the city the traces of the battle storm have left their impress upon private residences, and even the church has suffered. The Harney House, once the leading hotel, and now a contraband depot, bears the marks of a solid shot near the roof, on the side fronting the river.

Benjamin, the ubiquitous Benjamin, and brother of the rebel Israelitish Secretary, has at last returned to his old haunts.—He formerly was in the wholesale liquor trade, and dispensed liquors and cigars on the first floor of a large house, and making money. He is now in the retail business, judging from the numerous visits which he daily pays to the coffee-houses of Baton Rouge. He insinuates himself into the affections of our Union officers by strongly protesting his Unionism, but all this time he is like the snake in the grass, and I judge from the late excursions of the rebels in the vicinity of the capitol, that the cunning and trickery of this same Benjamin has had the effect of the closing of the lines by Gen. Cooke.

A Bankrupt Law.

The Worlds' Washington correspondent says that a resolute movement will be made this session for the passage by Congress of a general bankrupt law. The attempts to this end at the last session amounting to but little. A considerable fund according to report, was raised to pay such expenses as might be incurred in forwarding the bill, but the money must have fallen into poor hands, as little or none of it was used for the purpose which the contributors had in view. Even the chairman of the special committee on the subject was left to import at his own cost the foreign books which he found it necessary to consult in preparing the bill. The story was rife at the close of the last session, that Mr. Stewart, the eminent dry-goods merchant in New York, had taken some pains to prevent Congressional action on the subject of a bankrupt law. No motive for such conduct on the part of Mr. Stewart was obvious. It has since been stated in Washington, however, that Mr. Stewart was the holder of a large amount of paper of Claflin Mellen & Co., his leading rivals in the dry goods trade, and that possibly he desired to defeat the passage of a bankrupt law, and thus prevent the escape of debtors who were at the same time his rivals. In the meantime, however, it is understood that the business of Messas. Claflin & Co., has been so profitable that they have made money enough not only to pay up their former liabilities, but also to amass greater wealth than they formerly possessed.—Hence this imputed motive of Mr. Stewart for opposing the bankrupt law vanishes.

NEW YORK, Dec. 1.—The Tribune has a special dated Knoxville, Saturday, from Cumberland Gap, Monday, which says:—We are now in the twelfth day of the seige, and the enemy has gained no advantage. We are better prepared for an attack than the most sanguine expected. Longstreet is delaying for reinforcements from Virginia.

The enemy made a diversion on Wednesday upon our position over the river but after an hour's fight were driven back.

On Tuesday a detachment of the 2nd Michigan mode a gallant charge and captured a rebel rifle pit within 500 yards of our works, but were subsequently compelled to give way to a superior force with great loss.

Major Boyington was taken prisoner and Adjutant Noble and Lieut. Halpin were killed. Lieut. Col. Cormick, of the 17th Michigan, died on Friday from wounds.

It has been comparatively quiet for the past two days.

FACTS ABOUT RAILROAD SPEED.—A railroad car moves about seventy four feet, or nearly twice its own length in a second. At this velocity the locomotive driving wheel, six feet in diameter, makes four revolutions in a second, the piston rod thus traversing the cylinder eight times. If a horse and carriage should approach and cross the track at the rate of six miles an hour, an express train approaching at the same moment would move toward it two hundred and fifty-seven feet while in the act of crossing; if the horse moved no faster than a walk, the train would move toward it more than five hundred feet, which fact accounts for the many accidents at such points. When the locomotive whistle is opened at the post eighty rods from the crossing, the train will advance near one hundred feet before the sound of the whistle traverses the distance to, and is heard at the crossing.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS. Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,

MONEY EASILY MADE,
By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE

OF

Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 160 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 150 acres mostly well timbered, one mile west of the above 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store

War Notice.

It is very important that all persons who have subscribed for the Bounty Fund and have not paid should do so at once, to one of the committee or to L. E. The Falling Leaf.

Now withered leaves, borne gently on the breeze,
Waving descend, and quit the fading trees;
When twelve long months have rolled their steady round,
Leaves yet unsprung like these will strew the ground.
And so we find it with the human race,
One quits the stage another takes his place;
This, in his turn, as quick shifts from the scene,
And leaves no trace that he has ever been,
For human life is but a fleeting hour,
Or as in sunshine plays the gossamer.

☞ Wood Wanted.

☞ J. D. Robbins has just received the largest and best assortment of Christmas Toys ever brought into this town.

☞ By order of Superintendent Porter of the Southern Road, trains were discontinued on the Three Rivers branch, on Tuesday last.

MARRIED—In Ridgeway, Nov. 25th, by Peter Sharp, Esq., Mr. Silas N. W. Benson, of LaPorte Co. Ind., to Miss Marion Rankin, of Monroe Co. Mich.

☞ New at Ketcham's Leslies Lady's Magazine for December, Dime Comic Speaker, Ledger, Mercury, Weekly and all other papers of current dates.

☞ Jones says the warmest reception he ever received from his lady love was when he presented her with a set of Furs. We are not prepared to recommend Jones' philosophy, but would simply state that A. Hood & Co. keeps the Furs.—Their assortment is large and beautiful.

☞ We have heard of people asking for bread and receiving a stone. We should consider ourselves much worse treated, after asking for Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus, to have some other kind palmed off on us. We state this that our readers may enjoy the same pleasure we have, viz: to eat a better biscuit than was ever made with any other Saleratus or soda. Most of the merchants have it for sale. See that the name of Herrick Allen is on the wrapper, and no mistake can occur.

☞ At a war meeting held in Ridgeway, on the evening of the 27th Nov. after an able and appropriate address by Hon. C. A. Stacy, and some explanatory remarks by Justus Lowe, Supervisor, the meeting resolved to approve the raising of $150 for each volunteer or drafted man duly credited to said township. Whereupon John F. Temple was elected committee to receive the money, and $2,550 were subscribed as a loan to the town.—A special town meeting is to be held on Tuesday Dec. 1st on the question of refunding the bounty. Considerable interest is apparent relative to the result and a full vote is likely to be cast.

Special Town Meetings.

At a special Town Meeting held in this village on Friday, Nov. 27th, the vote was as follows:

For refunding the bounty, 395
Against refunding the bounty, 7

At a special Town Meeting held in Ridgeway, Dec. 1st, the vote was as follows:

For refunding the bounty, 87
Against refunding the bounty, 62

The sum voted for in Ridgeway was sixteen hundred dollars.

☞ The earnings of the Southern Road for the third week of November were $75,590, an increase of $11,859 over the same week, last year.

☞ William A. Whitney, of Hudson Lenawee county, has been appointed by the Post Office department, Route Agent on the Michigan Southern and Northern Indiana Railroad, vice Mr. Gage, disabled.

☞ Vicksburg cannot, after all, be a very forbidding place to live in. At latest accounts the weather was delightful bowers blooming, and ladies find parasols necessary to comfort.

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemen's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages:
Put on your sixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good:
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has busted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

DR. ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS ARE NOT TO BE EXCELLED AS A STOMACHIC OR REGULATOR OF THE DIGESTIVE ORGANS.

These Bitters

are not offered to the public as a medicine which will cure all the "ills which flesh is heir to," but as a remedial agent—a great regulator of the system.

In the Bilious districts of the West and South, there has, for a long time, been much needed an article of Stomach Bitters, which, if taken in proper quantities, and at the proper time, are a sure preventive of

Bilious Fever,
Fever and Ague,
Liver Complaint,
Dyspepsia,
Indigestion,
Jaundice,
Kidney Complaints,

and all diseases of a similar nature.

These Bitters

are composed of rare and powerful roots and herbs, which make them

Highly Tonic.

Dr. Roback's Stomach Bitters are the poor man's friend.

Dr. Roback's Stomach Bitters save the poor man many Doctor's Bills.

Dr. Roback's Stomach Bitters are the rich man's Solace and Comfort.

Dr. Roback's Stomach Bitters invigorate the weak and debilitated.

Dr. Roback's Stomach Bitters drive away melancholy and make Life enjoyable.

Dr. Roback's Stomach Bitters are the Soldier's Friend, by preventing Diarrhea, Dysentery, Rheumatism, etc.

These Bitters are put up in quart bottles, of which the above is a facsimile. The label is finely engraved, and is provided with a safe-guard from counterfeiters. Price $1 per bottle, or six for $5.

OUR PEOPLE AT HOME

Are now offered an opportunity by which they can obtain a GOOD AND DURABLE TIME-PIECE,

AT A

VERY LOW FIGURE.

OUR WATCHES ARE ALL WARRANTED TO KEEP TIME ONE YEAR,

AND THE BUYER IS ALLOWED THE

PRIVILEGE OF EXAMINATION,

BEFORE PAYMENT IS REQUIRED.

IMPROVED DUPLEX RUBY ACTION,

A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faithful that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. IMPROVED DUPLEX FULL RUBY ACTION, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants, and persons traveling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING LEVERS.

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our IMPROVED DUPLEX, and superior adjusted movements with 'Stop,' to be used in timing horses, etc; has FULL RUBY ACTION, for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second, and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to express agent when the goods are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers and other parties in the loyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make the deduction of two dollars on either watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. These Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the atmosphere in the sickroom, and expel the infection which makes disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and checked its natural functions, these, of all others, act upon themselves and the surrounding organs producing general regeneration, subduing and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangement, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly the healing power of the system, aided by the antagonist feeling of health begins. What follows appears to be this trivial and common complaint is also true in many of the desperate and dangerous diseases. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by slight perversions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are prolific, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. Some who know the virtues of these Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering under the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of disease fastened upon her lungs and she is that indeed, scarcely for years. Her mother has been long afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

A. M. MCPHERSON.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New-York.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellence [illegible] They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Head-ache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Bond, Baltimore.

DEAR BRO. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaint I have cured with your Pills better than to say Philip never treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on your Cathartic, in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

From Dr. Chas. Phillips, Professor, Pa. May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. FRIEBLE, Clerk of Steamer Citizen.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Hall, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the liver are very marked. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints, bilious fevers, and jaundice than any other medicine. I especially rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy our confidence in the treatment of the diseases of the liver, so common and so fatal in our climate.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C. 7th Feb. 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of biliousdiarrhœa so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhea, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago:

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their mild operation makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in sickness. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 25, 1855.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of life.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Member I. Council.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitude who suffer from that complaint, which although bad enough in itself, is the parent of others that are worse. I believe illness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect the organ and cure the disease.

From Dr. A. Stuart, Physician and Chemist, Belmont.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent preventatives of the intermittent stage, wholly or partially suppress it, and also are especially adapted to the stomach and bowels. They are now much the best physic we have that I recommend, to others as my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawks, of the Episcopal Church, N. Y.

EUREKA HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 8, 1856.

WORTHY SIR: I should be remiss in duty for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not let it my case be known. I had a dreadful fit on me Boxing Day, in consequence of a severe cold, which ended in a chronic cough. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians the disease grew worse and worse until by the advice of your excellent agent in Savannah, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your pills. Their effects were slow, but sure, by persevering in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

Respectfully, ELIPHALET CRANSON, Baton Rouge, La., 6 Dec. 1855.

DR. AYER: I believe I am entirely relieved by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a popular pill, from the dreadful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced the fresh selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price naked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the Tea buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of Tea, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and rares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS SEWING Machine is the best for use, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals and also under all circumstances to survive the washtub.

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, and he balance wheel is free from all jar.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"Machine in the opinion of the committee, more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agriculture Society's Report.

"We must in justice express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it in proving beyond doubt that two threads are not always supposed necessarily to be used.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have seen in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has in so short a time required such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

for exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Little Flora.

Is there laughter in the parlor?
Are there footsteps in the hall?
Does my eye grow brighter,
As I hear a childish call?
There's no laughter in the parlor,
And in the hall no tread,
And my eyes are dim with weeping,
For my little girl is dead!

Like a phantom in the gloaming
The misty rain flits by,
And the night wind in its moaning,
But mock me as I sigh.
At the thought she is not near me
What bitter tears I shed?
I have altered much I fear me,
Since my little girl is dead!

In the church yard they have laid her,
With a rose bush at her feet,
That, I half believe will blossom
Through all the snow and sleet!
Twas three months since; and 3 years old
May on the stone be read;
And yet it seems but yesterday
They told me she was dead!

Her face was like an angel's
And her eyes were like the stars;
And she comes to me in visions
Adown yon shining bars!
She is singing by Life's river
With a crown upon her head—
Then, why should I be sorry
That my little girl is dead?

The Poisoned Almond.

BY WILLIAM HENRY PECK.

The vaunting hosts of England had fled smitten and shattered, from the fatal rifles of the Americans, blazing under the eagle eye of the immortal Andrew Jackson, and the glad tidings had leaped from the red field of battle to the anxious hearts of the citizens of New Orleans; and as night came down upon the rescued city, the glare of huge bon-fires, the flushing of dancing torches and the glitter of innumerable lamps, with jubilant shouts, cries, and exultant laughter, that met eye and ear at every turn, betokened the victor's triumph. The humble home of the artisan and the proud mansion of the rich alike shone with the light, and resounded with sounds of joy. But no home was so gay and resplendent as that of the wealthy and hospitable Robert Dainemert; whose twin-born sons had that day, and ever since landing of the foe, been foremost in the battle, and who were now fresh from victory to see their only sister wedded to William Avern, a young and distinguished captain of the Tennessee rifles. Long before Packenham gave his soldiers the bandit watchword of "Booty and Beauty," William Alvern and Clara Dainemert had pledged their vows; and their loves having gained the willing consent of Gen. Dainemert, the day that should see them united had been fixed upon. and that day was the 8th of January, though when the time was appointed, none dreamed that it was to be a day of battle. Honored and unscathed the young Tennessean had ridden from the field as the enemy turned in defeat and dismay, and with old, white-haired Dainemert and his warrior boys, had hastened to bear the happy news to mother, sister, and betrothed.

"She shall be yours this night, my dear William," said the old general, as they drew rein before his house on Toulouse street. "What happier date for a marriage anniversary than that which shall be a nation's pride. Ha! the good news is before us," he continued, as his wife and daughter sprang from the house to greet them.

"Thank Heaven you have all returned safe in life and limb," was the exclamation of the wife and mother, as she embraced her husband and sons.

"Thank the God of battles that he has given our country the victory!" was the response of the stout old patriot, who had seen the same foe flying from the muskets that rattled along Bunker Hill many years before the lovers spoke not a word, but the beaming of their eyes spoke volumes of mutual happiness.

But if the joy of the lovers found no tongue, the clamorous and hearty shouts of chon-visaged servants, clustering around with eager faces, that shone in the torch-light, made ample amends.

"I have a promise to fulfill," said the general, "and we must invite our friends as fast as legs can carry messages. Wm. is to wed Clara this night. Come, wife, you are nimble with he pen—run, write to those who stand upon etiquette, and hurry verbal invitations to the rest.—Send for your bride-maids, Clara, my sons shall be your grooms-men, William. I would that your father were alive to see this happy day—but he fell like a patriot at Lundy's Lane, as did your grandfather at Monmouth. You spring from a race of soldiers, my dear boy, and this campaign has proved you worthy of your descent."

This was spoken as the general led the way into his parlor, and every word was heard by a dark faced and haughty young man, who rose from a sofa as they entered.

"Well, nephew, we won the fight, and Huron St. Maur was not there," said the general with a severe glance as the young man met his eye.

"Huron St. Maur when taken prisoner at Detroit," replied his nephew, "pledged his word not to bear arms against England during this war. But my heart was with you all, Uncle."

"If I had been at Detroit," retorted the old patriot, "Hull had died by my hand before he should have disgaaced the name he won in the Revolution; and if I had been Huron St. Maur I'd remained a captive rather that accept liberty with my sword in limbo. But make ready, my boys, for the wedding. Be happy while you can, for the Briton is a tough dog, and may give us another bait before the week is out."

So saying, the noble old soldier hastened to change his dress and scatter his orders, while his sons with William Alvern hurried to their appartments to exchange their war-stained for garments benefitting the occasion.

Huron St. Maur, a coward in heart villain in mind, had, as he said, given his parole at Detroit—given it before the dotard Hull disgraced the American arms, with a bloodless surrender, to an inferior force; for Huron St. Maur was a traitor as well as a paltroon. He had long loved his cousin Clara, both for the wealth that would be hers, and for her lovely person. He was a son of the general's youngest sister, and his father had been a French officer, who served under La Fayette.—Both father and mother sprang from a brave and warlike line, but the son had inherited none of their nobler traits. A shrewd schemer, a cowardly plotter, and a selfish, unscrupulous man, Huron St. Maur had lived thirty years, and not done one worthy deed The name and influence of his uncle had obtained for him a captain's commission, but the tap of the drum, and the fume of gun-powder always drove his watery blood from his cheeks. Glad to forsake the field for the carpet, he had returned to his uncle's to push his suit for the heart and hand of Clara Dainemert. But he met blank repulse, for both were already pledged to the brave and handsome William Alvern, a young man of noble character, good descent and rising fame. Had he dared, Huron St. Maur would have fought his rival, for the prize, but his craven soul instinctively shrank from a combat with the young Tennessean. St. Maur had already enough wealth to content any but a mercenary spirit, but grasping eagerly for more and infatuated with the beauty of his cousin, he would have sold his salvation to call her and her fortune his own.

When left by his uncle in the parlor, as I have related, he hurried from the house with a throbbing heart and burning brain. He had not dreamed that the marriage was to be so sudden, and all that day he had prayed to the evil spirits he worshipped to guide lead and steel to the heart of his rival. Now he saw him returned triumphant—a victor and a bridegroom. He hastened to do what his wicked mind had long been plotting. Ere many minutes had passed he stood in the private office of an Italian apothecary and chemist, a dastard who would have taken a thousand human lives, for as many gold pieces, if no danger of detection should menace him; a lean and withered old miser, who looked upon all mankind as so many vermin, deeming gold the only valuable thing on earth. so said report, and Huron believed it. Who can explain the insanity of such avearice, for Carlo Berbi made no use of his wealth, save to gloat over it in grim solitude.

"I have come for the almond," said Huron, as the chemist raised his small black eyes to his.

"Have you brought the price, young man?"

Huron threw a purse upon the table.—Carlo counted out the yellow coins, one by one, trying the weight and ring of each, until he had numbered a hundred.

"Right," said he, as he swept them into his pouch, and stowed that in his bosom. "I only wish I could sell a sack of double almonds at that price—$500 a nut!"

Carlo Berbi then produced a large almond, nearly halved, and containing twin kernels, one of which was chipped at each end.

"Whoever swallows this; said the Italian, holding up the marked almond does himself no harm; but I would not be he who shall eat the other. Do not make a mistake."

"Never fear," said Huron, as the chemist glued the halves nicely together.—"But how long does it take to effect its purpose?"

"Three hours—and leaves no trace, my young friend. You ordered this to be made ready three weeks ago, and you have not called for it I began to think your courage had failed."

"The time had not arrived," said Huron, as he placed the almond in his vest. "But tell me, old man, have we not met before?"

"Where? until three weeks since?"

"In Italy, where I lived some years ago. There is an air—a tone in your voice that reminds me of some one I once knew in Rome," said Huron.

"Ah! I had a relative there; perhaps you knew her," said Carlo, gazing sharply into his face. "She was very beautiful, all said, and her name was Bianca, the Flower Girl."

Huron St. Maur grew ashy pale; but in a moment he replied:

"I have seen her—what has become of her?"

"She is dead! She gave her love to some young and heartless villain. He deserted her; and she died some twelve months or so ago. The destroyer of her young life was a German count, I have heard. He had left Rome three or four years before Bianca died in my arms. I wish I could find the scoundrel. So long as Bianca lived she blessed him; but now that she is no more, I think that I would give all my gold to take an Italian's vengeance."

"And justly, too," said Huron—"the reprobate! Well, good night."

"Good night, my young friend, Do not eat the unmarked almond."

"Not I indeed," laughed the heartless Huron, as he turned and sped rapidly away.

When he again stood in his uncle's house it was thronged with guests, among whom he soon was scattering jest and compliment.

"Ha!" said his old uncle, as he met him near the centre of the main parlor, "you are a laggard again. Absent from the field, and tardy at the wedding. Wm. and Clara became man and wife just five minutes since."

"I claim a kiss from the bride," said Huron, as he saluted the new-made wife, and then grasped the hand of the happy husband.

"I wish you a hundred years of mutual joy, Cousin Clara—and you, too, Wm." said he with smiling lips and devil's heart; and all that jubilant evening—who so gay as Huron St. Maur?

At length the festive time came on, and sparkling wine and wit, over frosted cake and dainty viands, ruled the hour. Then said Huron St. Maur, as he filled a plate with almonds:

"Come, Cousin Will—since we are newly-made kinsmen, eat a philopœna with me; and who loses shall forfeit to the bride."

"Agreed," laughed the joyous bridegroom. Seek a double almond."

"Ah! I am sure I have one here," said Huron, breaking the almond for which he had paid in gold. "This yours—now! we eat together and forfeit singly."

All unsuspecting the gallant warrior, nearer death than when British bullets had fanned his manly cheek that morn, ate the unmarked almond kernel, while the Judas betraying with a kiss, half unconscious of the act, so fierce were the guilty throbbings of his heart, swallowed the other kernel.

Two hours after, when Huron stood aloof watching the bride and her spouse as they moved in grace and joy in the lively dance, a servant approached and told him some one wished to see him at the street door. Huron impatiently followed the call, for he hoped to see that handsome face grow deadly pale, that manly form relaxed in sudden death, and to hear the crash of his rival's fall at the very feet of his blooming, blushing bride. He found Carlo Berbi at the door.

"You did not eat the unmarked kernel?" asked the old Italian, eagerly.

"No—I ate the one chipped at the ends," replied the traitor.

"It is well," said Carlo. "Now go read this," and as he spoke, he placed a billet in Huron's hand, and hurried away.

Carelessly, for his mind was upon the bridegroom, Huron St. Maur opened the note as he entered the parlors again, and read these words:

"With her last breath Bianca told me the name of her destroyer. She knew not what she told, for delirium ruled her speech. She said the true name of the pretended German Count was Huron St. Maur, of New Orleans. I sought that villain—I found him in you—your likeness so long worn upon the bosom of Bianca, guided me in my search—Bianca is avenged, for Huron St. Maur shall not live to see to-morrow's sun. He has swallowed the poisoned almond!

BIANCA'S FATHER."

How pale, how ghastly looked Huron St. Maur then! What sight so pitiable as the traitor strangled by his own treachery. He said not a word. He fled to the house of the chemist; the door was barred, he clamored in vain. When the next day came, the corpse of Huron St. Maur, lay cold and stark upon the ground, and the letter the icy hand grasped, revealed the mystery.

Bianca's father was never seen more in the Crescent City. His task was done.

Keep your eye on your Neighbors.

Take care of them Do not let them stir without watching. They may do something wrong, if you do. To be sure you never knew them to do anything very bad, but it may be on your account they have not. Perhaps if it had not been for your kind care, they might have disgraced themselves and families a long time ago. Therefore do not relax any effort to keep them where they ought to be; never mind your own business, that will take care of itself. There is a man passing along—he is looking over the fence—be suspicious of him; perhaps he contemplates stealing something, some of these dark nights; there is no knowing what queer fancies he may have got into his head. If you find any symptoms of any one passing out of the path of duty, tell every one else that you can see, and be particular to see a great many. It is a good way to circulate such things, though it may not benefit yourself or any one else particularly. Do keep something going—silence is a dreadful thing, though it is said there was silence in Heaven for the space of half an hour, do not let any such thing occur on earth; it would be too much like Heaven for the inhabitants of this mundane sphere. If, after all your watchful ears, you cannot see anything out of the way in any one, you may be sure it is not because they have not done anything bad; perhaps, in an unguarded moment, you lost sight of them—throw out hints that they are no better than they should be—that you should not wonder if the people found out what they were after a while, and then they may not carry their heads so high. Keep it agoing, and some will take the hint and begin to help you after a while—then there will be music, and everything will work to a charm.

Hard Stores about Conscripts.

The N. Y. World publishes a letter from a gentleman at Fernandina, Fla., which gives a shocking account of our conscript soldiers It says:

"Quite an excitement was caused by the arrival of three hundred conscripts to fill up the regiment stationed here. They are, without exception, the hardest set of fellows I ever saw. The night before their arrival an attempt was made by them to take a vessel, which proved unsuccessful. During the remainder of the night they were kept under submission by having them between decks and keeping hot water always ready to throw upon them. On the passage from Philadelphia it was nothing to see a man knocked down in broad daylight and robbed of his money. When rations were served out they formed in line, and as soon as one had drawn his ration he would go on deck, throw it overboard, and then form on the other end of the line preparatory to repeating the operation. One day the Quartermaster served out three barrels of beef before he found out their game. Some of them have enlisted ten times, and they openly say that they intend to get back to Philadelphia, even if they have to go through the Southern States to get there. One fellow has been three times in the rebel army, and I should not be surprised if he deserted again. These are the first conscripts that I have seen; and if they are all like them, our prospect for a good army is poor.

A Graveyard Joke.

Rich scenes occur in house hunting days, and every unfortunate with a large family is put to his trumps to secure a home, children not being favorites with landlords.

Mr. Smithers was thus blessed, and being obliged to change his quarters, set out with Mrs. Smithers and his nine hopefuls on the hunt. Tenement after tenement was found, but the sight of the olive branches brought a flat refusal. No, sir! there wasn't anything to be rented to such a family. All one day, and the next until near night, they wandered on, tired and hungry, when happening to pass a graveyard, Smithers was suddenly seized with a brilliant idea.

"You and the children go in there, my dear, amd look around while I see if there is anything to rent in the neighborhood," he said.

The request was complied with, and soon Mr. Smithers found a house to his liking.

"Any children?" asked the landlord.

"All in the graveyard," answered Smithers, with a face as solemn as one of the tombstones.

Soon the bargain was struck, lease drawn and first quarter's rent paid, and the father went rejoicing on his way.—But the landlord's face was equally solemn, when father, mother, and the nine children took possession the next day.

"I thought," he said, with something that sounded very much like an oath.—"I thought you told me your children were all in the graveyard?"

"So they were," replied Smithers with a very insinuating smile, "so they were, but I didn't tell you they were all dead!"

He had taken the house and taken the landlord in at the same time.

Movements of the Rat.

Wherever a man goes, rat follows or accompanies him. Town or country are equally as agreeable to him. He enters upon your house as a tenant at will. There he has his parties, and his revels, and his masquerades (many ones they are), when you would be asleep, if it were not for the spirit with which the youth and belles of ratland keep up the ball over your head.

The adventurous merchant ships a cargo for some distant port; rat goes with it. Great Britain plants a colony at Botany Bay, Van Dieman's Land, or at the Swan river; rat takes the opportunity of colonizing also. Ships are sent upon a voyage of discovery, rat embarks as a volunteer. He doubled the stormy cape with Diaz, arrived at Malabar in the first European vessel with Gena, discovered the New World with Columbus, and took possession of it at the same time, and circumnavigated the globe with Magellan, and with Drake, and with Cook.

HURRAH FOR SALT.—In one of the towns in the Southern part of Virginia as a regiment of rebel volunteres were about leaving for the seat of war, a neighboring parson, in addressing the rebels on their duties, etc., told them that having put their hand to the plow they must never look back. "Remember," said he, "the fate of Lot's wife, who, for looking back, was turned into a pillar of salt." At this juncture a bold secesh, who did not exactly see the application, and who had just been luxuriating on a piece of fresh calf without seasoning, suddenly started up, threw his cap in the air, and sung out lustly—"Horay for salt! Bully for Lot's wife!"

ADVANTAGE OF EDUCATION.—"Doctor, said an old lady the other day, to her familiy physician, "Kin you tell me how it is is that some folks is born dum?" "Why hem; certainly, madam!" replied the doctor. "It is owing to the fact that they come into the world without the gift of speech?" "La, me!" remarked the old lady; "now jest see what it is to have an edication! I've axed my old man more nor a hundred times that ere same thing; and all I could get out of hin was, 'Kase they is.'"

☞ An Irish girl called at the post-office the other day, and inquired for her letter. After asking the name, the clerk proceeded to look for a letter, but not being successful in finding it, asked if the name was on the list of returned letters.—"No, in faith," answered she; 'but I know it's there, for I put it in more than a week ago, and now I want to take it out to add something to it, sure."

Careless Waste.

We know a family of two persons in which is daily cooked food enough for twice that number. The surplus stands about the pantry exposed to flies, dust, heat frost and twice the original cost, half of it to be eaten, and the remainder, with vegetables, mouldy bread and fruit, etc., to be consigned to the pigs. Here is a waste of food which requires a pretty long purse to maintain. Yet both husband and wife are constantly complaining of hard times. They lack money, and fear positive want. Well they may, for if anything is sure to bring want it is waste.

When the flour barrel is empty, the molasses keg drained, the sugar spent, and other things gone, neither husband nor wife seem to think that an unnecessary part of the whole has been devoured by the pigs, nor that, if Mrs. Eve would have one kind of food for each meal, and put on the table only half the usual quantity at once, they both would enjoy their meals far better, and have the surplus in good condition to be relished at future meals. Nobody relishes bread that has been handled, broken, rejected. But, newly-cut, wholesome looking, it is always enjoyed by the hungry. A meal consisting of but few kinds, is more enjoyed, as well as more healthful, than if composed of all kinds. Profusion is as unfavorable to enjoyment as it is to health and the purse. Simplicity and economy ensures domestic happiness and prosperity; but a thriftless habit brings sure ruin.

Don't laugh, Mrs. Eve, saying, "I wonder how neighbor Showoff would like that!"—it means you.

Come Out Here.

A laughable incident occurred a few days since at Cook's Coffee House. Two gentlemen from Nashua stepped in there, and, walking up to the bar, one of them called for ale for both. While the ale was being drawn, an acquaintance of the man who called for the ale came up and engaged him in conversation, while the other proceeded to drink his ale. On the wall back of the bar hangs a very large mirror, which reflects the full form of those standing in front of the bar. The gentleman who called for the ale turned suddenly around to the bar, and discovering the image of his friend in the mirror in the act of drinking, supposed he was in another room, when, eyeing the image closely, he called out, "John what are you in there drinking alone for? Come out here?" The shout of laughter which arose from those present can be better imagined than described.

SORE THROAT.—The best remedy we have found for a sore throat, is, on retiring to rest, to rub on the outside a little "Volatile Liniment," and swallow slowly a few drops of paregoric, letting it dissolve in the saliva, and spread along down the inflamed parts. The liniment is generally sufficient alone. Volatile Liniment is simply a mixture of sweet oil and aqua ammonia (called liquid hartshorn.) These are put in a vial and shaken, using such proportions as to form a semi liquid soap. An ounce or two can be got cheaply at the druggists, and if tightly corked, it will keep for months. Rub it on with the fingers. We find nothing better than this for soreness of the chest or joints, or for lameness, stiff neck, etc.

☞ Don't be a Loafer, don't call yourself a loafer, don't keep a loafer's company don't hang about loafing places. Better work hard for nothing and board yourself, than sit around day after day, or stand at corners with your hands in your pockets. Better for your mind, better for your prospects. Bustle about, if you have anything to bustle about for. Many a poor physician has obtained a real paitent by riding hard to attend an imaginary one. A quire of blank paber, tied up with red tape, carried under a lawyers arm may procure him his first case, and make his fortune. Quit droning and complaining Keep busy and mind your chances.

The common and popular term "any other man" can be found in the 16th chapter of Judges, where Delilah was coaxing Sampson for the secret of his strength. He divulged as folows; "If I be shaven, then my strength will go from me, and I shall become weak, and be like any other man."

☞ It is claimed that by the Federal occupation of Texas by Banks Army, 200,000 bales of cotton will be thrown into market. The amount on the Rio Grande is immense.

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The Vice President called the Senate to order at noon.

The credentials of Messrs. Wiley and VanWinkle, Senators elected from West Virginia, were presented by Mr. Collamer.

The credentials of Mr. Conness, of California, were presented by Mr. Nesmith, and the credentials of Mr. Henderson of Missouri, by Mr. Foote.

Messrs. Conness and Henderson were qualified and took the oath of allegiance prescribed by the last Congress.

Mr. Davis raised a question as to the right of the gentlemen from West Virginia to take their seats. He held that there was constitutionally and legally no such State, and there could therefore be no Senators from such State. His object was simply to put on record his objection. He believed the old State to be intact and that this whole thing is a violation of the constitution.

Mr. Davis, as a test question, moved that the oath of office be administered to the gentlemen from West Virginia which was carried by yeas 38, nays 5.

On motion of Mr. Foote, a resolution was adopted appointing a committee of three to wait, in connection with a committee on the part of the House, on the President of the United States, and inform him of the readiness of Congress to receive his annual message.

Messrs. Foote, Trumbull and Nesmith, were appointed.

Mr Foote offered a resolution for the classification of senators from Wrst Virginia by the usual means of drawing lots which was adopted. Mr. VanWinkle to fill the long term, expiring 1869, and Mr. Wiley the short term, expiring 1865.

Mr. Lane, of Indiana, gave notice of the introduction of bills to repeal the $300 commutation feature of the enrollment and and to increase the pay of non commissioned officers and privates in the army 50 per cent.

HOUSE.

At noon Mr. Ethridge, Clerk, called the House to order, and said he would proceed to call the roll of members only whose credentials show that they were regularly elected in accordance with the laws of their State and of the United States.

The Clerk then read the roll of members from all the States, except Maryland Western Virginia, Missouri, Oregon and Kansas.

Mr. Stevens, of Va., desired that the credentials of those whose names were not on the roll be read. The Clerk said he had placed on the roll the names of all those whose credentials bore evidence in accordance with the law passed by this House in March last.

Mr. Washburne asked whether there were any contestants of seats.

The Clerk replied that there were three or four from Missouri, one from Virginia, and one from Kentucky, as he recollected.

At the request of Mr. Stevens, the clerk read the form of the credentials of the Maryland members, which he had ruled out for informality.

Mr. Davis, of Maryland, offered a resolution directing the names of the Missouri members to be placed on the roll.

On motion of Mr. Garfield, the credentials of the Representatives from Oregon were read, and that gentleman's name was entered on the rolls.

Mr. Washburne moved that the House proceed to the election of a Speaker viva voce, which was agreed to.

Mr. Washburne nominated Mr. Colfax; Mr. Pendleton nominated Mr. Cox: Mr. Ancona nominated Mr. Dawson; Mr. Guider nominated Mr. Stebbins; Messrs King and Blair, of Missouri, were also placed in nomination.

Messrs. Pendleton, Dawes, Wadsworth and Pomeroy were appointed tellers to conduct the election.

The House then proceeded to vote with the following result; whole number of votes 181; necessary to a choice 82, Colfax 101; Cox 42; King 4; Mallory 10; Stebbins 8; Dawson 12; Blair 2, Styles 1.

Mr. Colfax was duly declared duly and legally elected. The announcement was greeted with vociferous applause. Messrs Dawson and Cox were appointed a committee to conduct the Speaker to the chair

The Speaker, on taking the chair delivered a brief, eloquent and patriotic address, which was received with general applause.

The members of the House were then sworn in. The names of the members from Louisiana being called, Mr. Stevens objected to their being sworn. Considerable discussion ensued, when Mr. Stevens offered a resolution that their credentials be referred to the Committee on Elections

Mr. Allen moved to lay the motion on the table—lost, 101 to 74.

The resolution of Mr. Stevens was then adopted—100 to 71.

The Clerk then proceeded to administer the oath to the Delegates from the several Territories.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 10, 1863.

To our Patrons.

Two weeks ago we completed our first half volume of the Herald, and we ask, for the first time, to say a word financially to the patrons, with the paper. The patronage bestowed upon the HERALD by this generous and liberal public, has been most ample, and our most sanguine expectations have been more than realized. Most of its patrons have also been prompt in their payments; yet there are a few who have not done so. To the former we return our thanks, and trust they have not been disappointed in the paper we have given them, whist to the latter class we have a proposition to make as follows: Those who are indebted to us on subscription will be charged but $1,50 a year, if the same is paid between this and the 1st of January. If not paid by that time, $2 will be invariably charged.—Persons with whom we have an account, are of course, exceptions. Our terms are $1,50 in advance, and we do not wish to charge any person more than that amount for our little one-horse paper; therefore we hope all interested will take advantage of this proposition. Our numerous "wood subscribers" are included in the above. We are paying cash for wood, and have more engaged on subscription, than would last us a year.

The News.

The Army of the Potomac is in the old quarters it occupied two weeks ago, in the vicinity of Brandy Station. Here the enemy gathering boldness from our late retreat now hold both sides of the Rapidan, and have even advanced their picket lines to near Culpepper. A new commander and a winter campaign are talked of, but there is nothing to indicate the intentions of the Government.

Burnside at last accounts still held out Sherman has gone to relieve him, and it is rumored has hemmed Longstreet in.—The capture or retreat of the latter seems certain.

Nothing is made public concerning the movements at Chattanooga since the late battle. It is reported that Bragg has been removed from the command of the Southern forces, and has been succeeded by Hardee (author of the Tactics,) who is said to be reorganizing the army and preparing to resist the further invasion of Georgia by Grant. Of course, the latter is not idle.

Gen. Banks, by the capture of Corpus Christi, now holds fully one third of the Gulf cost of Texas.

The latest intelligence confirms the previous rumors of Longstreet's retreat from East Tennessee. Gen. Foster, with a division of cavalry, is in hot pursuit, and had an encounter with the rebel forces at the passes of the Clinch River Mountains on Sunday afternoon. Reinforcements from Grant's department have reached Knoxville, and it is probable that the pursuit of the flying foe will be attended with important results.

The news from the Army of the Potomac is not of a cheering nature. According to rumors at Washington, the army is falling back to its intrenchments. The President is said to be very much depressed at this intelligence, but as no details are given there is ground for the hope that the report may prove unfounded.

Officers and men from the Army of the Potomac concur in the opinion that an attack could and should have been made upon the rebels at Mine Run. If one had been made at first the loss would not have been so great upon our side as afterwards. But success was certain at any time.

It is rumored that charges will be preferred against one at least of the Corps commanders.

Proclamation.

EXECUTIVE MANSION, WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—Reliable information having been received that the insurgent force is retreating from East Tennessee, under circumstances rendering it probable that the Union forces cannot hereafter be dislodged from that important position, and esteeming this to be of high national consequence, I recommend that all loyal people do, on the receipt of this information, assemble at their places of worship, and render special homage and gratitude to Almighty God for this great advancement of the national cause.

Signed, A. LINCOLN.

☞ It is stated that resolutions will be offered on the convening of Congress for the removal of the capitol from Washington to some point either North or West.

Telegraph News.

MEMPHIS, Dec. 5.—Gens. Chalmers and Lee, commanding the rebel forces, attacked Moscow and Lafayette, on the Memphis and Charleston Railroad, yesterday noon. They burned Lafayette and some small bridges on the road. We repulsed them at Moscow. Col. Hatch's cavalry followed their retreat, forced them to another fight four miles out, and again repulsed them. Between 20 and 30 of their dead were found on the field among them three officers. Their dead and wounded are scattered along the road and in addition three wagon loads were taken away. The citizens say they acknowledge themselves badly whipped.

Their loss will probably reach 100.—Our loss was three killed, 41 wounded, and 41 missing. Col. Hatch, of the 2d Iowa, commanding the brigade, is seriously, though not dangerously wounded, a ball piercing through his right lung.

The telegraph is working to Corinth to day.

At this writing, firing is heard in the direction of Moscow.

NEW YORK, Dec. 7.—The Tribune's army correspondent furnishes the following information: "On Saturday evening the rebels made a feint of crossing at the several Fords of the Rapidan. Our forces were kept on the alert and everything was in readiness to retreat, if an assault had been made by superior forces. During the night the enemy crossed over two or three regiments at each Ford and took possession of the north bank of the Rapidan, and our old signal station, so they can now overlook all our movements, while we remain posted as at present.

Eight of Moseby's guerrillas have been captured by our cavalry scouts, within 3 miles of Vienna.

Gen. Meagher, who was with the army as visitor to his old brigade, was captured in citizens clotpes, near Mine Run, during the recent engagement, and is now in the hands of the enemy.

The Herald's dispatch, dated headquarters, Dec. 6th, says: All is quiet with the army and a prospect of quiet being long continued. Trains run regularly to and from Alexandria, and the army is getting well supplied with Quartermaster and Commissary stores.

It is ascertained that Lee occupies his old position south of the Rapidan, and is preparing winter quarters.

Culpepper is held by our cavalry, the enemy's line of pickets extending quite near the town. It is ascertained that the enemy has two regiments of infantry at Fredericksburg. Hampton's cavalry is between that point and Orange Court House, guarding the lower fords of the Rapidan and those of the Rappahannock. The Railroad track from Acqua to Falmouth is in perfect running order with the exception of the bridge at Potomac Creek, and a single rail near Falmouth station.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 6.—The Times' special says: Rumors from the front tonight say that Lee's whole army is on this side of the Rapidan It is also believed that he has been reinforced by a portion of Longstreet's corps.

The impression prevails, notwithstanding semi-official denials, that our army will winter on the Orange and Alexandria Railroad, some distance this side of the Rappahannock.

ST. LOUIS, Dec. 7.—The Republican's Vicksburg correspondent, under date of the 28th ult., says the rebel Gen. Polk has been ordered to the command of Southern Mississippi, with his headquarters at Brandon, fifteen miles from Jackson. A division of rebel infantry is at Canton, and several regiments at Meridian. Gen. McPherson has issued a conscription order similar to that recently issued by Gen. Hurlbut.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 7.—The following has been received at the headquarters of the army:

TAZEWELL, Tenn. Dec. 7.

To Maj. GEN. HALLECK:

Longstreet is in full retreat up the valley. Your orders about following with cavalry shall be carried out.

My division of cavalry in one of the passes of the Clinch Mountains yesterday afternoon, and are pushing them vigorously.

Couriers from Knoxville arrived last night. The road is clear. Sherman arrived here yesterday.

Signed, J. G. FOSTER, Maj. Gen.

CHATTANOOGA, Dec 7.—Sherman's cavalry arrived at Knoxville on the evening of the 3d. Longstreet raised the seige on the night of the 4th, retreating toward Bristol, via. the Merristown Railroad to Richmond, and south from Bristol. Longstreet retreats on the north and south banks of Holston River. Foster's cavalry is following him on the south and Sherman on the north.

THE RULES THUS FAR, OF THE DRAFT.—the number of men obtained thus far for the First Congressional District under the last draft only amounts to 47 men.—The total number that have paid the commutation fee, is 136, making the amount of money paid into the revenue office, $46,000.

The tongue makes deepes wounds than the teeth.

Death of Gen. Sam. Houston.

There can no longer be any doubt of the death of Gen. Sam Houston of Texas. A letter from our army correspondent at Matamoras, says: 'Gen. Sam Houston is certainly dead. He died at Huntsville, Texas. I am with a man who was present when he died. J. Terrell Smith and another man have administered on his estate." With the long and varied career of this restless and ambitious man, his Indian life, his legal and political position, and his military experiences, our readers are familiar, as well as the struggles by which, under his leadership, Texas succeeded in erecting herself one of the United States. He received many tokens of gratitude from her people, having been twice President of Texas and subsequently Governor, besides representing her in the United States Senate, and holding many other positions of honor and trust during nearly his whole life. Gen. Houston was of large stature and imposing presence, and at the time of his death was about seventy years of age.—His remarkable history will never be recalled without the recollection that his loyality to his country wavered and fell when the devotion and self sacrifice of her strongest and bravest sons was most needed.—N. Y. Tribune Dec. 1.

A BRAVE MAN.—While riding up Mission Hill on the memorable 26th, and turning my horse to the right or left to avoid treading upon the wounded, I had dismounted from my horse to give water to a dying boy, who lay upon his gun with a bullet hole through his head, when a few yards to the right, I observed an officer being carried down the hill on a stretcher. Riding up, I enquired of the men:

"Who have you here?"

"Adjutant Marsh, of the 21st Michigan was the reply.

"Where are you wounded, Adjutant?"

"In the left arm," was the reply.

"Badly?" I inquired; when with a smile lighting up his face, at the same instant that I discovered the arm adhearing to the body by a small piece of flesh he replied,

"My arm is gone; that's nothing; we've beaten them, thank God, and the slur of the Chickamuga defeat is obliterated.—Let the arm perish; such a victory is worth a thousand arms."—Cincinnati Com.

HENRY WARD BEECHER LANDING MUSKETS FOR THE REBELS.—The Boston Commercial Bulletin relates the following amusing experimence of Mr. Becher:

—When steamer Asia, on her last trip oaer, reached Halifax and the crew had began to break out the portion of the cargo which was to be landed there (but which it afterward became too evident was to go much further south,) Henry Ward Beecher and a few others got on shore to stretch their legs by a walk on their pier. The first case of goods came hard, and the voluntary offer of Rev. H. Ward Beecher, whose additional muscle on the rope speedily brought out the case, bang, on to the wharf He was some, what aghast, however, to find, as his friends gathered about to examine it, that he had lent a hand to land a case of muskets for the Southern Confedracy.

IRELAND.—Late English papers state that the drain on farming population of Ireland is giving serious alarm to the landlords of that country. At a recent agricultural dinner, the Marquis of Waterford declared that, if the emigration continued at the rate which had lately progressed, there would be no laborers to till the soil, and Ireland would become a mere sheep-walk.

The Times special says the President's message will make about five columns; the War Office Report about five and one-half, and the Navy, six and one-half or seven columns. The reports proper of the Secretary's are brief, and all will accompany, the message.

Devil's Coffee Mills in the Army.

B. F. Taylor, the chatty correspondent of the Chicago Journal with the Army of the Cumbeland, in his letter of the 7th ult. says:

Did you ever see one of the devil's coffee mills? Well, I saw ten of them to day, like the immemorial blackbirds, "all in a row." I refer, of course, to the "Union Repeating Gun," invented by a man who once hailed from Illinois, but now dates from Dixie; an implement that might do tremenduous execution in skirmishing were it not as liable to get out of order as a lady's watch. Imagine a big rifle mounted upon a light pair of wheels, and swung easily upon an arc of a circle by a lever under the gunner's arm, so as to sweep the rascals like a broom. Imagine a coffee mill hopper where the lock ought to be, and a crank to match. Then, here is a little copper box fitting the hopper. You fill it with a dozen or twenty catridges, chap it into the hopper, and the thing is ready for business. The gunner seats himself comfortably behind the gun, elevates or depresses it with a touch, and takes sight. Before his face, as he sits, and attached to the gun-barrel, is a steel shield about the shape of an overgrown shovel, and inclined a little toward the miller, so that a shot aimed affectionately at his head glances up and flies harmlessly away. Through the centre of this shield is a narrow slit—a la monitor turret—which enables him to take sight.

Now, all things ready, the diabolical grist of bullets in the hopper, the gunner—if he is a gunner—with the rudder under his left arm turns the crank with his his right hand, and the play begins. I saw one of them work; it was tick, tick, tick, sixty to the minute, as fast as you could think; no brisk little French clock ever beat faster. When the barrel gets hot, there is another in the chest; when the grists are all out, and the battle over, you pack the whole affair in a sort of traveling trunk, slip in a pair of shafts, with a horse between them, in a twinkling, and trundle it off as lightly as the cart of a Bowery butcher boy. But soldiers do fancy it. Even if it were not liable to derangement, it is so foreign to the old, familiar action of battle—that sitting behind a steel "blinder" and turning a crank is—that enthusiasm dies out; there is no full play to the pulses; it does not seem like soldiers' work.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical procession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,

C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

U. S. 5-20'S!

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from sale at far and until ten days notice given, the undersigned, as "GENERAL SUBSCRIPTION AGENT," will continue to supply the public

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury, mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period, absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from two to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the Interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come, to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium, as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin; these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds which are payable to bearer, and are $50 $100 $500 and $1000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10 000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust-monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-0's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties, and the Government takes on them is only one and a half per cent., on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds Six hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds; and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great, but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

Editor Herald:—You are doubtless aware that Friday evening of this week, at 7 o'clock, a meeting of the friends of temperance—and all interested pro. or con—is to be held at Bidwell's Hall.

As an interested citizen I have simply taken my pen to call attention to the above appointment. Is it too much to hope that the business men of our place will be present to help roll the ball?—Come, fellow citizens, there is something more than wool pending. Com.

☞ Among the novelties and amusements of the approaching holidays there will be a Fair held at Union Hall, in this village on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Dec. 21st. and 22d. Refreshments will be provided. There will be a great variety of articles manufactured and sold by the ladies of Tecumseh. There will be a valuable album raffled for on the occasion. Let there be a full house.

On hand as Usual—Ketcham the tallest newsdealer in the State, is now opening his stocks of goods for the Holidays. He has the largest and best stock of Photograph Albums, Juvenile Books, Primers, Portfolios, Games, Puzzles and everything in the Book and Stationery line ever offered in Tecumseh. Remember that he is the only dealer in the county that has Anthony's Albums for sale.

War Notice.

It is very important that all persons who have subscribed for the Bounty Fund and have not paid should do so at once, to one of the committee or to L. E. Montgomery, as the money must be raised immediately or it will be too late, as every recruit enlisted must be paid on being mustered into service.

☞ Jas. N. A. L. Simonds of Raisin, has received a commission to raise a company for the 6th Mich. Heavy Artillery, which is now stationed at Baton Rogue. This regiment offers the best inducements to enlist of any old regiment that we know of. All enlistments will be credited on the January draft, and such men so enlisting will receive $302 bounty, besides the town bounty, which makes a very handsome sum. There is no better opportunity offered for entering the service than this. It will probably be confined to fortifications and the management of artillery therein, which gives less exposure, better food and more regular hours of labor and sleep, than any other position.

Simonds is a good fellow, and we predict he will make a good and brave officer. This is a good opportunity for our Lenawee boys to go together, so pitch in and avoid the draft.

The Suffering Poor.

The good people of Tecumseh will do well to remember they have poor widows and fatherless children amongst them, who will suffer much during the Winter unless looked after. In other places the people are by voluntary contribution, supplying the soldier's families with wood. A praise-worthy move truly. But if those families, whose head is in the service of our country, with what they receive from him and the County, through the Supervisor, can hardly live, what will become of those whose husbands and fathers have died in the army, and have no means of support but the mite the Supervisor is allowed to furnish them,—True, they can have pensions, but long months elapse after making application before receiving back pay, bounty, or pension. In the mean time shall they be allowed to starve or go naked?

It is a shame to say to the poor innocent victims of the Rebellion, "Go to the Poor master." From the Bounty Volunteer Fund but small allowances can be made for each, and will you force the widows and orphans of the brave soldiers who have died fighting the battles of our country, or disease contracted in the army, to become commo paupers? I cannot believe that such are the feelings of persons who are suffered to remain quietly at home, in the midst of abundance, while others suffer for their good.

The following is from the Hudson Gazette:

The other day a gentleman called at the home of a poor woman, whose husband had died in the army, and found her sick, confined to the bed, with her poor little children in bed with her, without wood, food, or clothing, sufficient to protect them from the severe cold of the past few days. He kindly went to work, and in a few hours raised, by voluntary contributions, twelve dollars in money, which will for a short time relieve her suffering condition.

Are there not others in a similar condition? I charge the good people of our village that interest, benevolence, and patriotism demand that they forget not the widow and fatherless. Soldiers Aid and Dorcas Societies can do a good work at home.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE OF Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 120 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 160 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a year would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store.

Probate Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Thursday the first day of October in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three,

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Hannah Wixon, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Jehial H. Bramble administrator on said estate, praying for the allowance of his final account with said estate and distribution of money in his hands amongst the heirs at law of said disease, and his discharge.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 2nd day of November next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ROBERT R. BEECHER,
Judge of Probate.

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS.

Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be averted by a timely use of the right remedy. The Ayers Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed to health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into vigorous activity, purify the system from the putrid humors which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. This, if not relieved, react upon themselves and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, oppressed by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true on a large scale is equally true in this trivial and common complaint, as also in the many purgative cheap and dangerous nostrums. The same doses and same action. Caused by similar obstructions of the bowels, and the same results in the derangements of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them permanently, cured by the same means. Now, who know the virtues of Ayer's Pills, will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.

Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.

DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tried your Pills, and they have cured her.

ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.

From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.

Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.

From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.

DEAR BRO. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever treat with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.

PITTSBURG, Pa., May 1, 1855.

DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the most headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.

Yours with great respect, ED. W. PREBLE, Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.

From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.

Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their beneficial effects upon the liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.

DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR, Washington, D. C., 7th Feb, 1856.

SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALONZO BALL, M. D., Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhea, Relax, Worms.

From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.

Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their alterative effect upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhea. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable, and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.

From Rev. J. V. Himes, Pastor of Advent Church, Boston.

DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.

WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 21, 1855.

DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.

JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, Dropsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.

From Dr. J. P. Vaughn, Montreal, Canada.

Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the cure of costiveness. If others of our fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join me in proclaiming it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe costiveness to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.

From Mrs. L. Stuart, Physician and Midwife, Boston.

I find one or two large doses of your Pills, taken at the proper time, are excellent promotives of the natural secretion when wholly or partially suppressed, and also very effectual to cleanse the stomach and expel worms. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.

From the Rev. Dr. Hawkes, of the Methodist Episc. Church

PLEASANT HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., Jan. 6, 1856.

HONORED SIR: I should be ungrateful for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which ended in chronic rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had the best of physicians, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of your excellent agent in Fairmount, Dr. Mackenzie, I tried your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverance in the use of them, I am now entirely well.

SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 5 Dec, 1855.

DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured, by your Pills, of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SLIDELL.

☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands is dangerous in a public pill, from the decidful consequences that frequently follow its incautious use. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.

Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THESE MACHINES will hem, run up breadths, gather, fell, tucker, cord, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uni form long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand; with directons so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilites for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVEBY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

BEWARE OF COUNTERFEITS

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS [02 Cents] per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is the their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for prarticular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this: but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves, being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares: and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee, more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy
For Diseases of the
BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "dire at diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

The Present.

Heart gazing mournfully
Back through past years—
Bringing sad memories,
Laden with tears—
Life's hours wasted,
Talents abused,
Bright opportunities
Blindly refused—
Close up the record
Fraught with such pain;
Years that have vanished
Return not again.
Grasp thou the Present,
Be earnest and bold—
Fleeting its moments,
More precious than gold.

Watch and fight bravely
Against sloth and sin;
Pray for the Spirit,
The victory to win.
Cometh the future
Veiled and slow?
Go forth to greet her,
For weal or for woe.
Bringeth she gladness?
Praise thou the Lord,
Bringeth she sadness?
Bow to His word.
O'er Past and o'er future
Dim shadows recline,
Heart, be thou manful;
THE PRESENT IS THINE!

Running the Blockade.

"Is Miss Bessie in?"

"Yes, sir."

Without further question, the speaker entered the house with the air of an accustomed visitor. The room into which he was ushered was furnished with a degree of elegance which betokened alike wealth and good taste. The young man threw himself upon a sofa, and taking from his pocket a telegram just received, read it with sparkling eyes. Certainly it must have contained good news, to judge by the expression of his face. He was interrupted in his occupation by a soft hand upon his shoulder.

"Mr. Mordaunt, I protest against your converting my drawing-room into an office. Is your letter, then, of absorbing interest?"

"I beg your pardon, Bessie," said the young man, coloring slightly; "you entered so softly that I did not hear you."

"Is that all you have to say to me?" inquired the young lady, playfully. "I begin to think it was scarcely worth while to come down."

"No, Bessie," said the young man, taking her hand, "it is not all I have to say to you. I have come to ask you to reconsider your decision postponing our marriage for six months. What good reason is there for it?"

"It's my guardian's wish, Frederic," said Bessie, more gravely. He thinks I am so young that we can well afford to wait. After all, it is but a short time. Six months will pass away very quickly."

"To you, perhaps," returned the lover, half reproachfully.

"And why not?" she retorted, playfully. "For think, Frederic, they are the last months of my independence.—From that time I am to be subject to the whims and caprices of a husband. I am afraid they are all sad tyrants. On second thoughts, it would perhaps be better to name a year."

"Would you have me commit suicide?"

"As if you were capable of it," she retorted, laughing merrily.

"You don't know what I am capable of," said young Mordaunt, shaking his head.

"Perhaps if I did know, I should be unwilling to marry you at all," said Bessie, with a saucy smile.

Frederic Mordaunt's face flushed slightly, as if a sudden thought had crossed his mind, but a moment afterwards he responded in the same vein.

Half an hour afterwards the young man rose to go. Bessie Graham followed him to the door, and then, with slow and meditative steps, re-entered the drawing room. As she passed the mirror, a hasty glance was perhaps natural. Rarely has mirror reflected back a more pleasing face or more graceful figure. Neither perhaps was faultless, but the face had a wonderful power of expression. A smile fairly lighted it up, leaving it absolutely radiant. Yet there was something about the mouth that smiled so sweetly, which would have assured a careful observer that Miss Bessie had a will of her own when she chose to exert it. The eyes were clear and truthful. Purity and sincerity were reflected in these mirrors of the soul. Frederic Mordaunt was not the only one who had been won by the charms of the young heiress. For Bessie was an heiress and a wealthy one. Not that she thought of it. The two hundred thousand dollars which constituted her fortune, were a poor substitute, in her eyes, for the tender love of her father, who had been snatched from her three years before by a sudden distemper.

Bessie was about to leave the room, when her attention was suddenly drawn to a loose sheet of paper which lay on the carpet at the foot of the sofa on which her late visitor had been sitting.—Picking it up, a glance informed her that it was a telegram and dated at Halifax. Her eyes rested upon it a moment, and almost unconsciously she took in its contents. The blood rushed to her cheeks, and she exclaimed, impetuously, "Good heavens! can Frederic have acted so base a part?"

The expression of her face was completely changed. There was a deep earnestness in her eyes, but lately sparkling with a merry light. This must be inquired into without delay," she resolved "If it be as I suspect, all is over between us. Yes," she repeated, in a slow and resolute tone, henceforth and forever all is over between us."

She wrote two lines upon a sheet of note-paper, and ringing the bell, hastily, said to the servant who answered her summons, "Do you know Mr. Mordaunt's office?"

"Yes, Miss Bessie."

"You will convey this note thither immediately, and place it in his own hand. If he is absent, wait for him."

"Yes, Miss Bessie."

"Mr. Mordaunt had walked quickly back to his office, having important business awaiting his attention. He was a young merchant who had the reputation of a great shewdness in business matters. Some said he had never done a better stroke of business than in securing the affections of the young heiress. Perhaps he thought so himself. He had not been returned five minutes when Bessie's messenger arrived.

"A message from Bessie."

"Indeed," said the young merchant, graciously, "Give it to me."

"His face assumed a perplexed expression after he had read this brief missive:

"Will Mr Mordaunt favor me with a call at his earliest convenience, on a matter of great moment. B. G."

"What can this mean?" thought Mordaunt. "I left her but a moment ago, as cordial as usual. Yet nothing can be colder than this strange note. Your mistress is well?" he inquired of the servant.

"Yes, sir, quite well."

Not a little disturbed at this summons, which thoroughly mystified him, Frederic Mordaunt, leaving business to take care of itself, hastily returned to the house which he had just quitted. He was shown without delay into the presence of Bessie.

"Why, Bessie," he commenced, "you have fairly frightened me with the suddenness of your summons. What—"

A glance at the grave face of the young lady arrested the words upon his lips.—"I hope you are not ill," he said, in a changed voice.

"You left something behind you," said Bessie, quietly, "which I thought might be of importance. I have, therefore, judged it best to send for you, that I might return it in person." She extended the telegram.

Frederic Mordaunt turned suddenly pale. He mechanically reached out his hand and took the paper.

"I have an apology to make," Bessie continued in the same cold tone. "Not aware that it was of importance, I accidentally let my eye rest upon it."

The young man's paleness was succeeded by a crimson flush, but he remained silent.

"Frederic!" Bessie burst forth, in a changed tone, "is this dreadful thing true? Have your really been false to your country, and deliberately engaged in furnishing aid and comfort to the enemy? I gather from this telegram that through an agent in Halifax you have fitted out cargoes to run the blockade. Is this so?"

The young man's eye quailled before her searching glance. "Forgive me Bessie," he entreateated, "and I will faithfully engage never again so to forget myself."

"Forgive you! It is not me you have offended, but your country."

"I will give half the proceeds to the Sanitary Commission—nay, the whole," said Frederic, deprecatingly.

"That cannot repair the evil."

"You are hard upon me, Bessie," said the young man, a little resentfully. "I am not the only one who has engaged in this business. It is wrong, I admit, but it is not the worst thing a man can do."

"Very nearly," returned Bessie, gravely. "Listen, Frederic Mordaunt," she continued, rising, and looking down upon him like an accusing angel. "Three months ago word came to me that my cousin, who was my early playmate, and always dear to me, fell upon the battle-field, fighting bravely. Do you think, in my sorrow for him, that I have not remembered with indignation those who caused and who perpetuate this unhappy war? Yet I could almost envy him his fate. He never proved recreant to honor, and false to his country. His memory will ever be held sacred in my heart.—Think, Frederic Mordaunt, how many thousands have fallen like him—how many a heart has been made desolate—how many a fireside is wrapped in sadness"

"That is true; but am I responsible for all that?"

"There blood is upon your hands, Frederic Mordaunt," said Bessie, sternly. "You, and such as you, who betray your country for a little paltry gain—who furnish the rebels with the means of prolonging their unrighteous contest—are guilty of all the extra bloodshed and suffering which must necessarily result. Shame on you, Frederic Mordaunt! And you call yourself loyal! I have more respect for an open enemy than for a secret traitor."

"Bessie," said the young man, thoroughly humiliated, "I will no seek to defend myself. I will make any reparation that you may require; only do not be too hard upon me."

"I hope you will make such reparation as your conscience exacts. For me, I will venture to dictate. You are not responsible to me any further than you are to all who have the welfare of their country at heart."

"Surely yes," said the young man, his heart sinking with a new apprehension. "The relation between us will justify you in any demand. You have only to express your wishes."

"The relation to which you refer has ceased," said Bessie, coldly. "I give you back your promise."

"You cannot mean it," said young Mordaunt, in accents of earnest entreaty.—"Say that you do not mean it."

"It is beast so," said Bessie. "I was mistaken in you. I thought you were a man of strictest honor. I did not think—but what need to proceed? Providence has willed that my eyes should be opened. Let the past be forgotten."

"Do not cast me off without a moment's reflection," urged Frederic, more and more desperately. "Give me the time, and I will satisfy you of my sincere repentance."

"I heartily hope you will, Frederic.—The interest that I have felt in you will not permit me to say less. But if you will not permit me to say less. But if you have a thought that any change which time will bring will shake my resolution, put it away at once. Where I have once lost my respect I can no longer love. Within the last hour changed. My love for you has gone, never to return.—It is best that you should know it. I sincerely hope that you may awake to a full sense of the disgrace in which you have involved yourself, and may seek, as far as possible, to repair it. Should such be the case, my good opinion of you may in time be restored. Do not seek for more."

Frederic Mordaunt took his hat slowly, and left the room. He felt that it would be useless to urge his suit further. There was that in the expression and tone of Bessie Graham which warned him that it would be in vain. Even in that hour, perhaps the loss of the fortune which the heiress would have brought him was not the least bitter ingredient in the cup of humiliation. Yes, even in a pecuniary view his speculation had failed miserably. He had gained five thousand dollars and lost two hundred thousand.

As for Bessie, she did not grieve much for the lover she had dismissed. It was as she had said. All her love she had dismissed. It was as she had said. All her love for him had passed away, when she awoke a sense of his unworthiness.—She has firmly resolved that whenever her hand is given, it shall be to one who has devoted himself heart and hand to his country.

TRUE.—The soundest argument, produces no more conviction in an empty head than the most superficial declamation; as a feather and a guinea fall with equal velocity in a vacuum.

A queer old gentleman being asked what he wished for dinner, replied: "An appetite, good company, something to eat and a napkin."

A Heavy Train at the Capitol.

She was a glorious creature—perhaps a little vain—as he swept along the avenue, drawing a silken train. Her robe was very costly, her train was very long, and murmured admiration swelled out from every throng of idle swells and loafers the fair one chanced to meet or who ogled her from taverns and corners of the street.

And thus she promenaded through many weary squares, astonishing the people with her grand and lofty airs.—But at legth her train grew heavy and with labor on she strode, while her garment like a drag net took the sweepings of the road. On she struggled, still he fainted, her brain spun quite around, and two near at-hand policemen tried to bear her from the ground. But, though well and able bodied, their strength was all in vain; they could lift the gentle damsel but they couldn't budge her train. At last her skirt was lifted, and a terrible mess lay weltering there beneath the dress of the lady fair?

There were quids of tobacco and stumps of cigars,—"old sogers" that surely been through the wars,"—a dead rat and a sausage, an old "doggertype," cockroaches, live spiders, and pieces of tripe, all plastered together with feculent dirt—a pretty appendage to an elegant flirt!

They lifted her tenderly—handled with care—put her into a hack and sent her home, and it is to be hoped that she will not again be guilty of promenading in her evening dress.—Washington Rep.

Gold Mining in Canada.

The English journals publish an official report in relation to the gold-mining operations in Canada, on the Chaudiere river. It appears that a little first found gold in this district thirty years ago, by accident; and the 'diggins' have been worked, in a very desultory manner, and by a few persons, ever since. At present a company has a lease of the mining-rights, and a few men are at work for it, the greater part, however, working for themselves. At one point five men take out on an average, thirty dollars worth of gold per day. The fact that men work for wages and receive but eighty cents per day, feeding themselves, is proof that gold has not been found in great abundance. No quicksilver is used in the mines. The gold is of a deep color, clean, and eight hundred and ninety-two thousandths fine on an average. There are some Californians on the spot, and these will probably show the natives how to gold out, if the placers shall prove rich.

Marry by Rail.

The St. Louis Democrat of the 24th ult says: 'On Sunday, the 15th inst., two weddings were performed on the train which left Rolla in charge of conductor Allen. The persons married were, first, Mr. Dobney Garter to Miss Mary J. Dunivan. The knot was tied by the Rev. Mr. Gaddy at half past 10 A. M., while the cars were running at full speed. As soon as the ceremony was completed, and the happy couple had received the congratulations of the guests, the second wedding took place. At half past 11, Mr. J. N. Dunivan, Sheriff of Phelps county, and father of the young and beautiful bride just married, entered into the wedded state with Mary E. Campbell. The pair were married by the same gentleman who performed the first ceremony. Then the rejoicing was at its height.—The minister, who, by the way, was taking his maiden railroad ride, never having been on a car in his life, was congratulated on his days' work.

Discovery of Skeletons.

An old building at the corner of Wall and Front streets, Jeffersonville, Maryland, was recently purchased by the Jeffersonville Railroad company to be fitted up for offices. In repairing the building the workmen took up the old floor, and to their astonishment discovered the remains of several young ladies, supposed to have been murdered in the house years ago, together with the skeleton of an infant wrapped in cloth. The remains of the unfortunate creatures have remained there for thirty years or more. The house has for nearly that period been inhabited by respectable tenants, but was formerly the rendezvous of a desperate class of people, and many dark and bloody crimes are known to have been committed within its walls. Many innocent and unsuspecting girls have been lured to this house and their ruin accomplished; and it is believed that not a few of these unfortunate victims have met with violent deaths.

ECCENTRIC.—Our "devil" is an eccentric lad, and we have many a good laugh at his odd sayings; but could never determine whether his comical speeches were premedicated wit or only blunders. For instance, he is, or pretends to be, very fond of smoking, and will stand for hours puffing out great clouds of smoke to the annoyance of everyone near him. A compositor ventured to remonstrate with him upon his excessive use of tobacco; assuring him that the practice was very injurious to one so young, and recommended to him to abstain entirely from so filthy a habit—at least, not to smoke all the while. After a moment's silence a bright thought struck him, and with a bland look of comfortable satisfaction he proceeded to annihilate all his opponent's arguments with the following clincher: "Ah, but you see, is's very seldom that I smoke all the time!"

One of the hands being sick, I remarked to him on coming from dinner, that as J—— was not able to work it would be necessary that he should set one column that afternoon. After smoking a few whifs in silent meditation he was resolved and bringing his clenched right hand down upon his open left he exclaimed, with great emphasis, "I'll set a column this afternoon if it takes me six weeks!"

CHEAP FENCE.—A good and sufficient field fence can be made with fifteen inches in width of boards, or fifty rods of fence to the thousand feet of boards. Set the posts and nail the first board nine inches from the ground; then nail on the remaining boards, each three inches in width, with spaces between them of five, six, seven and ten inches respectively. Now turn a furrow six inches deep toward the fence on each side. This brings the earth within three inches of the bottom board, and adds six inches to the height of the fence, measuring from the bottom of the furrow, and the ditch, or bank, makes it very unhandy for animals to get at the fence.—This makes a fence four feet and ten inches high. I have several hundred rods of this fence. The first was built five years ago, and has proved perfectly safe and sufficient against cattle that are unruly. It was not racked by the wind, like a fence of wider boards. Fourteen feet boards, with one post in the middle, take a less number of posts, and make as good fence as the twelves.—Genesee Farmer.

ACCIDENT AT GETTYSBURG.—A most shocking and fatal accident occurred at Gettysburg, Friday of the week before last. A Mr. Briggs, of Philadelphia, who came to Gettysburg to attend the dedication of the National Cemetery, and recover the body of his son, who fell there in the battles of July, found an unexploded 20-pound shell, and carrying it to his lodgins in the village, to keep for a relic, was trying to remove its contents, when it exploded, cutting off both arms at the elbows, and literally tearing to pieces and instantly killing the son of the landlady, a little boy nine years of age who was standing near. Another boy was driven across the street, but without serious injury. There is little hopes of Mr. Briggs recovery.

A portion of the track of the Pittsburg, Fort Wayne and Chicago Railroad has sunk out of sight three times. The space where this occurs is about two hundred feet long. After loosing two other tracks, the company inserted piles. They have also sunk out of sight. They are now driving down piles of over sixty feet in length, and yet have not found hard ground. The place where this occurs is supposed to have been occupied by a lake, over which vegetation has spread a thin crust.

TREATMENT OF KICKING COWS.—S. C., of Norfolk, Connecticut, says, in a letter to the Agriculturalist:

The following treatment, which I have tried some years, has never failed to stop the evil. Put a strap round the cow just in front of the bag, and buckle it rather tight. If the cow tries to kick, draw the strap a little tighter. She will never get used to it, and it never does any injury.—She will keep on eating as usual, but has no inclination to lift her feet, even to walk about."

This may answer the purpose; the experiment is easily tried.

"In witness whereof, we hereby testify to having tried the above, successfully years ago, upon a three-year old heifer. It is a sure stop, every time."—Journal of Agriculture.

"We tried it this fall upon a two-year old heifer, and it worked like a charm."—Miss. Ploughman.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., DEC. 17, 1863.

Let the Pay of our Soldiers be Increased.

We are pleased to note an indication on the part of Congress to increase the pay of our soldiers. If any class of our citizens deserve a liberal remuneration for service rendered, it is the private soldier. With a willing heart and loyal purpose he is sacrificing all that makes life pleasant—friends, home and happiness—aye, life itself—for not only his own benefit, but for his neighbors—for his beloved country. It is not because he loves his home, his kindred, his family less, but because, next to GOD, he loves the land that gave him birth.

For all these sacrifices he is worthy of a liberal remembrance by the Government. At the present premium on gold and the prices to which all the necessaries of life have advanced, the pay of the private soldier now at $13 per month is less in reality than $11 per month, when the war began.

The sacrifices and privations of the soldier have largely increased in every respect, while the high price which labor commands at the North has increased the wealth and prosperity of those who remain at home. The Government can well afford to pay her gallant defenders at the most liberal figure. It is its duty to do so. It should be prepared to sacrifice treasure—when the brave soldier sacrifices more. The man who has risked everything to obey the call of his country—who does not shrink from the path to which duty points—who is willing to undergo every hardship and trial incident to camp and field—should receive from Government sufficient to correspond with a good working man's wages at home—enough to place his family above the possibility of want during his absence.—Justice demands this, the interests of property require it; equity, loyalty and the salvation and prosperty of the Government loudly calls for it. The greater the pay, the larger the inducements held out—the more rapidly enlistments increase. The care and anxiety upon the mind of the soldier in regard to the welfare of his family at home is lessened—He will fight with a stouter heart and a stronger arm, if he knows that his wife has every possible comfort around her—he will fulfil every duty required of him, with a brighter eye and a more cheerful countenance, if he is assured that his beloved children are free from want.

But, with what a haggard look and cheerless eye will he enter upon the duties of the camp or field, if he is painfully conscious of the suffering and privation of the loved ones at home. Oh, how his heart will sink within him at the thought of their distress! His nerves are unstring, his strong arm becomes powerless, his saddened heart wages unrelenting war upon his entire physical being, and paralyzes its vigor. He becomes unfitted for duty, and indifferent to circumstances around him. He regards life as a wearisome burden—and patriotism as a dazzling myth. He despises the one, and regards the other as a gilded bait concealing some Upasian poison—made for fools to nibble and daws to peck.

This is the inevitable result of an insufficient remuneration of the services of our private soldiers, and we are glad to know that the Government is awakening to a realization of the fact. Let our soldiers be paid bountiously, and our forces will become larger and more powerful, the sooner will the rebellion be crushed, the less our debt, the lighter our taxes, and the more speedy the advancement of the people on the high road to national prosperity, grandeur and power.

☞ One night last week a resident of Lafayette, Ind., while walking on the Wabash Valley Railroad track, had reached the middle of the bridge over the river above the city, when he was startled by the sound of an approaching train. The night was dark. A heavy rain had made the cross-ties very slippery and insecure. To run he dare not; to jump was certain death; and with wonderful presence of mind he locked his arms around one of the ties, and swinging off between the rails, he hung suspended in mid-air until the train had passed over.—He recovered his position and reached home in safety, but was immediatly taken sick, and confined to his bead.

☞ The Cunard Stephens Company have just ordered four new steamers. They are to be called the Cuba, Java, Aleppo, and Zurilla, and will be large iron built, full powered screws.

War News.

BALTIMORE, Dec. 13.—The following despatch was received this morning:

FORT MONROE, Dec. 12.

To C. C. Fulton, Baltimore American:

Please give notice that the rebel authorities decline receiving any more packages or provisions for the Union prisoners, so that parties interested may refrain forwarding any more goods to this point.

The steamship Circassian, Capt. Eaton, from the Rio Grande the 25th ult., has just arrived here.

On the 9th, when one day out from Charleston, the Circassian captured the large blockade runner, Morina, with a valuable assorted cargo. She towed the Morina into Hampton Roads. The Captain of the latter tried to sink her, but the Circassian's men got on board in time to stop it.

The Richmond Enquirer of the 10th and 11th is received, from which we obtain the following:

CHARLESTON, Dec. 9.—This afternoon the enemy opened fire on the city and threw eight shells. Moultrie and James Island batteries returned the fire, silencing the enemy. Five buildings were struck, but no persons injured.

CHARLESTON, Dec. 10.—The enemy shelled the city between 10 and 11 o'clock last night, and 3 and 4 o'clock this morning. Twenty shots were thrown. Our batteries opened heavily upon the enemy during the time.

SECOND DESPATCH.—We have kept up a constant fire to-day, driving the enemy's working parties from Gregg and Wagner. No firing of any account today on Sumpter, and no shelling of the city

BRISTOL.—Longstreet's forces are in line of battle at Rutlledge. His rear is skirmishing with the enemy.

RICHMOND, Dec. 11.—The Senate passed a bill prohibiting the employment of substitutes in the army.

In the Rebel Congress, on the 8th, Mr. Foote, of Tenn., in a speech, said the President never visited the army without doing it an injury. Never has he visited any of our armies but what it has been followed by disasters. He charged him with almost having ruined the country, and would meet his champion anywhere to discuss it.

NEW YORK, Dec 12.—It is rumored at the Brooklyn Navy Yard that instructions have been received from the Secretary of the Navy, at Naval Station, to dispatch a large force of naval vessels to strengthen the blockade off the port of Wilmington. Seventeen or eighteen vessels are now at the navy yards and rumor says ten or twelve of these have been ordered to the desnation named.

NEW YORK, Dec. 14.—The Tribune says: A committee from the National Council of Loyal Leaguers waited on the President on Friday, and strongly urged him, as a duty to his adminstration and country, to remove Postmaster General Blair, Attorney General Bates, and Gens. Halleck and Schofield.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 13.—Both the rebel army and our own are busy constructing winter quarters.

Indications of quiet, never to be mistaken, are the liberal granting of furloughs by corps commanders, and the return to the camps of the exiled sutlers

The three years' men are rapidly re-enlisting.

A reconnoisance on Friday by the 1st Massachusetts and 1st Vermont, under Major Janeway, towards Sperryville, finished a little fight with a detachment of the 6th Virginia, but developed no other forces

WASHINGTON, Dec. 12.—The following has been received at headquarters from Gen. Banks:

The following dispatch is received from Maj. Gen. Washbourne from Fort Elpanza Pas Ballo, Matagora Bay. The command of the Bay gives us substantially the control of Western Texas, and all important ports on the eastern coast except Galveston.

LOUISVILLE, Dec. 10—The Journal has advices which it credits, that the rebel Gen. Morgan was in Cumberland county, Ky., on the morning of the 7th, in company with five of his officers, proceeding towards Dixie.

☞ The Russian Admiral and fleet will leave this port on Monday next, and go to Fortress Monroe, where they expect to winter. The Goverment has offered them the Brooklyn navy-yard to pass the winter in, which has been courteously declined; the Admiral asserting that while the anchorage at Fortress Monroe would be safe and better, he would be able to keep his officers and men on shipboard, which it was now impossible to do. The chief object in their coming to this country was to practice gunnery, but that they had not passed a whole day on their vessels since their arrival here, and had scarcely devoted an hour to it.—N. Y. Com., Friday.

The number of pensions granted by the Pension Office, during the month of Nov. just closed, was 2,095. The number of pensions to widows, mothers and orphans allowed during the same month was 2,062. Total number for November, 4,097.

Profitable Investments.

The Philadelphia North American gives some excellent advice to those who wish to invest money. It is well for all who are in funds to heed the counsel:

"Though money has been temporily scarce, capital continues abundant; and the recent tumble in the stock market has brought capitalists to a realizing sense of the unreliable character of many of the securities dealt in. It is greatly to the credit of the Government that its loans, of all the securities daily dealt in on the market, have maintained their integrity of price better than almost anything else.—Its Five twenty year six per cent loan, the interest on which is promptly paid in gold, has been subscribed to, although the pressure in the money market, at an average of more than two millions per day. And what is not the least gratifying fact in connection with the daily large subscriptions to this popular loan, scarcely any of it is returned to the market for sale. It is taken for investment, and is held with unfaltering confidence in its reliability.

And why should it not be? It is seen that the Government now, after two years of the most gigantic war that the world has ever known, experiences no difficulty in commanding the necessary means to prosecute it, or in paying regularly the interest in gold as it falls due. If this can be done while the war is being waged who can anticipate any difficulty in readily accomplishing it when the war shall be ended? What better investment then, for capital, than the "Five Twenty" Government loan? But if any doubt, let him refer to the statistics furnished by the census tables of the various nations of the world. The facts which they present will prove the most satisfactory mode of dispelling the numberless gloomy apprehensions which are being continually conjured up by those who are disposed to exaggerate the extent of the calamity occasioned by our rebellion.

A reference to the state of most of the prosperous nations of the old world clearly disproves such a position, and shows that the highest conditions of national advancement have not been materially affected by the extended wars in which those nations have been immemorially engaged, and that a heavy national indebtedness has not proved an unmitigated evil.

"For instance, Great Britain, France and the Netherlands will undoubtedly be conceded to represent the highest prosperity that has been attained by any of the European nations. And yet no nations have been called upon to endure fiercer or more prolongued wars, domestic and foreign, than they. The effect has been, unquestionably, to incur an enormous national indebtedness; but neither their wars nor their indebtedness have had the effect to destroy their elasticity, nor to check the progress of their general prosperity. The result would have been different, probably, if these nations had been falling into decay, instead of being as they really were, in a state of development; and in this respect their case resembles our own, with enormous advantages in our favor. These nations, while undergoing the trials of war, were oppressed by the evils of an immense exodus of their people, caused by the density of their population, the imposibility to provide occupation for them, the low price of labor, and the scarcity of territory. Compared with our own country, they possessed slight room for future development; they were settled in every part, and no vast territory lay invitingly open to encourage enterprise and settlement.

Their great problem has ever been what to do with their surplus population, which in its turn, has sought new fields for adventure and self support in countries like our own, where an illimitable territory waits to be developed, and where incalculable resources invite industry and energy. The encouragement to be derived from these facts and comparisons of circumstances is very great, and to the mind of any dispassionate reasoner is conclusive that the course of this great country is onward and upward, and that its credit will live unimpaired to the end."

SOMETHING DEEPER IN.—"Sam" said an interesting young mother to her youngest hopeful, "do you know what the difference is between the body and the soul? The soul my child, is what you love with, the body carries you about. This is your body (touching the little fellows sholders and arms.) but there is something deeper in, you can feel it now. What is it?" "Oh! I know," said sam with a flush of intelligedce in his eye, "that's my flannel shirt."

SILVER MINING IN MICHIGAN.—A company is being formed in Detroit, known as the "Detroit City Silver Mining Company," and the stock is nearly all taken. A lot of land has been located in the silver district of Lake Superior, and the company are to commence mining at once. They appropriate $5000 to commence operations with. The Detroit company will probably be the first to commence actual operations in silver mining in the Lake Superior country.

☞ At a meeting of bank officers in Cleveland, on Saturday last, it was resolved, on and after December 10th, to throw out all currency but the State Bank of Ohio, Indiana, the new national currency and legal tender to "greenbacks."

CONGRESSIONAL.

SENATE.

Washington, Dec. 14.—Mr. Dixon presented the petition of a large number of Assessors and Assistant Assessors, asking for an increase of compensation.

Mr. Dixon also gave notice of a bill amending the conscription act in such manner as to exempt all clergymen.

On motion of Mr. Foster, the Senate proceeded to the election of the following standing committees:

Joint standing Committee on Printing on the part of the Senate, Mr. Anthony; Joint Committee on Enrolled Bills, on the part of the Senate, Mr. Howe, Joint Committee on Library on the part of the Senate, Mr. Collamar.

Mr. Lane of Ind., introduced a bill to amend the enrollment act so as to strike out the $300 commutation, and to increase the pay of the rank and file of the army of which he had given previous notice.

Mr. Grimes introduced his bill to encourage enlistments in the naval service, and give credit for the same on the military quotas of the respective States.

Mr. Hale, having obtained unanimous consent, introduced a bill more effectually to repress the rebellion by prohibiting the holding in servitude of any persons in the country, except on contract. Ordered to be printed.

Mr. Wilkinson introduced a bill to extend the benefit of the act of Congress of July 2d, 1862, granting pensions to persons wounded in the Indian wars in Minnesota. Referred to Committee on Pensions.

Gleason's Littery Companion.

This valuable Literary Weekly will commence a new volume January 1st, 1864, in grand style, with new type and an entire new dress throughout. The "Literary Companion" is an elegant, moral and refined miscellaneous Family Journal. Its columns are devoted to Polite Literature, Wit and Humor, Prose and Poetic Gems. An unrivalled corps of writers and artists have been engaged for the coming year, and several new and popular features will be introduced. Each number will be beautifully illustrated. In size the "Literary Companion" is some fifteen hundred square inches, forming a mammoth weekly of sixten octavo pages, and containing nearly twice as much reading matter and of a more refined character than any other weekly paper.—Terms, only $2 a year. Sample copies sent free. Published weekly by F. Gleason, corner of Tremont and Bromfield streets, Boston, Mass.

U. S. Five Twenties.

We invite attention to the advertisement of Jay Cooke, agent for the sale of the five twenty government bonds, which can be seen in this issue of the Herald.—Those having more funds than they want to use, will make a safe and profitable investment by purchasing the five-twenties. These funds, it will be noticed, are not subject to taxation by 'States, cities, counties, or towns.' We refer those interested to an article in next column, bearing on this subject, and headed "Profitable Investments."

Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus is clensed of every impurity, and so arranged and combined that all unhealty and injurious properties are stricken out, while Carbonic acid, the only active property remaining, is held in check until set free, thus evolving a gas by means of which Bread is raised, and each acid thus destroyed, which makes it suitable for the most delicate or dyspeptic stomach. Try one paper, and you never will have any other. Grocers and Druggists keep it.

Hail Winter! Beautiful is its white flakes and transparent petals! and while we enjoy its pleasures let us not forget the poor.

HOSTETTER'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. ORDWAY, Ana'ytical Chemist.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE OF Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 180 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 150 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Thursday the first day of October in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three,

Present, ROBERT R. BEECHER, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Hannah Wixon, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Jehial H Bramble administrator on said estate, praying for the allowance of his final account with said estate and distribution of money in his hands amongst the heirs at law of said disease, and his discharge

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 2nd day of November next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased, and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

☞ Among the novelties and amusements of the approaching holidays there will be a Fair held at Union Hall, in this village on Monday and Tuesday evenings, Dec. 21st and 22d. Refreshments will be provided. There will be a great variety of articles manufactured and sold by the ladies of Tecumseh. There will be a valuable album raffled for on the occasion. Let there be a full house.

Fair and Supper.

The Ladies of St. Peter's Church of this village, will hold a Fair for the sale of useful and fancy articles suitable for Holiday Presents, on Tuesday evening, Dec. 22d, and on the entire day and evening of the Wednesday following at Union and Odd Fellows Hall. Supper will be served each evening, and refreshments provided during the day. Tickets of admission to the Rooms to be had at G. T. Ketcham's Book Store, and at the Stores of A. James & Co. and B. J. Bidwell. Tickets, 10cts.

☞ Carrots! Yes, Carrots, and you all would have thought so, if you had seen uncle Johny Schreeder, of Ridgeway, when he came up in our office last week with an armful of them. He brought us some that measured nearly two feet in length, and such big ones, it is no use talking they can't be beat. He informed us that he raised 290 bushels on 3-4 of an acre; the ground also being occupied by his fruit trees.—Bully for Uncle Schreeder.

DIED.

In Manchester Dec. 5th, 1863 Mrs. Pamelia W. Adams aged 70 years and 8 months.

Full of years and good fruits the aged friend has passed on to her rest. Mrs. A. was a most excellent and amiable woman. Though possessed of rare intellectual qualities, she lived a quiet and unpretending life, and faithfully performed all the obligations of the various relations in which she was placed. She was a kind mother, a faithful friend and an obliging neighbor. In her religious views she accepted that interpretation of the Gospel of Christ which gives entire assurance that God will rest in the love, in the redemption of every human soul, and be all in all to their endless happiness and glory. To her Death had no terrors and the Grave no sting. Thus quietly and peacefully she fell asleep in the Savior's arms, and "Breathed her life out sweetly there." Com.

A Visit to Clinton.

This village is situated in the north west extremity of the township of Tecumseh. Its population is 700 to 1000. The whole plat, and surroundings being undulated, the neat and tasty dwellings appear conspicuously. The river Raisin flanks the place on the west, and affords ample hydraulic power to operate a superb flouring mill and other machinery.—A fine Union School House is an index of the educational spirit of the denizens. Five churches lift their minarets on high and at once adorn and beautify the place, and indicate the moral and religious habits of the people. The Methodist Episcopal Church, a brick edifice, has stood a quarter of a century, but has recently been remodeled with windows in Gothic style and painted glass, presenting a beautiful appearance. Rev. R. R. Richards is pastor with a respectable congregation, and a promising future. On Sabbath Dec. 6th, a Sunday School was organized in the basement of Mr. Richard's church, and he was elected Superintendent. A new S. S. Library is to be obtained and much good is likely to result to the children and youth of the congregation by this winter campaign of Biblical tuition

U. S. 5-20'S!

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "Special Subscription Agent," will continue to supply the public.

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury, mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will for a very short period, absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily, and it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of Interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes, to be almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary, for a long time to come, to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Producers and self-interest must force the millions of those contemplating the formation of National Banking associations, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing for this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium, as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, which was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on Imports to be paid in Coin; these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that while the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50, $100, $500 and $1000, or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10 000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties, and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent., on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds Six hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Interest Bearing Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent. tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds; and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the date of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

U. S. 5-20'S !

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as GENERAL SUBSCRIPTION AGENT," will continue to supply the public

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period, absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan: It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium, as was the result with the "Seven Thirties" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin: these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 6-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds which are payable to bearer, and are $50 $100 $500 and $1000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10,000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust-monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties, and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent. on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds Six hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

$100 REWARD.

For a Medicine that will cure

Coughs, Influenza, Tickling in the Throat Whooping Cough, or relieve Consumptive Cough, as quick as

COES COUGH BALSAM.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in its native town, and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quantity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it, so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy it its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to child, ren of any age

In cases of Croup, we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

☞ No Family should be Without it. It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you. It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures is has made.

WANTED

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, tuck, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand: with directons so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilites for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS constant use."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense.

A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced judges; neide will not affect it. London made movement. IMPROVED DUPLEX IN FULL RUBY ACTION, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. English News, emigrants, and persons traveling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING LEVERS.

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our IMPROVED DUPLEX, and superior adjusted movements with Stop, to be used in timing horses, etc; has FOUR INDEXES for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for prarticular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares; and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Compa Teas, which will be sent to all who orde comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear even if the seam be cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fulfils nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it. In proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not as much as supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

Conscience.

When a foolish thought within
Tries to take us in a snare,
Conscience tells us "It is sin,"
And entreats us to beware.

If in something we transgress,
And are tempted to deny,
Conscience says, "Your fault confess;
Do not dare to tell a lie."

When our angry passions rise,
Tempting to revenge an ill,
"Now subdue it," Conscience cries;
"Do command your temper still."

Thus, without our will or choice,
This good monitor within,
With a secret warning voice,
Tells us to beware of sin.

But if we should disregard
While this friendly voice would call,
Conscience soon will grow so hard
That it will not speak at all.

The Mother's Story.

BY MRS. M. P. A. C.

"Mother, you are cruel!"

"I have some things to tell you, daughter, this afternoon; when I have told you them you will not think me unkind. At three o'clock come into the library with your sewing; I shall be there and disengaged."

Mary met her mother as requested and Mrs. Mason began:—"I was young once, as you are, my child, and like you, imagined my own judgment superior to that of my parents; so at the age of sixteen, and much against their wishes, I married Edward Elton?"

"Yes, Mary, I have been twice married. I never told you of this, because the subject was very painful to me.—Since my marriage with your father I have been happy—our family circle has been quiet and loving, but, my daughter, may God preserve you from experiences like those I once passed through! I had not been long acquainted with the man I choose to wed. He was a stranger in the place. Gentlemanly and polished, he impressed me, as he did almost every one, very favorably. My parents alone, among all my acquaintances, discouraged my acceptance of his suit; my father even forbade it. 'There was something about the man,' he said, 'which he did not like—he feared he was not a good man.'"

"Too yielding, however, to the entreaties of his pet child, my kind father at last silence and fears submitted to his decision. We were married at home, and our wedding was gay and festive.—A few days after we went to a distant city to live. There was for a moment, a strange, ominous feeling at my heart, when my mother held my hands so tightly at our parting, and said, 'God bless you darling,' so tenderly; but it passed away as I took my husband's hand and entered the carriage.

"We had been keeping house but a few months, Mary, when Edward was brought home to me helpless. The men who brought him were very kind and would not tell the young wife of her husband's shame—they said he was ill—very ill.—I would have sent for a physician, but they told me one had already been consulted, and that they felt sure he would be better in the morning. I never suspected the nature of his illness; why should I? In my former quiet country life, I had never seen a person much intoxicated, and that he, my noble, my beautiful husband, could have become so, did not cross my mind. I had, indeed, seen him take wine, but this was customary then, and occasioned no alarm. All night I watched by my husband's bedside, and feared that he would die, but he only slept a deep, heavy sleep, and in the morning awoke with headache He was fretful all day, but I thought him nervous and endured his complainings patiently.—I did not understand the wise look of my neighbors when I told them that my husband had been so strangely ill. I do not think he was again intoxicated for more than a year. He was ashamed that he had betrayed his weakness, and when he found that I did not understand it, but supposed that he had a fit of apoplexy, he resolved I should never know the truth. He struggled nobly with temptation, and all for love of me. I was proud and happy in his affection, and wrote home triumphantly that Edward was all I could desire.

"Our first child was born. She was a beautiful babe, with her father's broad forehead and dark eyes, and my pretty brown ringlets. How I loved that babe! Edward idolized her, and would call her Hetty after me. When Hetty was about eight months old an exciting political campaign was closed with the usual election. My husband went to the polls. His favorite Presidential candidate was successful. He drank freely in honor of the occasion, and treated others. The particulars I learned some time afterwards.

"Toward evening I was sitting near the window, holding my beautiful Hetty. She had been unusually playful, and perhaps it was only fancy—but I thought she had been trying to say 'pa-pa.' I was delighted, and pressed her to my bosom with all a mother's fondness for her first born.

"I saw my husband open the gate. He leaned against the post as if tired. Soon he came up the walk. His step was not firm as it usually was, and my heart began to beat violently. As he came near the door his body swayed to and fro and he fell, striking his head upon the doorstone. I sprang to my feet and screamed for I thought he was killed. But he did not seem badly injured, for he arose and staggered into the house. Then, my child, the dreadful conviction came home to my heart that I was the wife of a drunkard! I seemed in a moment to drink in one drop the concentration of a life of misery. Thinking of it now, I can only remember it as a fearful nightmare, from which I only awoke at the sight of my precious child dashed upon the hearth. My husband, my loving, my noble husband, was transformed into a fiend. I snatched my infant from the floor unconcious, and pale, and fled from the house. My Hetty never smiled on me again.—She never tried to say 'pa-pa' again.—She was an idiot, and through three long years I cared for my poor, dear baby that never ceased to be an infant, whose beauty and intellectual brightness were gone forever."

Mrs. Mason paused; for the remembrance and relation of the dreadful realities of those years of trial overcame her. Mary too, was weeping. When she could, she proceeded with her story.

"From that time Edward was a different man from what he had been. The flood gates of a long repressed passion seemed to have been re-opened, and on its mad waters he was swept toward ruin. I think remorse for the deed he had wrought caused him to drink more freely than he would have done.

"We had another child—a dark-haired boy, but his birth-wailing was very feeble, and in a few hours I blessed God that he would never become a drunkard, and when we laid baby Hetty by his side in the still graveyard, I longed to lie with them and be at rest. But when we turned away, and Edward spoke to me tenderly for the first time in years, it lifted up my heart so that I felt strength to live again. I hoped that it would last—that he would give up his cups. I had learned to pray at the couch of my sick child, and I spent hours on my knees in the dead of night for my poor Edward. I loved him—in all his degredation and sinfulness I had never ceased to love him. I think he tried earnestly to reform. I have seen him weep like a child over his weakness and his shame, but the next day, perhaps, he would yield to drink again. We were in rags, for our property was gone; and although I did the best I could by taking in sewing and going out to wash, I could hardly make enough to provide our food, and my husband only earned a few shillings now and then to purchase that which brought us woe continually. O, how bitter was my heart toward the rumseller who sold him the poison.

"At length came the last tragedy. I had been ill, and was just recovering, when he was seized with delirium tremens. The nervous excitement which his terrible sickness wrought in me, threw me into relapse, and I came up from the borders of the grave only to learn that Edward had passed within its portals."

Mrs. Mason's story was complete; but she said—"My child, last night, as your father and I were returning from our visit, we saw James Stanley enter a saloon. We heard his ribald jest, and his loud call for that which brought to your mother's young life such misery, as I have told you of. Is mother cruel, darling, that she would protect her daughter from the fate of the drunkard's wife?"

"I will never marry James Stanley—never," exclaimed Mary, emphatically; then affectionately embracing her mother, she whispered—"Poor mamma, how you have suffered! For your sake I will hate the poison cup forever, and give my life to the noble cause of Temperance."

And the mother said, "God bless you, Mary!"

Seeing the Point.

Fat Bob Bender is as jolly as he is adipose, and therefore takes leisure and pleasure in studying out as many jokes as may be necessary. When the first issue of "postage currency" came to hand, after reflecting for a while, he thought that he had a chance for a moderate sell, and accordingly started out to find a victim.—The first man he met was Horace M., whom he accosted:

"I say, Horace, have you seen any of the new Government postage currency notes?"

"No," was the reply. "Is there anything peculiar about them?"

"Yes," said Bob, "rather, three of them just make a dollar!"

"A good idea," rejoined Horace; "it will be handy for making change. Have you got any of them with you?"

"Yes," replied Bob holding out a "fifty" and two "twenty-fives." "Three of them just make a dollar, you see."

"I see," said Horace, evidently feeling sold, "a pretty good joke. Don't say anything about it, and I will get it off on Butler."

So providing himself with the necessary funds, he stepped into the office of the Clerks of Councils, and thus addressed Butler, holding out the money to him.

"You see there?"

"Yes," answered Butler.

"Well," continued Horace, "these three just make a dollar."

"What of it?" queried Butler.

"Why don't you see the joke?"

"No."

"Well," said Horace, after a moments pause, evidently in deep bewilderment, "then the man that told me must be a d—d fool."

Health Insurance.

A thin, cadaverous looking German, about fifty years of age, entered the office of a Health Insurance Company in Boston, a few days ago, and enquired:

"Ish de man in vot insiures peoples health?"

The agent answered: "I attend to that business."

"Vel, I vonts my helts inshured; vot you sharge?"

"Different prices," answered the agent; "from three to ten dollars a year; pay ten dollars a year and you get ten dollars a week in case of sicknes."

"Vell," said Mynheer, "I vants ten tollars vert."

The agent enquired the state of his health.

"Vell, I ish sick all de time. I'se schust out te ped two or tree hours a day, and the doctor say he can't do noting more coot for me."

"If that's the state of your health," returned the agent, "we can't insure it.—We only insure persons that are in good health."

At this Mynheer bristled up in great anger.

"You must tink I'se a tam fool; vot you tink, I come pay you ten dollars to inshure my helt, ven I vos vell?"

Choosing A Deacon.

At a church meeting in Connecticut, for the purpose of filling a vacant deacon, ship, some diversity of opinion, strange to say, appeared to exist among the brethren as to who should fill that pecuniary profitable office. After a deal of talk and no progress, Brother B———, an honest, straightforward farmer, having in mind the Democratic Convention, probably, thought that a third man might "unite the party," and made up his mind to propose the thing although he had never attempted to speak in public. Rising with caution and hesitation, he delivered himself "to the point," thus:

"Gentlemen, I am not used to public speaking, but in my opinion Dan Baxter would make an all-fired good deacon!"

It is superfluous to say that Dan Baxter was elected.

INFORMATION.—It may be convenient to know that a quart of flour weighs one pound, a quart of corn meal one pound and two ounces, a quart of butter one pound and one ounce, a quart of best sugar one pound, a quart of white sugar powdered, one pound and one ounce, a quart of best brown sugar on pound and two ounces.—Ten eggs weigh one pound, though this depends somewhat on the size. Sixteen large table spoonfuls make a half pint.

LITTLE Johnny was the pet and pride of his parents—a bright, blue-eyed, six years old. His father, one morning, after reading a chapter in the Bible, asked what a famine was. His quick reply was, "A cob without any corn on it."

Pets in the Army.

A correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial, with the Army of the Cumberland, says:

They have the strangest pets in the army that no one would dream of "taking to" at home, and yet they are little touches of the gentler nature that give you a cordial feeling when you see them. One of the boys has carried a red squirrel through thick and thin over a thousand miles. "Bun" eats hard tack like a veteran, and has the freedom of the tent.—Another's affections overflow upon a slow winking, unspectative little owl, captured in Arkansas, tearing a name with a classical smack to it—Minerva. A third gives his heart to a young Cumberland Mountain bear; but chief among camp pets are dogs.

Riding on the saddle bow, tucked into a baggage wagon, mounted on knapsacks growling under a gun, are dogs brought to a premature end as to ears and tails, and yellow at that; pug nosed, square-headed, brutes, sleek terriers, delicate morsels of spaniels, Tray, Blanch, Sweetheart, little dogs and all,"

A dog, like a horse, comes to love the rattle and crash of musketry and cannon. There was one in an Illinois regiment, and I rather think, regarded as belonging to it, though his name might not be on the muster roll, that chases half spent shot as a kitten frolics with a ball of worsted. He has been under fire and twice wounded, and left the tip of his tail at the battle of Stone River. But I was especially interested in the fortunes of the little white spaniel that messed with battery and delighted in the name of Dot.

No matter what was up, the fellow's silken coat must be washed every day, and there was need of it, for when the battery was on the march they just plunged him into the sponge bucket that swings on the rear axle of the gun carriage, clapped on the cover, and Dot was good for an inside passage. One day the battery crossed a stream, and the water come well up to guns. Nobody thought of Dot, and when all across a gunner looked into the bucket; it was full of water, and Dot was as dead as a dirty little door mat. Departed, mourned and buried, it is time I put a dot to his story.

Excuse for Polygamy.

The story runs, that once in the dark ages, a young man was brought before authorities, charged with having married several wives. When called upon for his defence, he said:—"It is true, most learned judges, that I have married several women, but judge for yourselves whether my object in so doing was not praiseworthy. A man has surely a right, if he buys an article for good and it turns out to be bad, to reject it. Now, I found that the first wife I married was ill tempered, the second lazy, the third false, and so forth. All I want is to get a good one and then I shall be satisfied." The bench after a short consultation decreed, that as it would be impossible for the defendant to find a perfect wife except in the other world, he should be immediately put to death, to enable him to look for one. How many indignant femenine readers think he was served just right.

IN Sangamon county, Illinois, many years ago, a little four year old fellow, playing in the street, fell down, and there upon set up a vigorous squalling. Just then a tall young man came along driving a yoke of oxen to the timber after rails. He picked up the little fellow and put him inside the gate, with the remark, "You will never make a soldier if you cry like that." His ambition was touched, and the little fellow stopped his crying and cleared up his face. He is now captain of an Illinois company, and the tall young man is the Chief Magistrate of the Nation, and Commander-in-chief of the Army and Navy of the United States. A fitting prognostication was this, of the man who was to lift up a down trodden race.

A Carpenter, who was always prognosticating evil to himself, was one day upon the roof of a five story building upon which had fallen a rain. The roof being slippery, he lost his footing, and as he was decending towards the eaves, he exclaimed, "Just as I told you!" Catching, however, in the tin spout, he kicked off his shoes and regained a place of safety from which he thus delivered himself; "I know'd it—there's a pair of shoes gone to thunder."

A BROOKLYN editor says that when he was in prison for libelling a justice of the peace, he was requested by the jailor to give the prison a puff.

Maxims for the Healthy.

Solid ailment thoroughly masticated, is far more salutary than soups, broths &c.

Fat meat, butter, and oily substances of every kind, are difficult of digestion, offensive to the stomach, and tend to derange that organ and induce disease.

Spices, pepper, stimulating and heating condiments of every kind, retard digestion and injure the stomach.

Coffee and tea debilitate the stomach and impair digestion.

Alcohol, whether in the form of distilled spirits, wine, beer, cider, or any other intoxicating liquors, impairs digestion and debilitates the stomach, and if persevered in for a short time, always induced a morbid state of that organ.

Narcotics of any kind impair digestion debilitate the stomach, and tend to disease.

Simple water is the only fluid called for by the wants of the system; artificial drinks are all more or less injurious; some more so than others; but none can claim exemption from the general rule.

Gentle exercise after eating promotes digestion more than indolent inactivity or rest. Violent exercises with a full stomach is injurious.

Sleep, soon after eating retards digestion, and leads to debility and derangement of the stomach.

Anger, fear, grief, and other strong emotions disturb digestion, impair the functional powers of the stomach, and deteriorate the secretions generally.

Dwarf Race of Men.

There is a singular race of dwarfs in Upper Peru, known as Chiquitos or little men, that are as worthy of attentions as the Aztecs. Everything connected with them seems to indicate that they are indigenous, though their general aspect gives the impression of a people reduced in statue by poverty and starvation.—The tallest are not more than four and a half feet in height, while many will not measure more than three and a half.—Their legs are apparently devoid of muscles, their eyes black and elongated, nose aquiline, cheeks drawn in, with high cheek bones, forehead low and retreating, hair black and wiry, and mouth tending to muzzle. They travel south on foot, and are often absent from home two or three years, returning with small hoards of silver gained in traffic, travelling about five or six miles a day. From long habit they can do without food an extraordinary length of time, supporting nature by sucking cocoa leaf, gathered from a shrub tree analogous to the betel nut of the East Indies. It is equivalent to tobacco, laudanum, or strong infusion of tea; and it is only when their animals die of disease they have a plentiful supply of food. Their covering is a coarse kind of cloth, which they prepare themselves. Their abodes are rude huts, and when traveling, they sleep on the ground, huddled together to keep warm on the dry cold desert where they are principally found. They are hardly raised above the level of the beasts around them.

Dreams.

Who cares for dreams? Who attaches any importance to the idle shadows that flit across the brain in sleep? It is in vain to ask such questions, or reply to them. We would despice dreams if we could, but their effect on the mind by no means depends on volition; places and things in external nature, peculiar in their localities, have been known to agree in a remarkable manner with midnight prefigurations, and to a visible testimony with respect to the oracle of slumber, which we cannot choose but recognize.—There are more things in heaven and earth than are understood—ay, or dreamt of, in the pride of our philosophy. And in spite of the sneers of skepticism, circumstances have actually occurred with reference to dreams, which are indeed out of the ordinary roll of events, yet not the less true, make what use of them we will.

MARRIAGE CERTIFICATES.—It is especially important just now that clergymen, in marrying a couple, should not neglect to give a certificate of the marriage, or make a registration of it. In the case of the death of a soldier, the widow must have a certificate of marriage before she can receive a pension. A New Jersey paper, in speaking of this subject, as it respects that State, says: "Upon searching the records within the past year for marriages, nearly half the unfortunate widows have been turned away with the remark; "The clergyman performing the ceremony has neglected to comply with the law.

A Good Turn.

A tinker was traveling in a country town, and having traversed many miles without finding anything to do, he stopped weary and hungry at a tavern.—Here he got into conversation with a glazier, to whom he related his troubles.—The latter sympathized with him deeply and telling him he should have a job before long, advised him to go in to his dinner and eat heartily. The tinker took his advice, ate his fill, and when he returned to the bar room he was overjoyed to hear that the landlord required his services to mend a lot of pans and kettles, which had suddenly 'sprang a leak.' The tinker at once fell to work, accomplished the task and received a liberal sum therefor, and started on his way rejoicing.—Upon reaching the outside of the house he found the glazier, who said:

"Well, you see I told the truth, I procured you a job of work, and how do you think I accomplished it?"

"I am sure I cannot tell," replied the tinker.

"I will tell you," rejoined the glazier.—"You told me you were weary, hungry and penniless. I knew the landlord was well off and doing a good business, so I watched the opportunity and started a leak in every tin utensil I could get hold of."

The tinker, with many thanks, and a heart full of gratitude resumed his journey; he had not proceeded many yards before he reached the village church, when a brilliant idea struck him. The glazier had befriended him—he would befriend the glazier. The church he thought could afford to bear a slight loss in a good cause so taking a position where he could no be seen, he riddled every window in the edifice with stones, and then, highly elated with his exploit, he retraced his steps to notify the glazier at the door of the tavern.

"Sir," said he, "I am happy to inform you that fortune has enabled me to return the kindness I received from you an hour since."

'How so?" asked the glazer pleasantly.'

"I have broken every pane of glass in the church," answered the tinker, "and you of course will be employed to put them in again."

The glazier's jaw fell, and his face assumed a blank expression, as he said in a tremulous tone,

"You don't mean that, do you?"

"Certainly," replied the tinker; there isn't a whole pane of glass in the building. One good turn deserves another, you know."

"Yes," answered the glazier, in a tone of utter despair; "but you infernal scoundrel, you have ruined me, for I keep the church-windows in repair by the yeart!"

THE FEMALE HEART.—The female heart may be compared to a garden, which, when well cultivated, presents a continued succession of fruits, and flowers, to regale the soul, and delight the eye; but when neglected, producing a crop of the most noxious weeds; large and flourishing, because their growth is in proportion to the wealth and richness of the soil from which they spring. Then let this ground be faithfully cultivated; let the mind of the young and lovely female be stored with useful knowledge, and the influence of women, though undiminished in power, will be like "the diamond of the desert," sparkling and pure, whether surrounded by the sands of desolation, forgotten and unknown, or pouring its refreshing streams through every avenue of the social and moral fabric.

HOME.—At home it is, and only at home, that we show the natural man, the real temper of the beast; perverse or sociable, overbearing, stern, or severe; our infirmities, whatever they are, the kinder pulsations of the heart, the more wicked emotions of the mend. If there be any bad blood in a man, he will show it, whenever he dares—whenever he can—but where can he show it more safely than at home, where his wife and children cannot help themselves and his people are paid so much a week to bear it? See him at home therefore, whoever he may be; good or bad; great or little, if you would know his true value. A man may be a hypocrite all his life before the public; but no man ever was, before his own family.

"Ah Jemmy," said a sympathising friend to a man who was just too late for the train, "you did not run fast enough."

"Yes I did," said Jemmy; "I ran fast enough, but I did not start soon enough."

Russia continues vigorously to prepare for war.

Fron Washington.

NEW YORK, Dec. 18.—The World's special says, The Senate Military Committee had a long session on the amendments to the conscription act. It is said that after an animated debate the $300 exemption clause was stricken out, and the two classes put into one. These are the only principal amendments to the bill, and will be reported to morrow, and an effort made to pass them at once, so that the House may have the bill on Monday to go to work and complete it bef re the adjournment is had for the holidays. The object is to prevent the postpo-ment of the draft on the 5th of January.

WASHINGTON, Dec. 18.-Mu'ual friendly and satisfactory explanations have taken place to-day between the Secretary of State and Lord Lyons, concerning the recovery of the Chesepeake and her crew within the British jurisdiction in Nova Scotia.

It was Representative Cravens, from Indiana, who yesterday moved to separate the resolutions of Representative Smith, of Kentucky, in the House, in order to have a vote upon them separately. This statement is considered proper to be made by some of the gentlemen who voted for and carried his propositions, for, while they were ready to vote for those declaring it the duty of Congress to pass all thanks to the army in the field, there was much in the first resolution which opposed an armistice, or intervention, mediation, or preposition for peace from any quarter, etc., for which they could not vote.

The Senate of Virginia, in session at Alexandria, passed a bill to day for the election of delegates by the people to convention to assemble in that city on the 26th of January, to alter and amend the State Constitution so as to abolish slavery in the counties of Accmac, Northampton, Princess Anne, Elizabeth City and York, and including the cities of Norfolk and Portsmouth. By the President's proclamation of January last all slaves in the remainder of the State are free. The act sets forth, as the reason for the change, that without, the executive and judicial officers of the State, in executing the laws between master and slave will be brought into conflict with the military authority of the United States.

In the amendment of the pay and bounty bill reported by Mr. Wilson to day, from the Committee on Military Affairs, bounties are confined to those enlisting previous to January, 1864, and after that no bounties to substitutes, and none to enlisted and drafted men, except the bounty of $100 now allowed, will be pa'd.

The same Senator reported back the bill amendatory of the enrollment act, adding a new clause abolishing the $300 commutation feature of the present law. It includes the enrollment of any person arriving at the age of twenty years, and any one who has not been in the service two years and honorably discharged; it it exempts a person who may attain his 45th year birthday before the enrollment and the draft, but abolishes the exemption of felons, and exempts none where relatives are wholly dependent on their labor for support unless actually supported by their labor.

Mr. Dixon's amendment exempts all persons recognized as clergymen by the ecclesiastical authority of their denominations.

Mr. Hendrix's amendment proposes two classes of enrolled persons, as in the present law, the second class not being law, the second class not being liable to be called till the first is exhausted.

WASHINGTON, Dec 22.

At the present time the Army of the Potomac is in the same position it has been since it recrossed the Rapidan, but an order to move for better quarters is expected, especially as the roads which a few days ago were rendered almost impassible, are now frozen hard.

As far as we can judge, the rebels have not changed their position.

Our men have made for themselves most comfortable quarters, impervious to frost and snow.

PHILADELPHIA, Dec. 22.—By a gentleman who left Richmond on the 20th we have the following later information: He says the Richmond papers of the 20th hove dispatches from Bristol, Tenn., stating that Gen. Longstreet, with his army, was advancing, and no doubt a battle would be fought in the vicinity of Jonesboro, Tenn. Reinforcements from Col. Jackson and Gen. Sam. Jones' command were going to Longstreet.

A dispatch from Meriden, Miss., reports that Joe Johnston's army is in motion, and it is conjectured that it intends to reinforce Gen. Hardee.

It is stated that the War Department has received information to the effect that there is little doubt but that the rebels have hanged the Captain, First Lieutenant and 80 men of a colored regiment, who were captured last June at Milliken's Bend, on the Mississippi. It appears that the prisoners were conveyed into the country several miles and placed in close confinement. No intimation of their fate was given them. After several days the two officers were taken out at the dead of night, and word given out that they had escaped. It now appears that they were hanged without previous notice or even a semblance of a trial, in obedience to a secret order from the rebel Secretary of War. A few days afterward the other prisoners also disappeared mysteriously, and there is little doubt that they also were secretly murdered by an order of the Richmond authorities.

No evidence is given here to the dispatch stating that Longstreet's force had been surrounded and Longstreet killed.—Government has received nothing confirmatory of such a statement.

Temperance Meeting.

The Temperance meeting met at Bidwell's Hall, Dec 19th 1863 according to adjournment, Rev. M. Nichols in the Chair.

The Secretary being absent, S. J. Fulton was appointed Sec. pro tem.

Mr. Baxter in course of preliminary remarks suggested that some means be taken to provide some entertainment for young men, a village Library, public discussions and a Lyceum.

On motion, resolved; the meeting engage in promiscuous discussion upon subjects connected with the cause of Temperance, each person to speak either voluntarily or as called upon.

Rev. Mr. Wishard introduced Rev. Mr. Tolles of New York, who addressed the meeting in a spirited manner, urging the necesity of furnishing a substitute for the Saloons, &c., instituting a young men's Christian Association.

Rev. Mr. Wishard next addressed the meeting, urging the first starting or moving of public opinion, in favor of strict Temperance, and making an earnest persistent effort for suppression of intemperance in our midst.

Mr. Baxter urged that vigorous measures be taken to raise the public opinion on the Temperance question and rescue all from the vices of intemperance.

P. R. Adams Esq. urged the use of Legal measures as most efficient in putting down the evil, reviewed the Laws of the State on Temperance question, showing them to be of sufficient force and well adapted to put a stop to all violations of the Law. He was for immediate action, to put a stop to the vending of sorits and offered the following Resolutions.

Resolved, 1st. That it is the duty of every citizen by his influence, and if necessary by his action co operative with the constituted authorities, to sustain and enforce the laws of the state which the people by their chosen Representatives have enacted.

Resolved, 2nd. That the Laws of this State, prescribed in an act, entitled, "An act to prevent the manufacture and sale of Spirituous or Intoxicating Liquors as a beverage," and the amendments thereto, are most important to individual welfare, domestic happiness and social order and prosperity.

Resolved, 3d. That the persistent violation of these salutary Laws, is an open avowal and declaration of disregard for the opinion and will of the People of this State; evidencing that the perpetrator is opposed to their individual, domestic, and social happiness and prosperity; and that for gain he is willing to defy and insult them, and bring into disgrace and contempt, the sovereign power of the people and the majesty of our Laws.

Resolved, 4th. That we will therefore, rightfully exert our personal influence and make all reasonable individual and associated efforts to enforce obedience to said laws, and to punish the violation thereof in the village of Tecumseh.

On motion the Resolutions were accepted and adopted seratim.

After some discussion, by Rev. Mr. Wishard, McLoud and Dr. Hamilton on Resolution 4th they were unanimously adopted.

On motion resolved, That the Secretary prepare a copy of the minutes of this meeting for publication in the Tecumseh Herald.

Moved by the Rev. McLoud that a committee of five be appointed to mature a plan for the establishment of a Young Men's Lyceum, Library and Reading Room in the village, and report at some subsequent meeting. Adopted unanimously.

Chair appointed Rev. Mr. Taylor, B. L. Baxter, S. J. Fulton, C. B. Thomas and P. Bills said committee.

Executive Committee recommend that when we adjourn, we adjourn to meet at this place, Friday evening, Jan. 8th 1864.

On motion resolved, that a Committee of three be appointed to mature a plan to carry into effect resolution 4. P. R. Adams, P. Bills and I. S. hamilton were appointed.

The Pledge was circulated and 28 names subscribed.

Adjourned to meet at 7 o'clock P. M. Jan. 8th 1864 at this place.

E. NICHOLS, Charman.

S. J. FULTON, Sec. pro tem.

The pews in St Peter's Church, will be rented for the coming year, on wednesday evening, Dec. 30th at the Church. To commence at 6 1-2 o'clock.

Memoir of John Coryell.

Alexandria, Va. Dec. 3d 1863.

MR. EDITOR:—On the morning of the 18th of Nov. he died. The first news of his death reached me on the 21st although I had made up my mind that it was impossible for him to recover, still I wept when the news of his death came to me. We were boys together, we were Christian together, we were soldiers together. In some things we differed, yet in spite of all our differences, I loved him, and I am not the only one that loved him.

He entered the service of his country in Aug. 1862, enlisting in Captain Saviers Co., and in Sept. went with the Co. to Camp Jackson, where they joined the 26th Regiment Mich. Inf'y. In Dec. following he went with them to Washington, and marched from there to Union Mills, Va. then back to this city.

Amid the changes of ice, snow and mud drenched occasionally by the heavy rains of this climate he did his full share of guard duty. Being prompt and neat, he made a good soldier, and gained the love of his officers and the men of the Co. but the storms of Dixie and the exposures of a soldier's life were too much for him; and after remaining with us through the winter; he was finally conveyed from the scenes of camp duty and from the company to the Hospital, where I often visited him and mourned to see his suffering condition

Amid it all he was patient and calm.—In August his father came;—obtained his discharge from the service and took him home. Although there were hopes for his recovery then; after reaching home he was taken worse, and amid intense suffering he continued to fail until death came to his relief.

He died in the days of early manhood, yet he lived to gain what we might all wish to possess; "an inheritance in Heaven." He died the death of the Righteous, for his last days were days of rejoicing. He is now free from pain, and our loss is truly his gain. Friends and fellow soldiers let us prepare to meet him.—While in the army he maintained his Christian principles, stood firm in theath of the religion he possessed, and left a good example for us to follow.

Parents and friends near to him; in your sorrow, we sympathize with you and while you feel that you have lost a son and brother—we feel that we have lost a true and tried friend. Long may we remember him and finally may we all meet him in Heaven.

A. W. HARDING.

Letter from Alabama.

BRIDGEPORT, Ala. Dec 5 h 1863.

DEAR FATHER:—Your kind letter was received this morning, and is the first and only letter I have received since I left the Regiment which was on the 3d of Nov. I wrote you hastily from Gallatin, of our unexpectedly receiving orders to Bridgeport. I started the same day I wrote, and arrived in Nashville all safe. I staid with the boys of Co. E that night and expected to start the next morning for Bridgeport, but was unable to get transportation; consequently had to lay over until the next morning at 4 A. M., at which time I started with Co D. Everything passed off first rate until we arrived about one mile from Wartrice, when we met with a sad accident. The first that I knew about it I was riding in the hindmost car, and was sitting about half asleep when I was awakened with a severe shock and found myself starting on double quick for the other end of the car; I was satisfied that something was wrong, and immediately rushed to the door. The cars were thumping about backward and forward, and the scene that met my eyes beggars all description. About the centre of the train the cars were turning over and the men who were riding on top of the cars were jumping in all directions; some of them were about twenty feet from the ground, there being an embankment of about ten feet where we run off. Not knowing whether the balance of the cars were going to run off and not waiting to see, I immediately made a break for terra firma and landed right side up with care. I immediately ran to the place where the cars were overturned expecting to find fully one half killed or wounded, but was glad to find there were only three killed and about ten slightly injured. We immediately set to work to get out those who were killed, and we buried them on a knoll a short distance from the Railroad. six of the cars ran off the track, four of them overturning. The wounded are almost all well. We immediately set to work repairing the track, which was destroyed for about twenty rods; the cause of the accident was the spreading of the track. We were detained until the next morning about seven o'clock, when we again started, and without further accident arrived safely at Bridgeport about dark, where I found my company encamped; they having arrived the same morning. I was extremely thankful to find myself with a whole skin; we were running quite slowly at the time of the accident, not more than ten miles an hour. There are at present six company's here, and they are getting along first rate, we have not had much time to drill since we came here, the men having been on fatigue duty almost all the time building a Railroad down to the Steamboat Landing, which I expect they will finish to day, and then we shall have plenty of time for drill. The men learn to drill very readily, in fact I think I never saw men learn faster; they pay strict attention, and one reason I think for their learning so fast is that the Officers understand their business, which is more than a great many Officers in white regiments do. We have got a splendid lot of Officers in the 14th; all of them men of good moral character, and understand their business. Taking men from so many different regiments I never saw a more agreable, social, gentlemanly set of men in my life. You have doubtless heard ere this that Grant is pushing Bragg and Longstreet in the well pretty last, at least six or seven thousand prisoners have passed through here on their way North.

Two or three days ago three hundred Officers were sent off in one squad, a great many of them are pretty well discouraged and some of them went so far as to say it was no use trying to hold out any longer, and they thought it highly probable that Grant would succeed in capturing the whole of Bragg's army.

Col. Breckenridge of Kentucky, son of John C. Breckenridge, was among the prisoners; from all accounts we can learn Grant has captured about nineteen thousand prisoners altogather; day before yesterday as they were bringing some of our prisoners across the pontoon bridge here, it broke loose and a great many were precipitated into the river, and about ten or a dozen wounded.

I must now tell you a little about the country through which we passed from Nashville to Tullahoma. The country is well adapted to farming but wears a desolate appearance at present, the fields are all grown with weeds, and the fences all gone. After leaving Tullahoma you come into a mountainous region and pass throug the Cumberland mountains in a tunnel about three quarters of a mile long. From there to Bridgeport the country is the roughest I ever saw; nothing but bleak mountains on each side; the road runs throug a narrow valley but little wider in places than the Railroad and taken altogather it is one of the most God forsaken countries I ever saw or ever expect to see, and yet report says it is not near so bad as it is between here and Chattanooga.

I was out foraging for boards about five miles, two or three days ago, but not a board could I find. We found an old log barn, however, which we stripped of the shakes and brought back to camp. We have got quite comfortably settled, and I hope we shall stay here awhile yet; we are encamped in sight of the river and also the Railroad. Steamers leave here almost every day with supplies for Chattanooga. Last evening Capt. Romeyn arrived from Gallatin with the company; he brought the mails from Gallatin for us in his valise, and had it stolen at Stevenson, and has not yet been able to get any trace of it; he had about forty letters for the commond, one at least for myself, and I was afraid it was one that I expected from you; but I must conclude, hoping these few lines will find you all in the enjoyment of good health, I remain your ever true an affectionate son,

Wm. WYRILL.

Luther Bosworth, of Walton, Eaton county, went out hunting on Sunday morning 13th inst, and soon after his lifeless body was found in the creek near by. The ball from his gun had severed an artery in his neck and passed on through his skull. His gun was found on the bank of the creek. It is supposed that while crossing the stream on a log, he had slipped, and perhaps threw his gun to the bank to prevent its getting wet causing its discharge with the above result.—A young man named Pierson lost his left arm by getting it caught in a circular saw with which he was cutting wood at the Bancroft House, in East Saginaw, on the 15th inst.

The 11th Michigan Cavalry reached Cleveland last Saturday en route for Kentucky, and remained there during Sunday. It is composed of a sturdy body of men. As they passed down Summit street Sunday altern on, their appearance was quite imposing, and we doubt not that they will do honor to themselves and the State from wence they came. About two hundred and fifty of their number have been left behind as a detachment to bring up the horses of the regiment.

Burglars are depredating in Jackson again. The dwelling of a merchant in that place was robbed of a valuable watch a few nights since and others have been robbed of clothing, &c.—The residence of F. Karstadt, in Marshall, was entered a few nights since, but the thief was frightened off by a dog.

The poles for the telegraph line from Owosso to Lansing have been set as far as Bath, and will be all up in a few days. Bringing our State Capital will be connected with the rest of the world by lightning.

The Malden Bank Robbery and Murder.

The boldness of crime in this country is indeed startling. On the 15th instant, the Bank of Malden, located at Malden Center, Mass., in the heart of the village, was entered at noon-day, and Frank Converse, aged seventeen, son of the President, who was alone in the bank, was shot dead behind the counter. Five thousand dollars in bills were taken from the drawer; the safe was untouched. The murder and robbery could not have occupied more than fifteen minutes, yet neither the passers-by upon the street, nor a gentleman who did business with the deceased at twenty-five minutes past eleven, and left him quietly reading a newspaper, nor his younger brother who entered about twenty minutes before twelve o'clock, and discovered the victim lying upon the floor behind the counter, heard the shot. He died without being able to disclose the assassin, of whom no trace could be discovered. A reward of $5,000 is offered.

The murderer will yet be traced out in all probability. As in the case of Streeter, the convicted murderer of the Coy family at Medina, a silent but conclusive witness may yet appear. Streeter in rearing open the money package tore some of the bank notes, and left the marks of his bloody fingers upon the envelope and the bills. The envelope was found, and some of the bills unmistakably traced to Streeter's possession, exactly matched the envelope in print and in blood spots!—Not a witness was called by the accused!—Cleveland Herald.

Death of Major Gen. Buford.

Major General Napoleon Bonaprte Buford died in Washington City on the 16th inst., after a severe illness, at the age of fifty-six years. The late chief of all the cavalry in the army of the Potomac was a native of Kentucky, and graduated at West Point in 1827, standing sixth in his class. He was commissioned a second Lieutenant of the Third Artillery in the regular army, and served in various capacities until 1835, when he resigned. He was then appointed resident engineer of the State of Kentucky where he superintended the Licking river improvements. In 1842 he became a merchant and iron founder at Rock Island, Illinois.

When the rebellion broke out, Gen. Buford took command of the 27th Illinois, in Gen. McClernand's brigade. He took part in the fight at Belmont, engaged in the reconnoissance behind Columbus, participated in the battles of Fort Donelson, and conducted the forced march by which Union City, in the rear of Island No 10, fell into our hands. The rank of Brigadier General was conferred on him in April, 1862, and he commanded a brigade under Gen. Halleck during the siege of Corinth. In March, 1863, Gen. Buford was ordered to relieve Gen. Turtle at Cairo, and after the fall of Vicksburg was called to the position in the Army of the Potomac, now vacated by his death. His nomination, as a Major General of Volunteers, was first made by the President last January. It failed of confirmation, and in recognition of his distinguished services the President again appointed him a few hours before his death.

GONE SOUTH.—The horses of the 11th Michigan Cavalry reached Toledo Tuesday morning, and were forwarded to Kentucky.

—A number of enterprising lads of Hudson, Lenawee county, having collected a subscription for the purpose, are engaged in constructing a skating park or pond on the premises of Senator Baker, who has generously granted the use of a portion of his land for the purpose. It is intended to overflow about five or six acres. A suitable dam has been constructed, and some three acres are already overflowed.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE. OF Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 180 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 150 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above, 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered farm and two other with lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store.

DRAKE'S STOMACHAL BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. GROWAY, Analytical Chemist.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday, the 9th day of November in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Sarah A. Cole, minor. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Benjamin L. Baxter, guardian of said minor, praying for license to sell the real estate of said minor for reasons stated in said petition.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 21st, day of December next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition, and that the next of kin of said minor and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

☞ Read the interesting correspondence from Wm. Wyrill, who was lately promoted to the position of 1st Lieutenant in a colored regiment.—Bill is a capital fellow and will make a brave officer.

☞ We are pleased to see an early closing movement inaugurated by the merchants of Adrian. Such a movement when it has been carried out in other cities has been productive of great benefit to the employees and caused no loss to the employers. Let all our merchants acquiese in this idea and make it general. —Adrian Watchtower.

Would it not be well for our merchants to follow the example of their Adrian friends in this matter.

☞ We are in receipt of the January number of that excellent and beautiful ladies friend, GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK.—This number commences the sixty-eighth volume, having been published under the direction of its founder, L. A. Godey, for thirty-four years, and during that time it has steadily grown in merit and in public favor, until it has no rival upon the continent. We cheerfully recommend it as the best ladies' magazine published.—Those of our readers who wish to subscribe for it can do so by calling upon G. T. Ketcham, in the Post Office.

Gleason's Literary Companion

This valuable Literary Weekly will commence a new volume January 1st, 1864, in grand style, with new type and an entire new dress throughout. The "Literary Companion" is an elegant, moral and refined miscellaneous Family Journal. Its columns are devoted to Fairie Literature, Wit and Humor, Prose and Poetic Gems. An unrivalled corps of writers and artists have been engaged for the coming year, and several new and popular features will be introduced. Each number will be beautifully illustrated. In size the "Literary Companion" is some fifteen hundred square inches, forming a mammoth weekly of sixteen octavo pages, and containing nearly twice as much reading matter and of a more refined character than any other weekly paper.—Terms, only $2 a year. Sample copies sent free. Published weekly by F. Gleason, corner of Tremont and Bromfield streets, Boston, Mass.

☞ An exchange says: While traveling recently in a neighboring State, we received in change a silver three cent piece. We were of course surprised, but kept discreetly mum. On retiring for the night, having first closed the blinds and secured the door, we took out the precious coin to indulge in a good look at its shining face, when we discovered, to our sorrow that it was bogus.

☞ The old established family newspaper, the Saturday Evening Post, promises to be more than usually interesting for the year 1864. In January it will commence a new English novel, by Mrs. Wood, entitled "Oswald Gray." The Post has so long ranked as a first class literary paper, that it needs no commendation from us. The best stories, sketches and general miscellany matter will grace its columns. Any one sending thirty subscribers and sixty dollars, will be entitled to a Wheeler & Wilson sewing machine. Terms: single copy, $2; eight copies and one to getter up of club, $12; twenty copies, and one to getter up of club, $28. One copy of the Post and the Ladies' Friend, one year, $3. Address Deacon & Peterson, No. 319 Walnut st., Philadelphia, Pa.

☞ John Davenport wishes to inform his friends and the public, that owing to sickness in his family, there will be no parties at his Hotel Christmas or New Years.—He intends to give a Hollidy Ball however, as soon as health is restored to the family circle. Adrian papers please copy.

☞ In regard to Wm. Dolan, that low-lived swell, who some weeks ago, we understand, that we spoke of last week, we have concluded not to say anything about his trying to cheat his landlord, and wash woman, or about his being taken with a warrant, or about his—or in fact about any of his many nidges. But we will notice him once in a while until we get that $4 worth.

READER, STOP AND THINK.—We suppose the mind of our reader may and use D. B. Deland & Co's Chemical Saleratus, but if there are any of you who do not, just stop and think that impure saleratus is very detrimental to the health of yourself and family, while the Chemical Saleratus is as pure as snow, and is therefore perfectly healthy. It is manufactured at Fairport, Monroe Co., N. Y., and for sale by most merchants and grocers in the country.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong;
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and hait,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has balted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Hayden's and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

U. S. 5-20'S!

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned as Special Subscription Agent will continue to supply the public.

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury, mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the legal tender circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period, absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from two to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes, it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come to seek a market for any other one or permanent Loan. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt execution that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin; these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half yearly, viz: on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50 $100 $500 and $1,000 or Register'd Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10,000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties, and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent. on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds fifty dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Railroad Stocks and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Bank and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds; and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as future commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

SUBSCRIPTION AGENT,

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so.—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

Address, ABEL J. WILLARD.
79 Nassau Street, N. Y.

Commissioner's Notice.

The undersigned having been appointed by the Probate Court of Lenawee County Commissioners on the estate of Adrian V. Yawger late of Tecumseh in said County deceased, and said Court having also allowed six months from the thirtieth day of November last for the creditors of said estate to present their claims to us for allowance. Notice is therefore hereby given that we will meet at the office of E. D. Burlingame in the village of Tecumseh in said county on the second day of January next and on the twenty eighth day of May next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon in each day to receive, hear and determine upon such claim.—Dated, Dec. 10, 1863.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.

OF

Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 180 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 160 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All or which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store

For a Medicine that will cure Coughs, Influenza, Tickling in the Throat Whooping Cough, or relieve Consumptive Cough, as quick as

COES COUGH BALSAM.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in its native town, and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quantity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to child, ren of any age

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

☞ No Family should be Without it. It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures is has made.

WANTED

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running-Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, tuck, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand; with directos so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilities for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

ORANGE JUDD, of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large percentage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR, in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense.

A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement, improved DUPLEX in full ruby action, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants, and persons traveling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING LEVERS

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our IMPROVED DUPLEX, and superior adjusted movements with "Stop," to be used in timing horses, etc; has Four Indexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second and all the improvements All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York,

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above

COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is the their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves, being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares: and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Compa Teas, which will be sent to all who orde comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS Sewing Machine is the best one, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam be cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee, more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Experiss.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

My Soldier Boy.

In a peaceful and quiet valley
They have laid my soldier boy,
The only one that was left to me,
And he was my pride and joy;
His country called for her loyal men,
And he quickly answered the call,
And well I remember how brave he looked,
As he stood in the old house hall

He had said good-bye and turned to go,
But stopped on the threshold and said,
Mother don't weep for your soldier boy
If he is numbered with the dead.
I watched him then as he opened the gate
That led from his childhood's home,
And I shed no tears for my dear brave boy,
Tho' he left his old mother alone.

But there came a time when the tear did flow
And the heart no comfort knew,
For they told me my soldier boy was dead,
And I knew alas it was true;
I'll dry my tears and cease to weep,
It is merely for the best,
That God has taken my soldier boy,
Into his eternal rest. Mrs. F. S.

The Midnight Ride.

BY EDWARD A. BARNES.

One cold winter evening, in the month of December, a party of rough, jovial men were seated in the bar-room of the only hotel of which the village of S——could boast. The fire, well supplied with logs of hickory wood, burned brightly, sending forth a genial warmth through the appartment, while ever and anon the merry click of glasses could be heard mingling with the boisterous laughter of honest mirth. The principal amusement of the company was story telling, they being backwoodsmen, and therefore were amply supplied in that line of amusement. The most important personage of this assemblage was a benevolent looking gentleman, who had arrived a few hours previous by the mail coach. From his personal appearance it was evident that he was above his companions in wealth; yet he entered into their jovial mirth with feelings which hid all pretentions of pride and station. At length the good natured landlord approached him, and laying his hand upon his shoulder, said: "Come, my good friend, you have listened to our stories and now it is your turn to tell one. Give us one of your city adventures?"

"Not so, my kind host," replied the gentlemen; "but your tales of backwoodsman's life have awakened in my memory a romantic incident that happened to me several years ago, and which, if it will be acceptable, you shall have it by all means"

"Let us have it!" exclaimed several voices at once, and immediately a quiet stillness pervaded the room, while each settled himself in a comfortable position and listened with interest, while the stranger related the following incident, to which I have given the above title:

"When I was a young man, my father purchased a large tract of land in the western country, which was an uncultivated wilderness. My father made me a proposition to go out to the west, survey his purchase, and make such arrangements for its proper cultivation as was necessary, which offer I accepted.

"As railroads did not extend in that direction as far as at the present day, and cherishing a strong inclination for the character of a hunter, I profited by this opportunity, and equipped myself with all the implements for such a journey.

"Bidding adieu to my parents, and to the loved one of whom I was the affianced husband, I started upon my journey. I reached my destination in due time, and transacted my business sooner than I expected During my journey homeward I was overtaken by a severe storm, and was obliged to seek shelter beneath the first roof that I reached.

"I was welcomed with true hospitality, and every comfort which the house afforded was tendered to me with great kindness. Mine host I found to be an intelligent man, whose pecuniary embarrassments had led him to leave the home of his birth and seek one in the depths of the western wilderness.

"His family consisted of himself, wife, and one daughter, of nineteen summers.

"My time being at my own disposal, I concluded to spend a few weeks in this interesting family, and enjoy the freedom of the forest and participate in the sports of a hunter's life. This resolution was seconded by the kind solicitations of my generous host. I found Mary to possess an amiable disposition and a mind of no ordinary culture, being well versed in nearly every branch of study and literature.

"She was also familiar with the exciting pleasures of her secluded home, often accompanying her father upon his hunting excursions, which to her was a source of great pleasure; yet, in the domestic circle she was the beautiful and affectionate daughter. These qualities, together with the sweetness and modesty of her demeanor, made her a very charming companion.

"Thus weeks passed by, and judge of my surprise when I found that my coming had awakened in the heart of Mary a passion which I was very far from wishing to encourage. It was evident she was deeply attached to me, and when I spoke to her the color on her cheek deepened, and I noticed also the interest she manifested to contribute to my happiness. When I descovered the light in which Mary regarded me, I was deeply troubled, for I could not encourage the love which I had unconditionally awakened in her bosom, and when I considered the strength of her character and her warm, loving nature, I was afraid that when she should hear of my previous engagement it would blight forever the happiness of her quiet life.

"I felt it my duty not to withold this information, and on the next day informed her parents of my approaching marriage. As I spoke I cast a rapid glance at Mary. Her face was almost crimson for a moment, and then a deadly paleness came over it, her hands trembled violently as she laid aside her work, and making some trifling excuse, left the room. From that hour there was a change in her appearance—a settled sadness seemed to hang around her; she seldom smiled, and I frequently observed traces of excessive weeping.

"The family had an intimate acquaintance who resided some twelve miles distant, his residence being near the line of settlement. A portion of the house was devoted to the business of a post office, and Mary frequently rode over and obtained whatever mail there might be, spending the night with her friends Her father at this time was expecting a letter of some importance which Mary should make the journey and ascertain if it had yet arrived. This proposition being made in my presence, I offered to accompany her, hoping at the same time that she would refuse it. But, to my surprise, she eagerly accepted it, and it was arranged that we should depart the next day, if the weather should prove favorable.

"The morning dawned clear and beautiful, and Mary seemed happier than she had for some time previous, and mounting our spirited horses we proceeded on our journey. We reached our destination in due time, and were received with great kindness and hospitality. The expected letter had arrived, and also one for myself, which gladdened our hearts, and we spent a merry evening. The next day, however, broke in dark and stormy, which prevented our anticipated departure; but towards evening the heavy clouds separated, the blue sky was again seen, and bright stars glistened in the heavens, rendering the air cool and delightful.—Mary now proposed to return home under the shadow of night, fearing lest her parents might feel anxious for her safety if she remained longer. Her friends and myself remonstrated against the proposition, knowing well the danger of such an undertaking. But she replied that she often tested the fleetness of her horse, and in emergency, knew how to use two small pistols with which she was armed. It was a long time before I consented to her wild proposal. But just as the vail of evening deepened into night, we bade adieu to our kind friends, and having seen that our weapons were in a proper condition, we mounted our horses, and guided by the clear, full moon, commenced our journey homeward.

"We proceeded at a brisk pace, while the courage as Mary kept up an animated conversation. Indeed there seemed to be a peculiar charm about her, as she rode fearlessly by my side, in the clear moonlight As we were leisurely ascending a hill, having completed nearly half the distance safely, a low, indistinct noise broke upon our ears. My companion started and turned deadly pale, as she suddenly checked her horse, looked backward and listened. Again it came, breaking the stillness of the night, but it was a loud, shearchly yell, And as its echoes died away in the dark forest, she exclaimed wildly, while her voice trembled with terror: 'My God! we are pursued by wolves!'

"Instantly our spurs were buried deep in the flanks of our horses, but this application was unnecessary, for fear hightened their already nettlesome spirits, and we sped onward with the rapidity of lightning.

"I looked towards Mary, expecting to see her faint or fall; but to my astonishment she remained calm and self-posessed. Her bridle fell loosly over the neck of her flying steed while she was intently examining the priming of her pistols, which she had taken from her belt.

"I followed her example, and while we were thus occupied the sounds of our pursuers became plainly audible. Now breaking out in one wild, indiscribable yell, and now dying away in the depths of the lonely forest, as the savage brutes drew nearer and nearer. I shall never forget that fearful moment, it is impressed deeply upon my memory—a more perilous moment one seldom meets with in a lifetime.

"With the skill of an experienced equestrian, the brave yet determined girl turned in her saddle, braced herself against the neck of her bounding animal. In each hand she held tightly a pistol, the barrels of which glistened in the pale moonlight, and with great calmness she awaited the coming of our dreaded foe.—I did the same, but with fearful apprehensions, not only for my own safety, but for the dear girl who had entrusted herself in my care, and I resolved to sacrifice my life, if needful, to save hers. The next moment, however, the hungry wolves (four in number) appeared in sight, their long lean bodies stretched to their utmost extremity, their red tongues hanging from their mouths, which were white with foam, while their eyes glared like coals of fire as they rushed on, howling, yelling, eager to pounce upon their prey.

"Amid this scene of imminent peril, I heard Mary's voice rising above the hideous yells of the wolves, as she exclamed: 'Be sure your aim is true; save your own life before mine.'

"At that instant the report of our weapons in in quick succession filled the air with smoke, and in a moment I had the satisfaction of seeing three of our pursuers stretched on the ground, weltering in their blood.

"But the fourth, a ferocious creature remained unhurt, and as if to revenge the death of his companions, he leaped, with a yell of rage, upon the back of Mary's horse and before I could prevent him, had fastened his fierce clutches upon her. Terror gave me the strength of desperation, and reining my horse as near as possible to that of Mary, and grasping a portion of her dress in one hand, with the other I made deep and fearful gashes in the wolf's body with my hunting knife.—This made him loosen his hold, and he fell heavily to the ground, while his victim, pale and bleeding, cast upon me a smile of gratitude as she sank with a murmur of pain into my arms.

"Our terrified horses, when relieved of their weight, darted off at a fearful speed and quickly disappeared in the darkness of the surrounding woods, leaving me alone, far from human habitation, and with a helpless maiden in my arms, wholly dependent upon me for protection. I greatly feared I should be again visited by others, and in that emergency, there was not much hope for either of us, yet I determined to defend Mary's life with my own. I carried her, bleeding and insensible, and laid her carefully upon a little rise of ground, then, after loading my pistols that I might be prepared should my enemies appear again, I administered to her such restoratives as circumstances would permit. I examined the wounds she had received, which satisfied me that they were not only dangerous, but probably would prove fatal. I bathed her head and hands in cool water to restore consciousness, and at length had the satisfaction of seeing my efforts crowned with success She opened her eyes languidly, and for a moment seemed lost in conjecturing what had happened; then as the events came to her she looked up into my face with an anxious expression of countenance, and said, "I hope you are not hurt, my kind friend?" "Not in the least," I answered. "But I fear you are seriously injured, yet there are no means of conveying you home as our horses have both disappeared."

She looked down at her wounded arm, and seeing the blood trickle from beneath my handkerchief, which I had placed around it, she slightly shuddered as she replied, "I think that will prove beneficial, for my horse is a well trained animal, and will no doubt go directly home, which will attract my parents notice and they will come immediately to our rescue."

Here she paused and seemed wishing to make some communications, yet hesitated about doing it, but after a few moments silence she raised herself to a sitting posture, gave me her hand, and while a sweet expression beamed from the depth of her blue eyes, she spoke thus:

"It was noble in you, my dear friend, to peril your own life in order to save mine, and from my heart I thank you, and if the wounds I have received should prove fatal I shall not murmur. My words may seem strange, and you may think me bold and familiar, but I have a few words to say, and here in the depths of the silent forest, with no one near but my God and you, I will speak briefly of my misplaced love.

"Your coming to my peaceful home excited a passion within me, deep and fervent, but when I found that the fondest hopes of my life could not be realized—that you loved and was beloved by another, and was even now upon the eve of marriage—that you were too good and noble to inspire hopes which you could not hororably fulfil, I loved you all the more, yet the truth was crushing to my heart and happiness. When you politely offered to accompany me upon this ride, which offer I so eagerly accepted, I observed your surprise, yet I did so upon the impulse of the moment, for an irresistable desire came over me to take this ride with you alone, before you left me to become the husband of another. This I have done, and from my heart I am thankful that I have received such injuries instead of you, for then two hearts would have been blighted with grief instead of one.—But my dear parents; who will care for them when I am gone? They will mourn deeply the untimely death of their only daughter."

Tears, which I could no longer restrain, came into my eyes, as this beautiful girl concluded her brief narrative, and I would have given worlds, had I possessed them, to have restored her to her former state of happiness. She observed my emotion, and again spoke earnestly:

"Are those tears for me? Have I indeed awakened your sympathy and interest?"

"I weep because I consented to your hazardous proposal which has endangered your life, and will bring deep affliction upon your beloved parents," I replied, with deep feeling. "They will blame me greatly when they know what has happened. I also am grieved to think that I have unconsciously awakened in your bosom a passion which I can not return with honor. Would that I never came here! then perhaps you might have been now, what you was before my coming, the pride and flower of your forest home.

Oh! what can I do by way of reparation?"

"Nothing, my kind friend, nothing," she answered, in a tone of sweet resignation, "and if you even respect me, do not again speak with so much self-reproach. There shall be no blame attached to you; for my return to-night is in accordance with my wishes, and against yours, and I abide the consequences cheerfully. I am happy, and but let me have my dear parents with me when I enter the "dark valley," and I will die contented!"

The poor girl was now thoroughly exhausted, both from the loss of blood and the effort of speaking, and she sank weariedly into my arms. As she lay there calm and tranquil, a sacred influence seemed to hover around her, and around that lone spot, which had witnessed a fearful adventure, the confessions of a disappointed heart and a spirit of sweet submission to God's inscrutable Providence. I felt its irresistable charm, and it made me silent and sad.

Her supposition in regard to the horses proved correct; for in a few moments, after this conversation, a bright, glaring torch was seen in the distance, a loud voice called to us, which we recognized as that of her father. I shouted in return, and soon he reached the spot, his countenance pale with fear and anxiety.—When he saw the dead bodies of the wolves and the wounded position of his daughter, he sprang from his reeking horse, and frantically asked an explanation, which I gave him as briefly as possible, then obedient to her earnest request, we constructed a rude bed, laid her carefully upon it, and proceeded sadly and slowly homeward.

It is useless to describe the agony of the mother when she beheld the pale features and bleeding form of her daughter, and it was only with Mary's pathetic entreaties, that she became calm, and to some extent reconciled.

We administered to her with tenderness and devotion, every comfort that lay in our power, and labored hard to prevent the coming of the "dead messenger, but in vain. Her hopes which had been crushed in this world, were now firmly fixed on God and heaven, and to enjoy eternal happiness there was her only desire.

She lingered with us but three days, when bidding an affectionate adieu to her bereaved parents her gentle spirit left us for another and better world.

After their daughter's death, my sorrow-striken friends left for their native State, and I never have had the pleasure of hearing from them since. Just before her death she gave me this little gift as a dying memento, and which I have kept sacred to this day.

The stranger paused, and as his listeners gathered around him, he exhibited a long, silken curl, neatly enclosed in a small box. Many were the tears which trickled down their sun burnt cheeks as they examined the golden ringlet and many were the expressions of sympathy which they expressed, as they thought of her ill fated death, while the "Midnight Ride" was often repeated to willing listeners around that old hearth.

Mrs. Partington on Watering Places.

"Are you going to any watering places this summer?" asked a young friend of Mrs. Partington, on a rainy day lately.—She said she had just put up the window to keep out the danp and disagreeable air, and pulled the handkerchief more up over her shoulder to keep of the chill. "Watering places," said she, with a gentle tap on the cover of the box, at the same time looking at Ike, who was engaged in making a kite out of the last Puritan Recorder, that the dame had just laid by for her Sunday reading, "watering places I don't think much of now-a-days. They ain't no need of 'em since the lunch motives have run off the trages; but once as the old pumps stood by the way-side under the ambiguous trees, with a hallow log for the cattle to drink out of, it seemed like a horses in the desert, as some of 'em used to say." "My dear madam," said her young friend, "I mean the fashionable watering places where people go to spend the summer."

"O!" she rerlied, "that's it, is it?—Well, we need'nt go away from Rome to find a watering place to-day; and them that do, depend upon it,"—here she laid her mouth close to his ear, and spoke in a whisper—"they go for something else besides the water!" She gave him a queer look as she said this, and pointed significantly to the little buffet in the corner, where an old-fashioned cut-glass decanter stood, surrounded by a dozen little glasses, as if they were young decanters, just hatched out, but what she meant we dare not attempt to explain.—Ike just then finished his kite by burning the holes for the belly-band" with the small point of Mrs. Partington's scissors, that had been heated red hot for the purpose.

The Falls of Minne-ha-ha.

About five miles below Minneapolis, and the Falls of St. Anthony, on the west side of the Mississippi River, a beautiful crystal stream from twenty to fifty feet wide, know by the Indian name "Minne-ha-ha," or "Laughing Water," unites with the great "Father of Waters." Not far back from the river, this creek falls perpendicularly over its rocky bed, about sixty feet, into a basin below, forming one of the most beaatiful cascades of which it is possible to conceive.

The lime-rock which forms its bed, so overhangs the underlying sand-rock, which has gradually crumbled away, that there is, at about half the height of the fall, a sort of space or shelf about twenty feet wide, and in a semi-circular form, along which one can pass, entirely behind the fall, from one side of the stream to the other, without being sprinkled in the least.

About four or five rods below the fall, and only a few feet above the water, a small foot-bridge is constructed, by which one can cross over, and also obtain a very favorable view of the fall, and feel the rushing breeze and mist which is put in motion by the dashing of the water.—From this point, too, one can see the graceful arches which overhang the sides of the fall, as they reach downward their slender branches, and swing gracefully in the passing breeze. Angles are they, beckoning us upwards to the highlands, where may the lover of nature worship in her simplicity and native beauty, where the hand of man has not yet marred her loveliness.

Forgiveness of Injuries.

One of the brightest attributes of the human character is a willingness to forgive injuries. Amid the trials and conflicts of life there are few persons who do not often feel that they have been injured, in one way or another, by some fellow being, and on such occasions it is too common for the heart to become fired with a desire to avenge the wrong committed. But happy is it for the injured party if the gentle angel of forgiveness triumphs over the demon of Passion, and calms the perturbed emotions into a sacred peace. We envy not the condition of that individual who cannot forgive a repentant offender for some wrong inflicted. An unforgiving disposition is more to be dreaded than the hydrophobia. Its possessor is not only an element of social discord, but he carries within his breast a magazine of misery, capable of working his own ultimate destruction. "To err" is pre-eminently "human;" we should to it, then, if err we must, that it be on the side and for the sake of Charity. Who can doubt that Heaven looks upon such errors with a leniency akin to approval?

ATTEMPT TO ESCAPE.—Gen. Archer, Gen. Jones, two captains and one civilian, prisoners on Johnson's Island, attempting to escape from the Island a few nights ago, by bribing the guard. The proposition was made to two of the guard and communicated to the officer of the day in advance, so that the final matter was anything but tragic. The guard permitted the men to escape from the enclosure and to reach a certain distance away, where they paid over the agreed sum, $200 to each of the guard. Greenbacks being short the amount was eked out with two gold watches. One of the guard received $150 and a gold watch; and the other about the same. As soon as the quid pro quo was handed over, the curtain dropped, other actors came on the stage, and the five adventurers were ordered back to their old quarters—minus expenses. Clearly that experiment did not pay! Sandusky Register.

A YOUNG HERO.—A gentleman, while passing through a street inhabited by poor people in New York, heart an infantile voice from a basement crying "Help! Help!" He rushed in and found a little five-year old boy holding a bed blanket around his little sister, years younger, who had caught her clothes on fire; and the little hero had succeeded in extinguishing the flames. The boy, in answer to the inquiry why he so wrapped the bed blanket about his sister's burning clothes, said his ma had told him that was the best way to put out the fire; and as to why he hallowed "Help! Help!" that he was afraid he could not succeed, and wanted some one to help him. He was then asked why he did not leave his sister and go into the street and cry for help. He answer with tears in his eyes, and a fixed determination of countenance, "No, I never would have left her. She was my sister. Had she burned up, I would have burned too."

AMUSING DEVELOPEMENT AT MEMPHIS.—A Cairo dispatch of Dec. 7, says, speaking of affairs at Memphis:

"On Friday the Provost Marshall had in custody several ladies, some of apparent respectibility, suspected of being engaged in smuggling goods into the Confederacy. Some strange developements were made. One had on a bolt of the finest linen, adjusted to answer the purpose of a bustle. Her corset was filled with pieces of gold coin, quilted in, to the amount of $1,200. Another had her form well rounded out with padding made of the best dress silk, worth five dollars and upwards per yard. Her hose were found to conceal a quantity of gents' cravats, which were swathed carefully about her legs. The third lady's ample hoops were found to cover a number of yards of broadcloth. Her bust was filled out by a miscellaneous assortment of articles, consisting mainly of jewelry, silk thread, needles and medicines.—The fair smugglers were detained in Irving block for trial."

SLANG ON THE STOCK EXCHANGE.—A Bull is one who buys stock on speculation, thinking that they will rise, so that he can sell at a profit. It is to his interest to have stocks rise, and he will resort to every means to bring about the desired result.

A Bear is one who sells stock on speculation, thinking that they will fall, so that he can buy in for less money to fill his contract. It is to his interest to break down the market, and he will resort to the most desparate means to accomplish his object.

A Corner is when the bear cannot buy or borrow the stock to deliver in fullfillment of their contracts.

BRIDE WORTH HAVING.—The Rockingham (Va) Register published the marriage of Miss Lucy P. Roller, the daughter of a wealthy farmer in that county, and adds:

"She was what we would call an independent girl, sure enough. Her bridal outfit was all made with her own hands, from her beautiful and elegant straw hat down to the handsome gaiters upon her feet! Her own dalicate hands spun and wove the material of which her wedding dress and traveling cloak were made, so that she had nothing upon her person when married which was not made by herself. Nor was she compelled by necessity or poverty to make this exhibition of her independence. She did it for the purpose of showing to the world how independent southern girls are."

DEATH.—Mrs. Agnes B Allen, widely known as the relative of old Ethen Allen, of Revolutionary time, and the possessor of the sword of the old hero—that sword with which the British commandant at Ticonderoga was menaced and compelled to surrender—died suddenly at Lamont, in this State, on the 3d inst.

The News.

Jan 12, 1864.

The Congressional doings of yesterday will be found quite interesting. Fernando Wood introduced a resolution for the appointment of a committee of investigation into Gen. Butler's acts, and other matters, which was summarily tabled. Mr. McDougal's resolution, in the Senate, concerning the French occupation of Mexico, will excite considerable speculation. The death of Senator Bowden was announced in both branches, and the usual marks of respect given. It is noteworthy that the Hall of the House of Representative is to be opened for an address by Miss Anna Dickinson.

A noted guerrilla has been captured near Culpepper, Va.

The death of a Maryland member of Congress from small pox is announced.

It is not believed in Washington that any danger is to be apprehended from rebel operations in the Shenandoah Valley, as the streams at this season of the year impose an insurmountable obstacle to the progress of an army. The guerilla Moseby, on Sunday morning, attempted to surprise a camp of our cavalry in London county. This is east of the Blue Ridge and bordering on the Potomac.—But the cavalry were too much for the guerrillas, and, after a hard fight, the latter were repulsed with considerable loss. A cavalry force has been sent in pursuit of the party.

Advices from Mexico are to the effect that the French are rapidly effecting a complete conquest of the country and the flight of Juarez to Texas is expected.

In St. Doningo no Spanish arms prevail and the insurrection is now well nigh put down.

Jeff. Davis in Tears.

A Richmond correspondent of the Mobile Advertiser, writes as follows:

"It is said the President wept when he heard of the misfortune to Gen. Bragg at Lookout Mountain and Missionary Ridge. Certainly the President was very much attached to that General. What is more to be point at present is the fact that the President is bending all his energies to retrieve these misfortunes. He has been in close consultation with the Cabinet for several days, albeit the result of the protracted meetings is not as yet known. I trust as this letter reaches it destination, the people of the Gulf States will receive tidings that the whole power of the Government is to be wielded in their behalf, and that its whole energy is to be concentrated against the invader. Already we hear of troops passing through Atlanta, and we have Bragg's official announcement of the retreat of the enemy back to his Fortress at Chattanooga. If the weather, roads and a badly punished army compels him to delay his advance till the spring, he will then find an obstacle in his path which will make him tremble.

☞ A case of apparent death occured in Berlin a few weeks ago, and naturally created to little sensation. The wife of a well-to-do merchant had, after a short sickness, suddenly expired in the night.—Next morning the corpse was carried, by women called in to prepare it for the funeral, into a retired apartment, when the usual operations of washing, &c, were performed upon it. The husband went out in the course of the day to make the necessary arrangements for the burial, when, during his absence, the neighbors were aroused by fearful shrieks proceeding from the dwelling of the deceased.—On entering the neighbors found no one at home, and finding the door of the room from which the cries issued locked, they broke it open, and to their horror discovered that the corpse had risen from the dead! In less than 48 hours the woman would have been buried in a living tomb—a casualty which, though happily prevented in her case by a speedy recovery from the fit, it is to be feared, carries off no inconsiderable number of persons every year.

☞ At an inquest lately held in England, a grocer certified that while he was pouring coal oil from a barrel into another vessel, a lighted candle being within three feet, he saw a small blue flame run along the outside of the barrel to the bung hole. Of what followed he was ignorant. But it appears that a terrible explosion ensued, for the grocer was pitched up into the street, insensible; his house was set on fire, the upper apartments quickly filled with a dease black smoke, by which three of his children were suffocated, while his wife and three other little ones barely escaped with their lives. This explosive stuff was found to be a very light coal oil, or naphtha, the vapor from which is highly explosive.

Letters from the Army,

CAMP 14TH U. S. COL'D. TROOPS,
Bridgeport, Ala., Dec. 26th 1883.

MR. EDITOR:—Presuming that some of your readers may wish to know more than they have had an opportunity of learning, of the plane of organization of the Colored Troops, and its success I take the liberty to address them by letter, through your columns, on the subject.

Having been connected in different ways with Colored Regiments and their officers, I speak from my own knowledge, and not from hearsay.

Mr. Geo. L. Stearns a wealthy merchant of Boston, who was among the first to propose the raising of the 54th. Mass. Reg't. the first Colored Reg't. sent into the field from a free State and who was secretary of the Massachusetts Emigrant Aid Society, at the time of the settlement of Kansas, and the subsequent trouble in that State, has the supervision of enlistment in this Department, ranking as Major, and Assistant Adj't. General. He is a man of great business capacity, large experiences, a good judge of character and devoted to the cause of which he has supervision.

Recruiting offices have been opened in many places in Tennessee and Alabama, where our troops are stationed and all Colored men between the ages of 18 and 45, who pass a rigid surgical examination are taken, if willing to serve as soldiers.—If the master can prove his loyality, and the fact of his slaves enlistment, he receives from the agent a certificate of the fact, which entitles him to receive from the Government three hundred dollars, as the price of his negro, if a rebel, nothing.

Six regiments are already in process of formation in the State of Tennessee, and are nearly full, and recruits are being received at the rate of about one hundred daily. The officers are selected from regiments now in the field, and are subjected to a severe and important examination as to their physical, mental, and moral fitness to command troops in the field and in camp. Field officers are generally appointed from line officers of old regiments, and the line officers from among the non-commissioned officers and privates of such regiments.

The Board of Examination holds its sessions in Nashville and some idea may be formed of the feelings of the army toward negro soldiers, when I tell you that our six hundred applications have been received from this Department alone. Of the number examined, the rejections will reach over two thirds. This system of examination while it ensures these regiments a first class of officers, opens a door for the promotion of deserving men who from various causes have not obtained commissions in white regiments, and as a class they cannot be excelled outside of the officers of the regular army. So much for the organization of the regiments.

Second; their efficiency: They have a great advantage over the white regiments, from the fact of the officers having had experience, and practical knowledge of their duties. They are also used to hard fare and rough living, and take more readily to soldiers fare and camp life, than the white soldiers. They are acclimated to the country and know the character of its inhabitants; and can gain information as scouts, when white men can get none. They make splendid pickets, and will do more fatigue duty than any white soldier. They learn the company movements easily, and many of them can shame old white troops in the manual of arms. They are easily controlled having been all their lives subject to a discipline compared with which that of the army is of the mildest character. As to their bravery, let Fort Wagner, Port Hudson and Vicksburg answer.

As a general thing they are very anxious to learn to read and write, and there are in this regiment, men, who six weeks since did not know a letter, who can, to-day, read quite fluently, and who will in six months shame many whites who have had the advantages of schools.—Officers have established schools in most of the companies, for the instruction of the non-commissioned officers, who, I should have mentioned are all colored men.

Books for beginners are badly needed for them and aid societies should send us a quantity. They also need for keeping clothing in order, small needle cases containing a few large needles, some linen thread &c. They take as much pride in appearing cleanly and neat as any other troops, and can obtain none of the little things from their homes, which go to keep the white soldier's clothing in order and at the same time Government allows less pay and a smaller amount of clothing per month than it does the white soldier, while it expects them to do as much duty and share the same fare. Neither do the non-commisioned officers receive the same pay as whites of the same grade. It is hoped that these things will be brought before Congress early in the present session, and they be placed on the same footing as white troops. While the arming and testing the efficiency of them was only an experiment, this was all well enough, but we have tried the experiment and succeeded, and now let us give them their just dues. They are fighting the battle for the white as well as for themselves and the whites should acknowledge it by giving the laborer his just due.

MORE ANON.

From the 17th Mich. Inf'ty.

X Knoxville, Dec. 3d 1863.

On the 14th of Nov. we received orders to pack up every thing and leave our pleasant winter quarters for this place and just as we got ready to start, the order was countermanded, and we went down the river some four miles below Lowden making a march of ten miles that afternoon and drove the rebels back across the river. The next morning before it was light we were ordered to fall back, and we came back to Lenoir before we had a chance to get anything to eat, and then we halted to get dinner and by the time we had nicely got through eating, we were ordered to fall into line, for the rebs were right upon our heels. We held them in check that afternoon and night so that the train could get a start, and the next morning (the 16th) before it was light, we started again for this place, a distance of 24 miles, and in 24 hours we reached here, stopping four hours to fight and one hour to get some coffee. Our regiment was in the rear and consequently had to do some tall fighting; the 20th Mich. and some others lost heavily. Our regiment lost in killed, wounded and missing 74, and only two of our company were wounded.

We reached this place just at daybreak, on the 17th of Nov. and commenced entrenching and fortifying, since which time, we have been diging nights and living in the ground in the daytime, like ground-squirrels and woodchucks.

On the night of the 20th the 17th Reg. were detailed to fire a house that was occupied by some reb sharp-shooters, which was done without the loss of a man; but while falling back the rebs commenced throwing shells, one of which bursted, killing one Lieut. and one private and wounding another.

On the morning of the 24th the 2nd Mich. were detailed to charge on some rifle pits, which proved a very destructive charge for them, loosing full one third their number, in killed, wounded and prisoners. Their Adjutant was killed and the Major wounded and taken prisoner.—On the night of the 28th at 10 o'clock they made a charge on our pickets and drove them in, taking eighteen prisoners from our regiment, and again just at the break of day, on Sunday, they made a charge on our fort, but were repulsed with great slaughter; we took three stand of colors, about 500 prisoners, killed 300 and wounded as many more; taking 1200 stand of small arms. We lost our Lieut. Col., killed. This is the nineteenth day since this fuss began, and when it will end, is more than I can tell. We are expecting an attack every hour, and are hourly expecting reinforcemets. Since we have been here we have had to live on less than half rations, and now all we have to the man per day, is 3-4 lb. of fresh pork and 6 oz of bread.

Our loss since this battle commenced is, as near as I can learn about 300; that of other side is upwards of thirteen hundred.

Dec. 4th. To-day still finds me well, and no peceable change of affairs here.

I think that it will be but a few days at the farthest before our fate will be decided. one way or the other, and as Sundays are the fighting days, I think day after to-morrow will be the test day.

Dec. 5th. We are once more out of prison, and dare raise our heads above ground in day-light without fear of having a ball put through it, for our rebel friends got up and skedadled for Virginia, last night and it is well for them that they did, for Gen. Grants army is here to reinforce us, and we would have had them surrounded before to-morrow night; they left in such a hurry that they did not have time to call in in all of their pickets, and they left a Georgia Reg. Our Brig. have gone to bring them in.

Dec. 6th.—

This morning was cold and lowry, but this afternoon is warmer, and more pleasant. All is still and quiet here to-day, after 22 days, shelling and fireing, but we are continually fetching in little squads of prisoners, and straglers, that fell out of the ranks, on the skedaddle.

☞ We give the following substitute for sleigh-riding: Sit in the hall in your night clothes, with both doors open so that you can get a good draft—your feet in a pail of ice water—drop the front door key down your back—hold an icicle in one hand and ring the tea bell in the other! They say you can't tell the difference with your eyes shut, and is a great deal cheaper.

☞ The Legislature of Alabama has voted that the carpets that cover the floor of the Senate Chamber, Hall of Representatives, and all offices and committee rooms in the Capitol at Montgomery, be cut up and given to the soldiers of the army for blankets.

☞ There is not a cotton spindle in motion at Lowell, Mass. The business has been prostrated by the war.

Proclamation.

Whereas, The President of the United States, by his proclamation of the 17th day of October last, has called upon the Governors of the different States to raise and have enlisted into the United States service, for the various companies and regiments in the field from their respective States, their quotas of three hundred thousand men;

And whereas, It has been judged necessary by many of the counties towns and cities of this State that provisions should be made for the payment of bounties to volunteers in such counties, towns and cities to enable them to fill their several quotas with volunteers, and that further legislation is necessary in order to give full faith and credits to the acts and obligations of such municipal bodies

Therefore, believing that such an extraordinary occasion exists as is contemplated by the constitution, I, Austin Blair, Governor of the State of Michigan, in virtue of the power vested in me by the constitution, do convene the Legislature of this State, hereby requiring the Senators and Representatives to assemble in their respective chambers at the Capitol in Lansing, on Tuesday, the 19th day of January next, at 12 oclock, noon, then and there to consider and determine upon the measures proper to be adopted in regard to the payment of such bounties to volunteers, and the legislation of acts already done for that purpose, and all such other subjects as may be brought before the Legislature in pursuance of the constitution.

In testimony whereof, I have hereunto set my hand and caused to be affixed the great seal of the State, at Lansing, this 15th day of December, in the year of our Lord one thousand eight hundred and sixty-three. AUSTIN BLAIR.

JAMES B. PORTER, Sec. of State.

A MONSTER IRON CLAD.—The Minotour, which was launched a few weeks ago in England, is a monster, beside which even the celebrated Warrior shrinks into diminished proportions. Her capacity is 6,812 tons, which would make her nearly three times as big as the North Carolina, seventy-four gun ship, which has so long lain at the Brooklyn Navy Yard. The Minotour differs in some important respects from the Warrior and other British iron-clads. She is sheathed from bow to stern with iron plates five and one-half inches in thickness, while the Warrior is armored only in the midship section; and that with iron an inch thinner. The Minotaur is thirty feet longer than the Warrior. Her armor will weigh one thousand tons; her engines are to work to thirteen hundred and fifty horse-power; she is expected to steam fourteen miles an hour. Her armor is fastened to nine inches of tough Tennasserim teak. The ship is four hundred feet long, sixty feet wide, and draws twenty-five and a half feet—a very moderate draft for so huge a vessel. She is to have two sisters now on the stocks, the Agincourt and Northumberland.

☞ Among the curiosities on exhibition at the Sanitary Fair in Boston are numerous relics of Washington—his sash, saddle, epaulets, cane, with numerous autographs and letters; sword of Miles Standish; lock of the gun which killed Killed Philip, of Mount Hope, in 1676, and a wooden bowl taken from Phillip's wigwam; a Bible printed in Venice in 1478, before printing was introduced into England, and numerous rare and letters.—There are also exhibited the shoes worn by the royal family of England, and a pair of shoes purchased in Georgia by a young lady who arrived in Boston last Sunday. The shoes are coarser than any young lady would wear here and are laced with white cord. Yet the lady paid $40 for them, and refused to sell them for $50.

☞ A curious accident occured last month on the Central Railroad near Oriskany, N. Y. The boiler of the locomotive exploded while the train (a freight) was under full headway. It was thrown some fifty rods from the track into an adjacent field, destroying fences, &c., in its course. The fragments of the locomotive flew in every direction, severely wounding the fireman, conductor, and one or two others. The accident is considered one of the most remarkable on record.

☞ There are in the Thirty-Eighth Congress ninety-two lawyers, twenty-three merchants, five editors, eight farmers, three manufacturers, two mechanics, three bankers, one chemist, and forty-seven of other avocations, making in all one hundred and eighty-six members.

MODE OF DISTRIBUTION.

To distribute these gifts, there will be a committee appointed from the audience present at the entertainment who will count the names of the 500 owners of the gift tickets; they will then be put into a box, and a small boy, blindfolded will draw them out, and the first name drawn out from the box will be entitled to gift No. 1, which will be the Gold Watch.—The next name out will be entitled to gift No. 2, which is the Cutter and so on until the first 90 gifts are distributed.

To distribute the 350 engravings they will be divided into seven classes of 50 each and numbered respectfully from 1 to 7. After the first 90 gifts are distributed the next 50 names drawn from the box, will each be entitled to one of the engravings of the first class. The next 50 names will each be entitled to one from the second class. The succeeding 50 to the third class, and so on until all the engravings are distributed.

The first name drawn in each class will be entitled to the first choice in their respective class. The second name drawn to the second choice and so on until each class is distributed. After the 350 engravings are distributed, the 60 names remaining in the box will each be entitled to one of the 60 valuable Books. The first name drawn being entitled to the first choice, the second name to the second choice and so on until all the books are distributed.

A record of the name of the purchaser of each ticket is kept in a book which is open to public inspection, the names in the box will correspond to the names recorded. Consequently persons can satisfy themselves that the names are deposited by seeing that their names are recorded as aforesaid, as the committee appointed will compare the list of tickets with the list of names put into the box.

TICKETS ONE DOLLAR EACH,

For Sale by G. T. Ketcham & Co. Tecumseh; Wm. St. John, Clinton; George Morey, Manchester. Persons from abroad wishing tickets can remit the amount to G. T. Ketcham & Co., and receive their tickets by return mail.

We have seen accounts in our exchanges which state that the mercury during the late severe cold fell from 30 to 35 degrees below zero.

The friends of Rev. H. L. Hayward are invited to make him a Donation visit at Union Hall, on Thursday, Jan. A general invitation is extended.

The dwelling house of Orlin Hiscock, of York, Washtenaw County, with all its contents, except one bed, was consumed by fire on the evening of January 5th. Loss $600.

On January 7th, T. Deuel, of this village, bought of David Boyd, of Raisin, 8 dressed hogs, which weighed 3472 pounds, for which Mr. Boyd received the snug sum of $269. Who can beat this?

It is stated upon the best of authority that the costume of the Spanish ladies has not changed for two hundred years. If we can import a lot of these femmines, we warrant that bachelors will be a scarce commodity.

A scamp, named John Arlin; was brought before Esq. Backus, of Adrian, on Thursday, on the charge of stealing a horse and buggy. The offence was committed last fall. The man is a bigamist, also, judging from developments.

Cane Grower's Association.

Cane Grower's Association of Michigan will hold its annual meeting at Adrian, on Wednesday, the 20th inst. Liberal premiums will be offered for the best samples of sugar and syrup made from sugar cane, samples consisting of one gallon of syrup and not less then ten pounds of sugar. The Michigan Southern Railroad Company will give return tickets free to all who attend the convention.

Lady's Friend.

This periodical merits the above name. We are in receipt of the January number, the first issue of this new Magazine, and we assure our lady friend that it ranks among the first class Magazines. Its embellishments are all that can be desired; it contains the fashion plates and a beautiful steel engraving. It is edited by Messrs. DEACON & PETERSON, who have long enjoyed the popular opinion of the American press. This work has also a large number of able contributors.—Terms: $2 a year; two copies, $3; four copies, $5; eight copies, and one to the getter up of the club, $12. Those desirous of becoming subscribers will address DEACON & PETERSON, 319 Walnut street, Philadelpia.

"Shall I Learn to Dance?"—asks a young reader. Certainly, by all means. Commence with the "Quickstep" out of bed in the morning, and keep it up till the "chores" are finished. The boys will of course have a "cowdrill" of milking at the barn, while the girls are engaged in a "country dance" in the kitchen. After this all hands "change" and promenade to school, keeping step to merry laughter. Repeat the same on the way home at night with an occasional variation in winter by "tripping the light fantastic toe." and having a "break down" in a snow-bank. A "reel" now and then will do for the girls who have learned to spin, but boys should not think of it.

Godey's Lady's Book

January number, the commencement to Vol. 68, is received. This peerless Magazine for Ladies has established its empire over the department of literature to which it belongs. It is the highest authority on the fluctuations of the fickle Goddess fashion, at whose shrine Ladies present their ardent devotions. The double sheet fashion plates, steel plate engravings, illustrations and music form attractions unequalled, and, added to its choice literary articles, constitute it the most popular magazine of the time. Nobody to blame; New years story; Alice B. Haven; The young artiste a Tableau picture; Adventurers of a Bachelor; and other articles in this number present attractions of which our many lady readers cannot well afford to deny themselves.—Terms, cash in advance—one copy, one year $3.00. Two copies one year $5.00. Three copies one year 6.00; Four copies one year $7.00. Five copies one year and an extra copy to the person sending the club $10. Address L. A. Godey 323 Chesnut Street Philadelphia, Pa.

We will furnish the Lady's Book and Herald for $3.50 for one year, paid in advance.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

The New Year and the Old.

BY S. L. BAXTER, ESQ.

Another Year is dead.—
Gone to the unreturning past;
And leaves us standing in its stead
A New Year, like the last.
And yet, who knoweth that the year to be,
Shall liken that gone to eternity?

Nor you, nor I can tell,
What it may bring, or fail to bring.
If sorrow's gloom, or pleasure's spell,
Shall gild, or cloud, its wing;
Yet this we know, and this can surely tell;
He ruleth it "who doeth all things well."

The past year hath its wail,
(Mingled indeed with hope and trust in God,)
As on the mountain top, or in the vale,
Where'er we turn, we see the burial sod
Of those, who in their country's hour of need
Failed not in her defence to do and dare, to bleed

And die,—and dust to dust,
Is all that now remaineth here on earth,
To those they loved, and died for,—in the trust
That future years should vindicate their worth.
Nor shall they fail in that appeal sublime
To the sure verdict of undying time.

Like those old heroes of Thermopylae,
And Marathon, like Wallace, Bruce and Tell,
The demi gods of ages shall they be;
And consecrate the ground whereon they fell;—
And the proud pages of our country's fame,
Shall brighten, as her children speak their name.

But to the traitor—woe!
Or north or south—for it is all the same,
A traitor still, and still his country's foe,
What'er his lineage, or what'er his name,
It matters not to freedom's sacred cause;
A rebel still in soul, and base at heart,
A craven foe, who loves yet dare not stand
Among his country's foes, and take a foeman's part.

Leave too to Time,
That fearful Nemesis of human life,
The record of their infamy and crime,
Their devious part in that unholy strife
Which, causeless, gaunt Rebellion's gory hands
Have raised and waged against the very throne,
And altar stones of freedom, in all lands,
And for all time, and not for ours alone.

Their memory shall rot,—
And the foul heritage shall still descend
Unto their children's children, unforgot,
But loathed, abhorred, despised, and hated, to the end.
O! better far to meet a felon's doom,
Than bury all you love, in such a tomb!

But for the year to come,—
We hail its hopes, and heritage, and trust
Generous its soldiers, as its harvests, home;
And that our brethren, (soiled with toil and dust,
War's fearful work and carnage, waste and wear,
And labor so'er, its glorious victories won,
Shall come once more our homes and hearts to share,
And all the land rejoice that freedom's work is done.

"God and the Right," they said,
Those stern old heroes, in our father's day,
And He of old, who led
His chosen people on their devious way,
Through wilderness and waste, hath led us too,
Thro' a Red-Sea of carnage, though it be,
And he will lead us, if we prove but true,
To Him, and His, to Peace and Victory.

The world moves on,—
Tyrants and thrones may plot
Against God's laws and rejected one,
And strive his memory from the earth to blot,
But they shall crumble, ere His word shall fail,
And perish, ere the least of all His care
Shall fail of what He giveth—when the wail
Of the oppressed, goes up to Him—beware,
God is his own Avenger, everywhere.

Tecumseh, Jan. 1st, 1864.

We are happy to learn that our fellow townsman A. V. Yawger whose death was announced a few weeks ago, was insured in that old and reliable company the New York Life, for fifteen hundred dollars, and as will be seen by a card from the widow Mrs. Mahala Yawger, that the amount has been paid to her by Amos Stocking Esq. travelling Agent for the Western Branch of the Company at Detroit.

In time of health prepare for death, and make preparation for your families, by calling upon Mr. Stocking who is always ready to wait on you.

A Card.

TO S. A. HAYMON ESQ.—General Agent, Western Branch New York Life Insurance Company, 75 Griswold Street Detroit Mich.

DEAR SIR:—Although under deep affliction, I take pleasure in being permitted to express my sincere thanks to your Company for the prompt payment of fifteen hundred dollars, through your travelling Agent (and our neighbor and warm friend) A. Stocking, being the amount of a policy obtained by my lamented husband, for my benefit, less than two years ago, which leaves testimony to the affection and forethought that prompted him to, so timely a provision.

Sword Presentation.

It with pleasure we give publicity of the pleasant interview, between a delegation from Tecumseh and Captain James E. Merritt, of the 11th Michigan Cavalry, at Camp Lee, Kalamazoo, on the 16th ult., on occasion of presenting him a sword provided by the citizens of the former place with whom he had long resided.

S. H. Niblack, Esq., in behalf of the delegation made the presentation accompanying it with the following appropriate remarks:

"It is with great pleasure, Captain, that in behalf of the citizens of Tecumseh, who from your boyhood have witnessed your toils, struggles and final conduct, I now greet you. Called from time to time by our citizens, to places of public trust in our civil relations, and now in a new sphere, clothed with the ensignia of military command, you are about leaving the quiet walks of peace for the stirring scenes of war. Those citizens seek with a token becoming your present position to give further expression of their esteem, increased were it possible by your present noble position, as their representative for the defense of the constitution and laws of our country—the liberties of our land.

From those citizens then accept this trusty blade, with the charge that you wield it against leagued traitors and rebellion until the flag of our fathers float triumphantly over every foe. With it go forth and win its admiration, as we believe you already have the confidence of your superiors in command; with it set an example of heroism that shall inspire every every soldier to noble deeds; with it go forth another chosen defender of our homes and firesides, your and our dear ones. Resheath it only when the citadel of liberty—the beacon light of struggling humanity—the glorious government of our fathers is safe from anarchy within and conspiracy without.

Finally Captain may the approval of the God of battles with whom the future and present are alike open, be always with you in blessing and at length bring you in safety to your family now so nobly sacrificing their comfort and happiness to the public good, and to receive the thanks of your fellow citizens which shall be in waiting your appearance.

At the close of these remarks the Captain in brief responded, heartily thanking the delegation for the kind feeling expressed in the words of cheer and confidence to which he had just listened, and amply manifested in the priceless gift the citizens of his home residence had presented him. Tell them said the Captain, I accept this token deeply sensible of the flattering compliment it bears, and assure them that I will to the utmost of my ability, and with the zeal of a patriot, wield it against the foes of my beloved country.

Death of Mrs. John Steele.

It is with no ordinary interest we record the death, at Toledo, Ohio, on New Year's night, of Mrs. Mary Louisa Steele, aged twenty-nine years, wife of John Steele, of Plymouth, Michigan, and daughter of Mrs. C. M. Bissell, of this village.

The deceased was on a visit at the house of a relative in that city and retired to rest in her usual health and cheerfulness. An hour later she requested a physician, complaining of difficult breathing, and in a half hour more her spirit had passed from earth as we trust to a blissful immortality. The funeral was attended from the house of her mother on Tuesday the 5th inst., by a large concourse of friends.

Thus fearfully sudden hath gone from our midst, one long and widely esteemed. Although almost a life-long sufferer she has ever borne herself through all her trials with remarkable patience, constantly exhibiting that lovely disposition, unselfish and self-sacrificing demeanor so eminently her characteristics. No wonder the intelligence of his sudden bereavement fell with terrible effect upon the absent husband, inflicting a wound no human sympathy can heal.

Married.

In Tecumseh, Jan. 6th, by Rev. J. L. McCloud, Mr. M B. McCONNEL to Miss HARRIET McCOLLUM.

Also by the same, on the 13th inst., at the residence of Mrs. M. Yawger, Mr. FRANCIS VANCAMP, of Woodstock, and Miss FRANCES C. YAWGER, of this village.

Also by the same, and at the same time and place, Sergt. MYRON C. WADE to Miss MARTHA VAN CAMP.

In South Macon on Thursday evening, Jan. 7th, by Rev. W. J. Skillman, GEORGE HOWELL, M. D., to ANN AMELIA, daughter of J. L Remington, Esq., both of Macon.

May happiness be theirs through life.

U. S. 5-20'S

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "Agents Subscription Agent," will continue to supply the public.

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury, mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period, absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes, it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come, to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking associations, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt conclusion, that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium, as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin; these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds which are payable to bearer, and are $50 $100 $500 and $1,000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10,000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent. on the amount of income which the income of the holder exceeds Six Hundred dollars per annum all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Bonds, Stock and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds, and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is sustained, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong;
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and hold,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and Try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

$100 REWARD.

For a Medicine that will cure Coughs, Influenza, Tickling in the Throat Whooping Cough, or relieve Consumptive Cough, as quick as

COES COUGH BALSAM.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in this native town, and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quantity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound.

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to children of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

☞ No Family should be Without it.

It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you; it may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures is has made.

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, tuck, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitches, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand; with directions so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilities for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider its important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS constant use."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good Canvasser wanted in every town.

These Machines make the lock-stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c. and better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marsailles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle, or tension, or making any adjustment of Machine whatever!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (93 Cents) per pound above

COST.

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculiarity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devoter his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no Judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares: and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order, comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best adapted without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,

Braiding,

Hemming,

Felling,

Tucking,

Cording.

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub.

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"Machine, in the opinion of the committee, nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as the simple thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitch is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have ex-perience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We estimate it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits,	Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of three eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 6 boxes for $1.

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the absorbents into healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCEOUS depositions, and UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MAN, WOMAN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excessive Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion.	Loss of Power.
Loss of Memory.	Difficulty of Breathing.
Weak Nerves.	Trembling.
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness.
Dimness of Vision.	Pain in the Back.
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body.
Hot Hands	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin.	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which thi medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases"

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female.

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations, Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the

TEMPERANCE REPORT.

At a meeting of the Tecumseh Temperance society, at Bidwells Hall, Dec. 19th, 1863, P. R. Adams offered the following resolutions:

Resolved, 1st. That it is the duty of every citizen by his influence, and if necessary by his action co operative with the constituted authorities, to sustain and enforce the laws of the state which the people by their chosen Representatives have enacted.

Resolved, 2nd. That the Laws of this State, prescribed in an act, entitled. "An act to prevent the manufacture and sale of Spirituous or Intoxicating Liquors as a Beverage," and the amendments thereto, are most important to individual welfare, domestic happiness and social order and prosperity.

Resolved, 3d. That the persistent violation of these salutary Laws, is an open avowal and declaration of disregard for the opinion and will of the People of this State; evidencing that the perpetrator is opposed to their individual, domestic, and social happiness and prosperity; and that for gain he is willing to defy and insult them, and bring into disgrace and contempt, the sovereign power of the people and the majesty of our Laws.

Resolved, 4th. That we will therefore, rightfully exert our personal influence and make all reasonable individual and associated efforts to enforce obedience to said laws, and to punish the violation thereof in the village of Tecumseh.

After discussion the resolutions were unanimously adopted, and P. R. Adams, P. Bills, and I. S. Hamilton, were appointed a Committee to propose a plan to carry these resolutions into effect, and to report to this society, at its next meeting to be held at the same place, on the 8th, of January 1864.

At that meeting held on that day, the committee submitted the report following, which the society unanimously accepted and adopted:

Report.

To the President, Ladies and Gentlemen of the Tecumseh Temperance Society:—

Your committee, appointed at your last meeting, to report a plan to be persued in executing resolutions passed by you at that meeting, submit the following report

The Law.

The first section of this act enacts "That no person shall be allowed to manufacture or sell, at any time, by himself, his clerks, servant or agent, directly or indirectly, any spiritous or intoxicating liquors, or any mixed liquors, a part of which is spiritous or intoxicating" except as in that act specified.

The only specified exceptions are.

1st. That alcohol of commerce, of certain strength, may be manufactured, but shall not be sold in this state except to sellers of drugs and medicine, who shall have given bonds as therein designated.

2nd. That sellers of drugs and medicines who shall execute a certain bond with surities, having certain conditions, may sell these liquors as a medicine but not as a beverage, and to be taken away and not drunk on the premises. If they violate the conditions of the bond, they become unlawful sellers.

Some of the conditions are the following: Liquors can only be sold as a medicine, or as a mechanical or chemical agent, or wine for sacramental purposes; and they must not be sold to any person who is a drunkard, nor to persons in the habit of getting intexicated. Each sellers of drugs and medicines must keep a book, open to the examination of even elector of the township or village, in which shall be recorded the name of every person, who shall purchase liquor of him, the quantity and kind on each occasion, and the declared use or purpose for which the same was purchased. He must enquire of every applicant for liquor the purpose or use for which he wants it, and he must elicit an answer. He must not sell it to a minor, without the written consent of his father, mother or guardian. A false representation of the purpose for which the applicant wants the liquor subject him to the the same punishment as the unlawful seller.

3d. The act allows the manufacture of cider and wine from apples and grapes grown in this state, or of beer made in this state; but does not allow in any case such beer to be sold in less quantity than five gallons, nor such wine and cider in less quantity than one gallon, and to be sold to be and all be taken away and not drunk on the premises. If sold in less quantity or to be drunk on the premises, it is an unlawful selling, and punishable as such.

The giving away of any of these liquors, or any other shift or device, with intent to evade the provisions of this act, is deemed an unlawful selling, and punished accordingly.

Clerks, agents and servants of another, who sell these liquors contrary to law, are declared equally guilty as principals, and may be prosecuted for the same as such.

If any person knowingly solicits or encourages any person who has previously used intoxicating drinks habitually and injuriously, to use as a beverage any such liquors; or if he shall voluntarily, directly or indirectly, give any such liquor, or cause the same to be given, to such person; or shall, with intent to have any such person drink or use them, place any such liquor, or procure or cause the same to be placed, where such person may obtain the same, to be used as a beverage, such person thereby becomes liable to the same punishment as an unlawful seller.

A person found intoxicated in any place other than a private dwelling-house, may be compelled by subpœna and attachment to appear and testify when, where and of whom he received the intoxicating liquor: and if the wife or child of any person found intoxicated, in any private dwelling-house, shall make oath of any such intoxication, he may also be compelled in the same manner to testify to the same facts. The facts so elicited become, when reduced to writing, a sufficient complaint for a prosecution against the offender.

The punishment for the transgression of any of these prohibitions are, on the first conviction, a penalty of ten dollars and costs, and the offender to be committed to jail until the same are paid; on the second conviction, twenty dollars and costs, and imprisonment until the same are paid; on the third and any subsequent conviction, one hundred dollars and costs, and, in addition, imprisonment not less than three, nor more than six months.

These punishments are to be inflicted on occasional offenders. If a person is convicted as a common seller or as a manufacturer, the penalties are doubled, and imprisonment for the definite period of six months is added.

These double penalties and this definite term of imprisonment for six months, is the prescribed punishment for offending innkeepers, grocers, saloon keepers, and druggists who have not complied with the law.

To inflict these punishments, actions of debt may be instituted and prosecuted by the Prosecuting Attorney, or by any person who is a resident of the county; or proceedings may be by indictment in the Circuit Court.

It is also made the special duty of the Common Council, attorney or alderman of any city, the board of trustees of any village, and of each of them, and of the Supervisor of the township, to institute suits, without delay, if either of them knows, or has reasonable evidence of the commission of any such offence.

A complaint on belief alone, if the complainant is unacquainted with the facts, may be made. On such complaint the Court may issue subpœnas for the witnesses, compel their attendance and them to give evidence to prove the facts of the complaint.—The truth of the complaint, and all the necessary facts to ensure convictions may be thus elicited and secured, before the offender is summoned or brought into Court for trial. The complaint being made and filed in court, may be pending for an indefinite time.

The Circuit Court, Justices of the peace, and police and municipal courts have jurisdiction of these offences.

The act contains many other detailed provisions not necessary to be here mentioned, giving powers and affording facilities for its prompt and efficient execution.

It prohibits entirely and absolutely the selling of spirituous or intoxicating liquors except as a medicine or chemical or mechanical agent; and for these purposes no person is allowed to sell them but druggists who give bonds and comply with the condition of these bonds.

It also prohibits the manufacturer in this State entirely and absolutely from making any spirituous liquors except alcohol containing not less than eighty parts in one hundred of pure alcohol; and from selling any such liquors to any person but to such qualified druggists.

The Design of the Law.

The spirit and intent of the law is to place spirituous and intoxicating liquors wholly out of the reach of the intemperate and the drunkards, so that they must reform; and entirely out of us as a beverage, so that the young and the temperate may never acquire an appetite for them. It also endeavors to shield the inebriates from temptations, by prohibiting the usual social tempters from tempting and enticing them, to intemperance, that they may be secure from evil influences

The happiness, the wealth and glory of a State or nation are composed of individual happiness, individual wealth, individual intelligence and individual virtue. To attain this exalted destiny, the cultivated reason, and the skilful, virtuous, and persistent energies of each citizen, are essential If these can be secured, then is the State or nation prosperous, great and glorious.

The design of this law is to aid the people of the State of Michigan in progressing toward and ultimately attaining this great good Transgression of the Law.

The resolutions under consideration propose the enforcing the provisions of this act against all persons violating them in the village of Tecumseh. Who are they? We are informed, that this small village contains nine places where intoxicating liquors are sold at retail and perhaps drank on the premises; and, at least, seven of these daily and openly offend against the law in this respect; and at some of them beer and other liquors are sold and drunk contrary to the prohibitions of this act.

The proprietors of these places have openly rebelled against the sovereignty of this State; and they and their patrons defiantly affirm that this law cannot be enforced.

The fact that they severally transgress and trample on this law, they respectively admit. They pay a tax to the United States on their transgressions; and bottles and human bodies, charged with their poisons, are daily and nightly seen coming from their door. Intoxicated and drunken men and boys are seen in our streets, and many of the community, in idleness and debauchery, are thronging these pernicious places of resort.—Persons initiated behind the scenery, which shuts out our view, tell us of intemperance, dissipation and gambling within,—disgraceful and ruinous to humanity.

The Law Should be Enforced.

It is against these persons, for the commission of these offences we are called upon to cause the law to be executed. And why should it not be? It was enacted, at the urgent solicitation of the people of this State, to remove and prevent a gigantic social evil. It has been long on our Statute book—has been several times re examined and amended to make it more efficient; and always approved by our State Legislature and by the people of the State.

We cannot presume that any offender is unacquainted with these facts or with the law. If he were, ignorance of the law is no excuse or justification for its violation. Every citizen is presumed to know the law of his country, especially in a republic where each citizen is apart of the sovereign power prescribing the law. By accepting the rights and immunities of citizenship, he imposes on himself the obligations and duties of citizenship. He agrees that he will maintain and obey the laws of the state, promote the general welfare, and not subvert the law, and demoralize his fellow citizens. If he has unwittingly transgressed the law, when informed thereof, he should confess the wrong he has done, and abstain from further transgression.

The law speaks to command, not to reason or parley. It cannot be respected if, when violated, its penalties are not inflicted. If it is law it should be observed and enforced; if it is not law,—not a rule of action prescribed by the supreme power,—it should be repealed and removed from our statute books.

Objections to its Execution.

But the transgressors object to the execution of this law. They say that, if it is enforced, their business would not be sufficiently remunerative and must be discontinued.

It is extremely doubtful whether any person ever accumulated and preserved much property as a vender of liquor; but it is certain, that persons engaged in this degrading and destructive traffic, much oftener become drunkards and paupers, and pursue the road to ultimate ruin or a premature grave, than to wealth and respectability.

But it is a sufficient answer to this objection to say that the same reasons justify the thief, the pick-pocket, the burglar, the professed gambler, and many others in the several callings by which they make a living by preying on society. These offenses are not so pernicious to individuals and society as the violation of the law under consideration.

It is also objected by them that they have paid a tax to the United States for a license as retail venders of liquor, and have therefore a right to do it. In this they also err.

Our Constitution forbids the granting of license for this object; our Statute law forbids any person to engage in such a business The sovereign power of the State has the exclusive jurisdiction and control over its domestic and social intercourse and morals. Congress has no power to annul our Constitution or abrogate our State laws. It has not attempted to do so. It has only enacted—if you pursue such a calling you must pay a tax for the same. It does not authorize or prohibit any business, profession or calling. And the act of Congress imposing this tax goes further, and, unfortunately for the objectors, expressly declares as follows: "But nothing herein contained shall authorize the sale of any spirits, liquors, wines or malt liquors, to be drank on the premises"; and as follows: "No person licensed to keep any eating house shall be allowed to sell spirits or vinous liquor."

It is further objected, that the appetite for these prohibited drinks is so strong that it must be gratified, and that the law cannot, therefore, be enforced; but the business prohibited therby will still be carried on secretly.

Offenses against divine and human laws have always been perpetrated, in every age of the world, and will probably continue to be until the day of final retribution. Secret cheats, trespasses, thefts, burglaries, robberies and murders will be committed, known and published, but the offenders remain forever unknown, and therefore escape conviction and punishment.

Shall we for these reasons have no law forbidding and prescribing punishment for these crimes? Or, having laws, as in the case now under consideration, and criminals and evidence to convict, and not enforce them?

These and all other objections and apologies that can be offered are unreasonable, selfish and perverse; and, instead of excusing, but aggravate the offense.

We have noticed them because we wished to deal with every citizen fairly, kindly and courteously.

Appeal to the Violators of the Law.

We wish to say to each objector and offender:—We bear toward you no enmity; we desire your welfare in common with all other persons; we desire to hear your defense, and to reason with you; to judge you as we wish to be judged. Gladly would we persuade you to relinquish this unlawful, unpatriotic, and immoral business; and we shall most reluctantly resort to the law to compel you to do it. You have become familiar with vice, if you are not vicious. Your associates are generally depraved in mind and body, and your calling makes them more so, and adds to their numbers.

You are enticing our fellow citizens, our fathers, our brothers, our young men, our sons,—nay, even our young ladies—our daughters—to your groceries, your taverns, to your restaurants, to your ice-cream saloons, to your dens of iniquity; behind your screens, shut out from public scrutiny, by your green-painted windows, your red and dingy curtains, and other devices, which are conclusive evidence of the unlawfulness and viciousness of your avocations, which are ruinous and destructive to the minds, the bodies, and the fortunes, of those whom we most tenderly love!

How can you ask us to forbear to enforce the law intended, and so efficient, to suppress this wide-spreading, increasing and, even now, gigantic evil? Your murdered victims, some of whom but recently walked amongst us, cry to us from the grave against you! Your nearly ruined votaries, still lingering on the shores of life, bound, helpless, and almost hopeless, by their depraved and ungovernable appetites, made so by your unholy practices, cry for help! The much-abused wife, the heart-broken and sorrowing widow, the destitute and suffering orphan, the inebriate and drunkard—poor, sad wrecks of humanity—brought to these unfortunate conditions by your wicked calling, witness against you!

Yet we deal kindly with you; have long borne these evils in silence, or have been striving to convince you of the great wrong you are doing! We want your experienced aid in executing this law. We are laboring for your welfare;—for the most imminent danger threatens you.

We desire to engage you in more lucrative, more honorable and more benevolent enterprises, beyond the reach of this danger; and in which your moral and intellectual faculties will be developed and shine, spreading light and joy in your domestic and social circles, and blessing, instead of cursing, the human race

Billiard Saloons.

Your committee, though not directly charged with the duty, are reluctantly constrained to call your attention to another evil, taking deep root and expanding itself in our village by the neglect of its officers and good citizens; and, by its influence and effects, demoralizing a portion of our community, and indirectly leading them into habits of idleness gambling and intemperance.

Billiard Salloons are social evils, tending to such pernicious results We are informed that two or more are established in this village. One of them, at least, has the fact of its existence emblazoned on its window curtains, and in the way leading to it, and has been noticed in our village paper as a thing worthy of being known by the public. The other though long doing a flourishing business here, having had no rival until recently, has kept dark, or not seen fit publicly to proclaim itself.

This evil only exists by sufferance. It has been long prohibited by our law; the People of this state, in this constitutional manner, have brought it to judgment and condemnation.

In our compiled Laws, vol, 1, p. p. 502, 503, are recorded its prohibition and its punishment. The penalty prescribed for keeping a billiard table on your premises for the purpose of, or the letting it be played on for hire, is one hundred dollars; and the players are subject to two dollars as a penalty for each game.

The common council of this village, in the act of incorporation, amended and re-enacted in 1859, are charged with the duty of passing bye-laws, suppressing this and many other social evils.

How to Secure Obedience to the Law.

If we have laws prohibiting, and against them disorderly citizens committing, offences, defiantly and openly, it is very desirable to know the strength of the opposing forces.

If the law cannot be enforced in this village, the sovereign people of this state ought to know it, and provide a remedy.—And if this state cannot provide a remedy and enforce her laws, and is threatened with a whisky insurrection, the power of the United States should be invoked to her aid; and if by that power the insurrection cannot be quelled and order restored, it would be reasonable that the United States should then let as slide.

Though we recommend the use of all moral, religious and patriotic helps, yet we believe the most speedily and efficient manner of suppressing intemperance, is the immediate, energetic and persistent execution of the law, until offences against it shall cease.

Let us stop the supply—shut up forever the fountains whence issue these poisonous fire-waters—and the appetite for them must be controlled—must dry up—and reason, the dignity of humanity, will resume his rule. Man, made in the immage of his Creator, will again walk erect; his face again shine with the soul's consciousness of dwelling in that immage, unpolluted, manlike! of its being again the temple of the spirit of God godlike! and not as heretofore the votary of the "charmed cup," destroyer of soul and body, which,

"Whoever tasted, lost his upright shape,
And downward fell into a grovelling swine,"

* * * * * * * * * * *

And let them—let all the inhabitants of this state—know, that we fully appreciate the difficulties which may retard complete success in this undertaking. Let every one of us be assured, that we have work to do, obstacles to overcome and disappointments to realize, before we attain to even moderate success. It but few openly oppose us, we know "One sinner sinner destroys much good."

Your Committee, therefore, propose that the resolutions be carried into execution in the manner following, namely:

1. That a committee of sixteen persons, members of the Society and residents of this town, be nominated by the Chairman, and appointed by this Society, charged with the duty of dividing this village into wards, to be canvassed by one or more members of said committee, calling on every person in this village, soliciting signatures to the Temperance Pledge, and their personal influence and aid in this benevolent work; that they be instructed to call on the known violators of this law, as early as can conveniently be done, and solicit their renunciation of their unlawful business, and their signatures and aid; and that they report to this Society, at its next and subsequent meetings, the names of those who have signed the Pledge, and also the names of those who, when solicited to sign it, have declined to do so.

2. That any person who has offended against this law, and who, before complaint is made against him, shall renounce this unlawful business, and pledge himself to offend no further, shall be exempt from prosecution, at the instance of this society.

3. That the Common Council of this village be requested, by a resolution of this society, to execute forthwith the powers and authority with which they are invested and entrusted, to make bye-laws and execute them and the Statute laws suppressing the vending and using of spiritous or intoxicating and other liquors, contrary to law, in this village; and the unlawful keeping and using of Billiard Tables therein

4. That a committee of eight persons, members of this Society, and residents of this village, be nominated by the Chairman, and appointed by this Society, charged with the duty of causing complaints to be made, without any unnecessary delay, and prosecuted against every person who has or shall offend in the village of Tecumseh, against the law in the said resolutions mentioned.

5 That a sufficient fund be raised, or pledged, by subscription, or otherwise, by the members of this Society, to defray the necessary expenses of its meetings heretofore and hereafter, and other needful charges, and in the prosecutions of offenders against said law.

Mysterious Affair in Illinois—A Young and Beautiful Girl Abducted.

From the Illinois State Journal, 19th.

A private letter from a lady at Richview, Washington county, in this State, gives the particulars of a most mysterious outrage which was perpetrated at the residence of Mr. M. A. Linton, residing about four miles from Richview, on the night of the 5th inst.

The writer states that a party of thirteen men, disguised by handkerchiefs tied over the lower part of their faces, and armed with navy revolvers, presented themselves at Mr. Linton's house about half past two o'clock at night and demanded admittance. On being refused they threatened to break down the door. The spokesman of the party was recognized as a man who had taken supper at Mr. Linton's the same evening, under pretence of having lost his way to Hayleton, the next town.

On being admitted, the party demanded Ginevra, a daughter of Mr. Linton's, by a former marriage, a beautiful and amiable girl sixteen years of age, who had just returned home from boarding school in Ohio. She having just run down stairs to see what was the matter, was seized by three ruffians and told that she must go with them dead or alive. Her father being totally unarmed was powerless to defend her. The girl was dragged to her room, and after being allowed to dress herself, was forcibly caried to a buggy and driven off. As she was borne out of the door, she turned toward her father, raised her hands and exclaimed "Oh God!"

A party of eight men were left to guard the house till daylight, to prevent any alarm being given. During the night they paced around the house, knocking at the door, looking in at the windows, rattling the glass, and taunting the wretched inmates by asking how they liked evening calls, etc. No clue has been obtained to the abductors, or to the course taken by them, although a stranger whom Mr. Linton met at a store at Richview the same day, is suspected to have been one of them. Another statement is to the effect that a woman who had been prowling around the neighborhood for some time past is one of the abducting party.

Mr. Linton is a Quaker by profession, and it was well known that he was unarmed.

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 21, 1864.

Michigan University.

Report of Azariah Eldridge and E. H. Thompson, Visitors to the University of Michigan for 1863.

We have before us this Report, as published in the Detroit Tribune, and it has some peculiarities which we think worthy of notice.

The Statute, (see Compiled Laws, Vol. 1, p. 717,) provides that the Superintendent of public Instruction, (who has charge of the Primary Schools of the State,) shall also appoint, biennially, a board of Visitors consisting of three persons, whose duty it shall be to personally examine into the state and condition of the University, in all its departments and branches, and annually report the same to the Superintendent of Public Instruction, who shall also embody this report in his annual report.

Under this provision of the Statute, the gentlemen above named, together with Dr. D. K. Underwood, of Adrian, were appointed by our excellent Superintendent Visitors of the University for the two years now last past.

This Visitors Report we have usually looked for, and first seen, in the Superintendent's Annual Report; but it seems that these gentlemen have deemed it important to give to the public the result of their arduous labors in advace of the Superintendent's Report, by furnishing it for publication in the Detroit Dailies; and masmuch as they did do so, we can only regret that they had not further added to the magnanimity of the proceeding by publishing it somewhat earlier and while the old Board of Regeants were still in existence, in order that if they had anything to reply to the severe strictures which these gentlemen were about to cast upon their official acts, they might at least have the opportunity to have done so.

Another peculiarity of the Report of these two gentlemen (Dr. Underwood evidently not concurring in it) is, that instead of at all adverting to the state or condition of the University, in its different departments, except in a few general remarks occupying about one square of ordinary printed matter, the rest of the column being the entire balance of the Report, is given up by them to denouncing and lecturing the old Board of Regents with regard to the manner in which they have seen fit to perform their official duties, and in instructing the new Board how they should perform theirs.

Now this service, on the part of these gentlemen, is all the more valuable, no doubt, from the fact that it is purely a volunteer service, which they were not in any sense required, and, we apprehend, not even expected, to perform; and yet we may perhaps be permitted to suggest to them that it is barely possible after all that the people of the State of Michigan would prefer to leave the execution of this important trust and the performance of these important duties to those Regents of the University whom they have seen fit to elect with especial reference to them, rather than pass them over to a Board of Visitors apppointed for a much shorter period of time and for a very different purpose, however deeply impressed they may themselves be with their own eminent fitness and ability to perform these duties creditably to themselves and advantageously for the State.

Had the old Board of Regents been aware that the Regent's Room was that particular branch or department of the University to which these gentlemen were, as Visitors, especially directing their attention, they would no doubt have done themselves the honor, and the State the justice, to have consulted them as to the proper manner in which they should have performed their duties as Regents of the University; but as that opportunity is now lost not only to the Regents themselves, but to the entire State, we may at least hope that the new Board will not fail to profit by the instruction they have thus received, and be more careful for the future to consult, and submit themselves to the control of, each successive Board of Visitors that the Superintendent may see fit to appoint.

DIED.

At Tecumseh, Mich., at the house of his father, Ira Pennock, Esq., of barbarity and crime—starved certainly, and in all probability even worse than that—by those rare specimens of Southern chivalry, who had charge of the Belle Island prisoners at Richmond, on Wednesday, Jan. 6th, 1864, Martin V. Pennock, a Corporal of Co. G, (Captain Marshall's) 4th Regiment, Mich. Infantry, Volunteers, aged 23 years.

Young Pennock was born and spent his boyhood in Tecumseh; enlisted in May, 1861, into Co. G, 4th Regiment, among the first volunteers from this portion of the State, and was in every battle in which that regiment was engaged, except the battle of Chancellorville, at which time he was at Tecumseh, having been ordered home along with Captain Marshall upon recruiting service.

He was taken prisoner along with a few of the 4th Regiment, and about 4000 in all of the Union army, at the battle of Gettysburg, on the 2d day of July, 1863, and was then, along with the rest, stripped of his clothes, shoes and stockings, furnished only with an old shirt and pair of pants, and compelled to walk on barefoot 160 miles, almost without food, and then with the rest, imprisoned on Belle Island—the Commissioned officers being sent to the Libby Prison.

He was twice threatened by the rebels with instant death, once because when he found he must be taken prisoner, he put the gun he had carried with him through the war against a rock and, stamping upon it, bent the barrel nearly double, and again, on his way down to Richmond, when at Hagerstown, he stepped a little out of the ranks and called to the boys to give three cheers for the Union, which was responded to in a manner to make the welkin ring, and a good deal of stir in the ragged and repulsed rebel regiments around them. Once more upon Belle Island his life was attempted by a brutal rebel officer; because he intimated that horse meat would not be considered a dainty at home, a blow with a loaded cane was struck at his head, but warding it off with his hand, he saved his life, but bruised his hand so much that he never recovered from the injury.

He was at length removed from Belle Island, along with those 300 starved, if not poisoned, Union prisoners who were sent to Annapolis, Md., in October last, and of whom not over 50 still survive, and arrived at Annapolis on the 29th of October.

They had been kept upon nothing but bran and water, served out but once a day, for two weeks before they left, and very many of them died, as they were intended to, upon the way, and the rest all but about fifty, as above stated, since.

Young Pennock was unconscious when removed; came to but once while within the rebel lines; found himself lying in the water in a boat, with his head resting upon a fellow prisoner who had died upon the way; asked for a drink of water, but was cursed for his impudence, and told that his treatment was good enough for a d——d Yankee,—when becoming again unconscious he saw his tormentors no more.

His father learning of his arrival at Annapolis, went down to see him and bring him home if possible, and did start for home with him, although he was of course very weak and feeble, on the 25th of December last, and arrived home with him on the Monday following.

For a few days after his arrival, there were strong hopes of his recovery; but it was soon evident that there was something more than a merely famished system to contend with, and on the morning of the 6th inst. he breathed his last. It was his constant theme of gratitude upon his arrival here that his earnest prayer had been so fully answered that he might at least die in a Christian land and have a Christian burial, instead of passing away amid all the heathen barbarities of a rebel prison; and his last wish in this respect was more than answered in the spontaneous attendance of the citizens of Tecumseh upon the funeral rites of the deceased patriot and soldier as they bore his remains to rest beside the grave of his mother and other loved ones at home, already reposing in our village burying ground.

That he was a brave, manly, and faithful soldier, all his officers and fellow soldiers, as well as all the acts of his military life, fully testify; and it was his earnest desire and intent, as soon as he should sufficiently recover, to have reenlisted for the war. But this he was not permitted to do; and in this, as in all this world's dispensations of seeming weal or woe, we can only bow to Him whose right it is to rule and reign, and say—"Thy will, not ours, be done."

There will be a funeral sermon adapted to the occasion, by the Rev. Mr. Taylor, at the Episcopal Church, on next Sabbath morning, Jan. 24th, 1863, at 10 1-2 o'clock.

☞ It is stated that Senator White, of the Pennsylvania Legislature, who is now held as a prisoner by the rebels, is soon to be exchanged and resume his seat.

Conductor Curtis, of the Southern road, whose feet were so badly frozen while on duty during the cold snap on New Year's day, has arrived home at Adrian. His feet are in very bad condition, but it is hoped they will be made serviceable in a few weeks.

A female thief entered a house in Adrian last Thursday night, by the back door, and the domestic not being in, entered a room and took a dress, with $3 in money in the pocket, and also took a portion of the week's washing. Keep your eye on your back as well as your front door.

A White Man Turning Black.—The Philadelphia Age gives a long description of the singular case of Gustavus Brest, a native of Germany, who has been in this country for fifteen years, and for the most of that time a workman in a cotton factory at Manayunk, Pennsylvania. He is a single man, of temperate habits, and forty-five years of age. In the autumn of 1861, he was taken with spotted fever, from which he recovered, and the spots disappeared in due time. In August last dark spots appeared on the back of each hand and on each instep, giving no pain, but increasing in size until nearly the whole surface of the body has been covered with a bronze hue. His nose is as decidedly dark as the skin of an Abyssinian, his cheeks are more of a coffee color. The palms of his hands and the soles of his feet are as white as they ever were. His health is remarkably good: it never was better. Within the past month a deeper shade has been added to the skin. Neither the microscope nor the investigations of the most learned physicians have found any cause for this singular transformation.

Maj. General Grant, not U. S. Grant.—In a recent trip over the Ohio & Mississippi Railroad, in company with Major General W. T. Sherman, that gentleman, who is a warm admirer of General Grant, related a circumstance as to how he obtained the initials "U. S," which we do not recollect having seen in print. He stated that General Grant's baptismal name was Hiram Ulysses and he bore that name until he was appointed a cadet at West Point. The Member of Congress who nominated him some how got his name mixed up with that of his brother, and he was appointed as Ulysses Sidney, and that name once on the records at the Military Academy could not be changed. He was baptized in the Military School as S. S. Grant, and he has ever since borne that name.—Buffalo Courier.

MODE OF DISTRIBUTION!

To distribute these gifts, there will be a committee appointed from the audience present at the entertainment who will count the names of the 500 owners of the gift tickets; they will then be put into a box, and a small boy, blindfolded will draw them out, and the first name drawn out from the box will be entitled to gift No. 1, which will be the Gold Watch.—The next name out will be entitled to gift No. 2, which is the Cutter and so on until the first 90 gifts are distributed.

To distribute the 350 engravings they will be divided into seven classes of 50 each and numbered respectfully from 1 to 7. After the first 90 gifts are distributed the next 50 names drawn from the box, will each be entitled to one of the engravings of the first class. The next 50 names will each be entitled to one from the second class. The succeeding 50 to the third class, and so on until all the engravings are distributed.

The first name drawn in each class will be entitled to the first choice in their respective class. The second name drawn to the second choice and so on until each class is distributed. After the 350 engravings are distributed, the 60 names remaining in the box will each be entitled to one of the 60 valuable Books. The first name drawn being entitled to the first choice, the second name to the second choice and so on until all the books are distributed.

A record of the name of the purchaser of each ticket is kept in a book which is open to public inspection, the names in the box will correspond to the names recorded. Consequently persons can satisfy themselves that the names are deposited by seeing that their names are recorded as aforesaid, as the committee appointed will compare the list of tickets with the list of names put into the box.

TICKETS ONE DOLLAR EACH,

For Sale by G. T. Ketcham & Co. Tecumseh; Wm. St. John, Clinton; Georg Morey, Manchester. Persons from abroad wishing tickets can remit the amount to G. T. Ketcham & Co., and receive their tickets by return mail.

ROBACK'S OLD CATAWBA BRANDY

Is made from the PURE JUICE OF CATAWBA GRAPE, which is grown in abundance in Ohio and from which this article is obtained—it has an agreeable flavor, fine clear color, and possesses all the qualities for medicinal purposes, and for a beverage of the best imported brandies. As a flavoring for mince pies and other cooking purposes it it the best economical artical that can be used, being one half a dollar cheaper by the bottle, and nearly two dollars per gallon cheaper than other Brandies sold for that purpose. Wherever it has been introduced it has found rapid sales, and is daily gaining in pupularity, giving in all cases the utmost satisfaction. Call for "Roback's Catawba Brandy," which may be found for sale by Druggists, Grocers and dealers generally throughout the West.

CROUP.

New Haven, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be liesd to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,

EDWARD GWINELL,

Enlist.

Young men of Lenawee, enlist! Love of country, and of your friends in the field, should prompt you to do so. The service is honorable, the contest will be short, and the pecuniary reward is liberal beyond precedent.

On, on, to the just and glorious strife,
With your swords your freedom shielding.

By a special order from the War Department, Adjutant Baylis, of the 5th Mich. Cavalry, who had been detailed on Recruiting Service at this place, has been relieved and ordered to Grand Rapids, Mich., as Judge Advocate of a General Court Martial; consequently his Recruiting Office is closed.

The Trustees of the First Methodist Episcopal Church of this village, take much pleasure in publicly acknowledging the receipt of fifty dollars as a subscription to their new Church Edifice, from the glorious Michigan Fourth, sent by Lieut. Allen. It is pleasing to know that, while they are fighting the battles of their country, they are not forgetful of the cause of religion at home,—and we earnestly pray that the blessing of God may attend their efforts in the cause of freedom and humanity.

4th Mich and Lieut Col. Comstock.

We clip the following from the Adrian Expositor of the 19th.

An impromtu meeting of the citizens was held at the Council Room last evening to take proper measures to receive the 4th Regiment on its return home, and also properly to receive the body of Lt. Col. Comstock.

A committee was appointed to solicit donations for furnishing a dinner to the Regiment on its arrival. We hope the good citizens of Tecumseh will not be backward in this move, but will see it a once, that a fair contribution shall be made to what yet remains, of one of Michigan's bravest Regiments

There was also a committee appointed to receive the body of Lt. Col. Comstock

Those citizens of Tecumseh favorable to the formation of such an association are requested to meet at Bidwell's Hall on Monday Evening Jan 25d at 6 o'clock, (one hour previous to Mr. Seblins Lecture,) to consult together, and take the initiatory steps to accomplish that object.

☞ Will those subscribers that promised us some potatoes bring them now?

☞ We would particularly direct the attention of our readers to the advertisement of Coe's Caugh Balsam, in another column of our paper. The preparation emanates from one of our most respectable Eastern Drug Houses, and is guaranteed by them to be the most effectual and speedy remedy for the cure of Coughs, Croup, Colds, Asthma, and Sore Throat, that has ever been offered to the public. Unlike most other remedies, it does not dry up a Cough, but loosenes it, and by causing the patient to expectorate freely, completely clears it away. For children who are troubled with Croup, it is invaluable, completely destroying this fearful destroyer, as soon as taken. We consider it the duty of every mother to provide herself with a bottle, if she values the health of her children, and every family to make it a necessity in their household. It can be had of any Druggist. Price 25 cts.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

MONEY EASILY MADE,
By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel; and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 16th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Garrett N. Hunt deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Jacob Snyder a creditor of said deceased praying that said petitioner may be appointed Administrator of said estate.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday the 1st, day of February next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.
OF
Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 180 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 150 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south-east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store

U. S. 5-20'S !

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "GENERAL SUBSCRIPTION AGENT," will continue to supply the public.

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury, mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organising in all parts of the country, will in a very short period, absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the Interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes, it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come, to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium, as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin; these duties have for a long time amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10 000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust-monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties, and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent., on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds Six Hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds, and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

"The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

Jay Cooke,

SUBSCRIPTION AGENT,

114 South Third Street, Philadelphia.

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemon's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages;
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Hardens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

WANTED

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, tuck, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound' and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand; with directions so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilities for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

IMPROVED DUPLEX, RUBY ACTION.

A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated 18 k gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved DUPLEX PULL WAY ACTION, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants, and persons traveling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING LEVERS

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our IMPROVED DUPLEX, and superior adjusted movements with Stop, to be used in timing horses, etc; has FOUR INDEXES for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

☞ We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to expressman when the goods are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

THE GREAT

AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants; and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves, being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best adapted to the family, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,
Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording.

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee, comes nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs' new single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness, which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveler.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have over doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPERATION.
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER, or CUTACEOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which the medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations Ulceration or Schirrus of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Brave Boys Are They.

DEDICATED TO THE SISTERS OF OUR VOLUNTEERS BY HENRY CLAY WORK.

Heavily falls the rain,
Wild are the breezes to-night;
But 'neath the roof, the hours as they fly,
Are happy, and calm, and bright.
Gathering round our fireside,
Though it be summer time.
We sit and talk of the brothers abroad,
For forgetting the midnight chime.

Chorus—Brave boys are they!
Gone to their country's call.
And yet and yet we can't forget
[illegible] must fall

Under [illegible]
Nestle [illegible]
While [illegible]
To shelter [illegible]
Rising [illegible]
[illegible]
Of martial [illegible]
'Till brothers [illegible]

Brave boys, &c

Thinkin' [illegible] less of them.
Loving our country the more.
We sent them forth to fight for the flag
Their fathers before them bore
Though [illegible] the great tear-drop started,
This was our parting trust:
God bless you boys! we'll welcome you home
When rebellion is laid in the dust.

Brave boys, &c.

May the bright wings of love,
Guard them wherever they roam;
Tell me has come when brothers must fight
And sisters must pray at home.
Oh! the dread field of battle!
Soon to be strewn with graves:
If brothers fall may they bury them where
Our banner in triumph waves

Brave boys, &c.

An Arkansas Hero.

Some three or four years after the admission of Arkansas into the Union, a young man, whom we shall call Arthur Granger, a native of Ohio, went to Little Rock to set up the practice of law. He was then about three and twenty years of age, small, slender and effeminate looking, with light hair, almost beardless face and dark blue eyes. His dress, though not exactly foppish, was altogether too fine, neat, and precise, to suit the taste of men who always seemed prepared for roughing it in the backwoods as most of them had done at one time and another; he was, moreover, a stranger from the North, who had perhaps come there to display his learning, and pick up their money, so that from the very first he was regarded with contempt and aversion.

The first eight months he got no practice whatever, notwithstanding he was regularly at his office, or the court room, waiting and hoping; he was about to give up in despair, and betake himself to another locality, when one day a tall, lank individual came scuffing into his apartment, and after surveying him keenly from head to foot, said, as he helped himself to a seat:

"See here, young hop-thumb, is there anything in you?"

"Yes, my breakfast!" replied the young lawyer.

The other stared at him a few moments and seemed undetermined whether to consider the reply a joke or an insult.—He finally grinned and proceeded:

"I mean do you know anything?"

"Oh, yes, something," answered the other, pleasantly. "I know the difference between a horse and a horse block."

"Can you write?"

"I have wrote my name before now."

The stranger drew a newspaper from his pocket, opened it deliberately, pointed out an article handed it to the young man, and then said:

"Read that!"

"Aloud?"

"Yes."

The young man complied, and read a tirade of the most scandling, scathing nature against one Miles Gregory, the democratic candidate for the legislature.

"Well," demanded the stranger, "what do you think of that?"

"It is pretty severe."

"I believe you. Do you think there is another man in the state of Arkansas that can write as scorching a thing agin the whig candidate?"

"If there were facts to justify it, I doubt not such an article could be produced."

"To thunder with your facts!" cried the stranger, excitedly; "facts haint got nothing to do with politics; thars no facts in that; it's all lies from begining to end. I'm that Miles Gregory, and ought to know. I'll give fifty dollars to anybody that will write as savage a thing agin Joe Perrin."

"When do you want it?"

"To-day."

"Without regard to facts?"

"They hain't got nothing to do with it, I tell you."

"Very well; in a couple of hours if you'll call in I'll show you something to match it."

"If you'll do it, or the half on't," said Miles Gregory, "I'll put you in a way to make a fortune."

He went out and returned at the appointed time, and the young lawyer had the article ready. Without descending as low as the model in vulgar epithets, it was even more terrible in its withering sarcasm. Gregory could scarcely contain himself while the young lawyer was reading it, and as some [illegible] was done he bounded from his seat with a yell of triumph, and seizing the treasure hitherto of the writer, almost crushed it in his great bony fingers.

"You've done it!" he cried, with an oath, "and you'll have something to do besides starving at blank wall. Here's the money—the only difference is, I've doubled it, make it a hundred instead of fifty—that's my business, so none of your nonsense."

He rushed out with a triumphant laugh leaving the young lawyer to ruminate upon his first fee, and the possible consequence of becoming a conspicuous individual in that fighting region.

The next week the article appeared in the democratic paper, and created a great sensation. One party was delighted with it, and the other chagrined. Who was the author? Nobody knew. The quid nanes were puzzled. Every known writer's style was duly considered; but something in the article differed from each.—Could it be that a new Junius had come among them. The democrats were anxious to find out, to do honor to their champion; and the opposition that they might contrive a way to silence him.—Nobody suspected the beardless lawyer. In fact, if he had openly avowed it, the chance was that he would have been kicked for a boasting liar

Three individuals only knew anything about it,—the visitor himself, Mr. Miles Gregory, and the proprietor of the paper in which it appeared. To the last, indeed, was due the fact that the secret had been kept so close. The moment he first read the article, he acknowledged the power of the writer, and demanded his name.—Gregory gave it without hesitation. The journalist was surprised. He had seen the puny lawyer, he said, but never dreamed there was any such stuff in him.

"How did you find it out, Gregory?"

"By a blunder. I got into his office by mistake, and then something just kind of struck me to try the thing on—a sort of experiment you know."

"Does any one else know anything about it?"

"Nary one."

"Then see here—this must be a secret of honor between us. I am going to secure that young man to write leaders for me—he is worth his weight in gold—but nobody must know who he is, and I am almost sure he will never be suspected. Remember, Gregory, if this secret gets wind I shall blame you for it!"

The [illegible] Arthur Granger was [illegible] at a handsome salary, to write such articles as the [illegible] required from week to week; and it was further arranged that the matter should be kept a profound secret; and to avoid suspicion, the parties were to meet only when absolutely necessary, and then either clandestinely or openly as strangers. The effect of the article mentioned was exciting; but when the succeeding week, some three or four more of the same stamp appeared, if anything more caustic and cutting directed against the whole party, and individual members beside, the excitement increased, curiosit became eager and wonder grew apace. And each succeeding week but added fuel to the flame. The democrats grew triumphant, and the whigs furious; when the parties being nearly equally divided, the former carried the election by a respectable majority, the latter grew desperate, and raved like madmen, denouncing the unknown writer as a liar and a coward, and making a standing offer of a thousand dollars to any one who would disclose his name.

"If you are discovered, Granger, you will have to quit this region on short notice," said the proprietor of the democratic paper to the young lawyer, during one of their stolen interviews.

"Why so?" asked the latter.

"Because you will be in danger."

"Will they murder me?"

"They will insult or challenge you, and you will have to fight or run."

"Suppose I fight?"

"And be killed?"

"I must take my chance of course. I shall be entitled to choice of weapons."

"What then? What can you do?—You are not heavy enough for the bowie knife, and your antagonist will be most likely to be a dead shot."

"By your leave he may be shot dead himself!"

"Hi! can you shoot?"

"With one of my hair triggers I can snuff a candle at ten paces?"

"You amaze and delight me. Where did you learn to handle the pistol with so much skill?"

"For the last two months I have been practising daily in the woods just out of town preparing for such a crisis, which I have all along foreseen."

"By heavens!" exclaimed the other, grasping the young man's hand with an increased admiration, "I am just beginning to know you, and am proud of your acquaintance. To tell you the honest truth, I never supposed there was any more fight in you than in a girl of sixteen; and for a young man to be challenged in this region and refuse to fight, is to be forever disgraced; and not even the genious of a Shakspeare, and the wisdom of a Solomon, could give you any influence over these people; therefore, I believe you would have to leave the state in event of a discovery."

"Mr. Bradley," rejoined the young man, with compressed lips, and a peculiar gleam of his dark blue eye, "I hope and pray it may never be my fortune to meet an antagonist on the so-called field of honor; but should such be the case, mark me—I may fall—but he will die! Let us change the subject."

The crisis came. Accidentally the secret was discovered, and in less than twenty-four hours Arthur Granger received three challenges to mortal combat from three different parties. He called upon Mr. Bradley, his employer, to act as his friend and second, and assured him he was ready to fight them all.

"My dear friend," said the journalist, taking him by the hand, "this is serious business. These men are all practical duelists, and considered dead shots. They intend to kill, that is certain; and to be candid, I see little hope of your escaping all three. I am not sure that you should accept more than one challenge at present."

"Oh, yes—all!" returned the young hero, positively. "Please arrange the first affair for sunrise to-morrow morning—the second half an hour later, the third half an hour later still. If I escape the first, I shall be in time for the second; and if the second, the third will not be kept waiting. If I fall before giving such a chance, I must be excused."

Bradley threw his arms around the neck of the young man, and fairly hugged him, so great was his admiration of his coolness and courage.

"If you live through this ordeal, you can aspire to any office in the gift of the people of this fighting State."

The meetings were arranged according to the wishes of Granger, and at the hour he was on the ground with his friends; and so were his antagonists with theirs; and so, in fact, was half the excited town of Little Rock, who had come out to witness the fight, see fair play, and, if need be, take a hand on both sides—a part as friends, and a part as foes

The preliminaries being arranged, the principals of the first duel were placed ten paces apart.

"Be firm, steady, and fire at the word," said Bradley, as he shook the hand of Granger.

There were a few moments of breathless suspense, and the fatal sign was given. In an instant the arms of the combatants were raised like two levers of iron, and the next moment there was a blended report. Young Granger stood firm with the blood trickling down his foreheed, ploughed by the ball of his antagonist, who already lay stretched on the earth, shot through the brain.

"Hit, but not hurt!" said the young lawyer, coolly, running his finger along the wound, as his excited friends rushed up to him.

Such skill and courage were enough for even fighting Arkansas. A hundred stalwart men rallied around our delicate little hero, and swore his life should not be put in jeopardy again to please himself or anybody else; and placing him on their shoulders, they bore him back to town in triumph, his two waiting antagonists nowise regretting the whim of the spectators that had saved them from standing before such a fatal marksman.

From that day forth the star of Arthur Granger was in the ascendant. He subsequently married a lady of fortune, and rose to the highest honors the state could give him.

Though the names above are all fictitious there are many persons living at the north, who have heard the voice of Arthur Granger in the halls of our national congress.

Woman's Rights.

'Tis women's right to be the first to clasp in tender arms the infant child; her right to calm its woes from the moment it enters life with its first wailing cry till it breathes the last groan of infirm age.

Her right, when standing alone in life, as though upon some wave-washed rock, support and comfort swept away by the wild breakers of misfortune, even there, heart-broken and despairing; her right to bow her head to the will of God, but with uplifted eyes and clasped hands receive comfort from above which passeth all understanding.

Her right to feel the keenest pang affliction's stroke can yield, yet still to bear it with submissive brow; though breaking heart, for 'tis her right to have fond ones clinging round her, across whose fireside she must cast no cloud.

Her right, no matter how down trodden or repulsed, so have the fibres of the heart wound round something pure and good, some precious gift spread to her by Him "who tempers the wind to the shorn lamb." Perhaps it may be but a little child, afflicted too; but though its tiny limbs may be deformed, or its helpless body wasted by disease, its eyes may never sparkle with a ray of intelligence, or its lips utter aught but the jabber of an idiot, and still, withal, its afflictions render it all the dearer to the mothers's heart, and make it the guiding star which brightens her dark way, which keeps her on the straight path, and saves her, perhaps, from sinking into the slough of wretchedness.

Her right to blush when sneered at undeservedly, yet find relief for many a wrong in woman's refuge—namely, tears.

Her right to be the cherished friend, the worshipped wife, the light of home.

Her right, in time of peace, to lean upon strong arms, to listen, with glowing cheek and sparkling eye, to works of praise uttered by loving lips; her right to be most richly blest by all the comforts of a happy home, round whose cherished threshold no darkening shadows linger,

Her right, in time of war, to send her idols forth, with tearful eyes and low-breathed prayers; her right to feel that thoughts of her, mingle with thoughts of country in the soldier's mind, when the battle is raging, when the victory is won, or when the life-stream is flowing from the fatal wound; her right to know her name was the last his pale lips uttered.

Her right to hail their return with a proud, a thankful heart, or perhaps to hide behind a widow's veil the anguish of her soul; or, with grey locks streaming and dim, wild eyes aching, repeat above a lonely grave the cry of Israel's unhappy King: "My soul my soul would to God I had died for thee?"

Het right to soothe the maniac's cry; to fan the feverish brow, to hold the hands of the sinking form, while with gentle touch she wipes the death-damp from the brow; to hold the last drop of water to the parching lips, to veinly strive to warm the stiffening limbs of a beloved one when the chill of death is creeping over us; her right at last to close the righteous eyes, and having robed us for our narrow bed, to whisper words of consolation to those we leave behind to mourn.

A BRAVE MICHIGAN MAN.—The correspondent of the Cincinnati Commercial writing from Chattanooga, says:

While riding up Mission Hill on the memorable 25th, turning my horse to the right or left to avoid treading upon the wounded, I had dismounted from my horse to give water to a dying boy, who lay upon his gun with a bullet hole through his head, when, a few yards to the right, I observed an officer being carried down the hill on a stretcher. Riding up, I inquired of the men;

"Who have you here?"

"Adjutant Marsh, of the 21st Michigan," was the reply.

"Where are you wounded, Adjutant?"

"In the left arm," was the reply.

"Badly?" I inquired: when with a smile, lighting up his face, at the same instant that I discovered the arm adhering to the body by a small piece of flesh, he replied, "My arm is gone; that's nothing; we've beaten them, thank God, and the slur of the Chickamauga defeat is obliterated.—Let the arm perish; such a victory is worth a thousand arms."

A Guerrilla Parson.

A Norfolk correspondent of the New York Times says of Major Burroughs, recently captured by the 2d North Carolina colored regiment:

"The importance of this capture is great—breaking up, as it does, a numerous and pestilential band of guerrillas. Burroughs is a noted man in Princess Anne county. He ran against Henry A. Wise for the State convention, which was held in the spring of '61, as the 'immediate secession' candidate. He is a Methodist preacher, and is said to possess great wealth. At the breaking out of the war he raised a cavalry company in Princess Anne and entered the rebel service. About a year ago he returned to Norfolk, went voluntarily to Gen. Viele, and was paroled. Soon after his return home he was 'created a Major of Partisan Rangers,' by the authorities at Richmond, and, in violation of his pledged word, commenced the organization of a band of robbers, which has since spread such terror through the surrounding country.

For this capital offence he is now on trial before a military commission appointed by Gen. Butler. He will probably be executed in a few days."

Romantic Story.

Upwards of thirty years ago, a marriage took place in this neighborhood, (Liverpool,) the man being in humble circumstances. After living together till after the birth of a child, the husband went to Australia to seek his fortune His wife never heard from him after he left her, and, supposing he was dead, on the lapse of seven years, she married a widower with three children. To this number in her second married life she added five, making her whole family, including the child by her first husband, nine in all. Some time since the second husband died, and she was left to struggle with a large family. To her great surprise, at the beginning of the present year, her first husband made his appearance at Liverpool. During his thirty years' absence he had prospered in Australia, and was a large landed proprietor there. He had heard of his wife's second marriage, but as the fault was his, he never thought of returning to England until he heard of the death of the second husband. To make amends for his former neglect of his wife—for notwithstanding her second marriage she still was his wife—he behaved in the most handsome manner to all her children, gave them costly outfits, and has taken them and the wife of his early affection out with him to the land of his adoption. The wife who has thus, after the absence of more than thirty years, been restored to her position, is now about seventy years of age; and so recent is their departure from this port that the vessel in which they sailed is not yet out the channel.—Liverpool Mecury.

Hygienic Importance of Light.

A tadpole confined in darkness would never become a frog; and an infant being deprived of heaven's free light will only grow into a shapeless idiot, instead of a beautiful and responsible being. Hence, in the deep, dark gorges and ravines of Swiss Valaia, where the direct sunshine never reaches, the hideous prevalence of idiocy startles the traveler. It is a strange melancholy idiocy; many citizens are incapable of articulate speech; some are deaf, some are blind, some labor under all these privations, and all are misshapen in almost every part of the body. I believe there is in all places a marked difference in the healthiness of houses according to their aspect with regard to the sun, and those are decidedly the healthiest, other things being equal, in which all the rooms are during some parts of the day, fully exposed to the light.

A Strange Story.

The saddest disappearance of which I remember ever to have read, was that of Captain Routh, of the India army, who came home on leave from Calcutta to be married to Miss Ling, in Hertfordshire. Captain Routh arrived at Southampton, and was identified as having been a passenger by the coach from that place to London. But after having lately accomplished so many hundred miles, he never attained that place, such a little way off, where his bride awaited him. He neither came nor wrote. She read his name in the list of passengers by the Europa, and looked for him, hour by hour, in vain. What excuse must not her love have made for him! How she must have clung to one frail chance after another, until her last hope left her! How infinitely more terrible must such vague wretchedness have been to bear, than if she had known him to have been struck down by the fatal sun-ray of Bengal, or drowned in Indian seas. Where was he? What could have become of him?

This young lady had a cousin of the name of Penrhyn, about her own age, who had been brought up in the same family, and, although much attached to her, had not been hitherto considered to entertain towards her warmer feelings than those of kinship. But as month after month, and year after year, went by without tidings of the missing bridegroom, he began to court her as a lover. She, for her part, refused to listen to his addresses, but her mother favored them; and, plunged into melancholy, the girl did not take the pains to repluse him which probably she would otherwise have done. She accepted, or at least she did not reject, a ring of his, which she even wore on her finger; but whenever he spoke to her, or tendered her any service, she turned from him with something like loathing.—Whether this was remarked upon so much before the following circumstances occurred, it would be interesting to learn; but all who knew them now testify, that whereas in early days she had taken pleasure in her cousin's society, it seemed to become absolutely hateful to her, subsequent to her calamity.

About three years after Captain Routh's disappearance, a brother officer and friend of his, one Major Brooks, having business in England, was invited into Hertfordshire by Mrs. Ling, at the urgent request of her daughter. So far, however, from being overcome by the association of the Major's presence with her lost lover, Miss Ling seemed to take pleasure in nothing so much as in hearing him talk of his missing friend. Mr. Penryhn appears to have taken this in some dungeon; perhaps he grew apprehensive that a present rival might be more fatal to his hopes than the memory of an absent one; but, at all events, the two gentlemen quarrelled. Mr. Penrhyn—who lived in the neighborhood—protested that he would not enter the house during the Major's stay, and remained at his own residence. During this estrangement, the conversation between Brooks and Miss Ling had Captain Routh for its topic more than ever. In speaking of the absence of all clue to what had become of him, the Major observed: "There is one thing that puzzles me almost as much as the loss of my poor friend himself. You say that his luggage was found at the inn where the coach stopped in London?'

"It was," said the lady. "I am thankful to say that I have numberless tokens of his dear self."

"There is one thing, which, though, I wonder that he parted with," pursued the Major, "and did not always carry about with him as he promised to do. I was with him in the bazaar of Calcutta, when he bought for you that twisted ring"—

"That ring," cried the poor girl, "that ring?" and with a frightful shriek she instantly swooned away.

Her mother came running in to know what was the matter; Brooks made some evasive explanation, but, while she was applying restoratives, inquired, as carelessly as he could, "who had given to her daughter that beautiful ring?"

"Oh, Willy Penrhyn," said she. "That is the only present, poor fellow, he could ever get Rachel to accept."

Upon this Major Brooks went straight to Penrhyn's house, but was denied admittance; whereupon he wrote to him the following letter:

"SIR—I have just seen a ring upon the hand of a betrothed wife of my murdered friend, Herbert Routh; he bought it for that purpose himself, but you have presented it. I know he always wore it on his little finger, and never parted with it by any chance. [illegible]

Original Draft of the Emancipation Proclamation.

The establishment of a permanent home for sick and disabled soldiers, is prompted by the dictates of humanity, and by gratitude to our patriotic sons and brothers.—Thousands who have gone forth to battle for the preservation of our glorious institutions, the unity of the States and to extend the area of freedom, will return to us with mangled limbs, and shattered frames, incapacitated for labor during the remaining period of their existence here. To such can we refuse a Christian welcome and a comfortable home? But we are pursuaded that a generous public needs no argument to induce them to the performance of a duty so manifest, and we therefore proceed to state briefly the purpose of those who design to establish a permanent home for the relief of the disabled soldiers of the Union.

It is generally known that the original draft of the President's Emancipation Proclamation, through the generosity of our fellow-citizen, Thomas B. Bryan, Esq., is the property of the disabled Soldiers of the Union Army, to be held in trust for their benefit by the Soldiers' Home of Chicago. This document, destined to live on the page of history when generations yet unborn have passed away, and to be referred to by the historians as the great instrument by which that foul blot on our national escutcheon human slavery, was obliterated, is regarded by us as of immense present and prospective value. In order that the disabled soldiers may more fully realize that value, we have resolved to adopt the plan suggested by the donor of the original document, in affording every loyal citizen of the North an opportunity to subscribe towards its purchase from the soldiers, the sum of one dollar, to create a fund for the erection and maintenance of a permanent Home for Disabled Soldiers. The fund thus produced will, we trust, prove sufficient to carry out the design to the extent required, and benefit the noble and patriotic recipients of your bounty. The original document, thus to become the corner stone, or foundation of the Soldiers' Home, will be sacredly preserved in the same, and may thus prove a source of permanent revenue to the soldiers. Is any appeal necessary to your humanity or your Christian sympathy? We trust not.—We believe that all who love their country and its glorious institutions will gladly contribute the single dollar that is necessary to shelter, support and smooth the passage to the grave, of the scarred and disabled vetrans who have been our defenders and the restorers of our great and beloved Union.

Every city, town, Village and hamlet throughout the land, and especially throughout the North-West, should immediately appoint committees to solicit the subscription desired, and to this end we forward you this brief circular, hoping that you will take measures without delay, to coopperate with us in carrying out this design, and will correspond with the President of our Association, THOS. B. BRYAN, Chicago, Ill., on the subject, advising him of the committees appointed and the result of their labor.

The Game Laws of Michigan.

Several weeks since we published the part of the Game Laws that we thought would be beneficial to the sportsmen of this section, but as most of them failed to "see it," we give it another insertion.—Look out neighbors we are bound to see game protected.

The following animals and birds are held to be game under the laws of this State, and the appended dates embrace the period during which their killing is illegal.

Elk, wild buck, doe and fawn; from Jan. 15 to Sept. 1.

Wild turkey, partridge and pheasant; from Feb. 1 to Sept. 1.

Woodcock; from March 1 to July 1.

Prairie chicken, wild duck, goose and swan; from Feb. 1 to Aug 15.

Otter and beaver; from April 1 to Oct. 1.

Quail; from Jan. 1 to Oct. 1.

The game law now in force was passed at the last session of the Legislature, and establishes the penalty for each violation of its provisions at $5 fine. By the law, the person who has game in his possession, is held to have killed it, and therefore dealing in it out of legal season renders the person so doing liable to fine. All cases under this law are prosecuted in behalf of the State before any Justice of the Peace of the county in which the offense was committed, and the fines paid to go to the increase of school libraries.—Game only becomes property when reduced to actual possession, and wounding of game even establishes no claim upon it, but the party who first gains actual possession is the legal owner.

☞ During a severe gale at Port Huron on Tuesday, a part of a meat market was blown down, and the timbers in falling serious injured a young man named Alex. Burke.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., JAN. 28, 1864

When will it End?

This is a question often asked, but not so often satisfactorily answered, with regard to the war now forced upon us by rebellion.

One answer to this question, all truly loyal men will concur in. It will end just so soon as the rebellion ceases, and not one day sooner. We all know that blood is being poured out like water in it, that on every side of us, and at almost every hearthstone, there is a sense of awe and gloom, lest one of our own loved ones shall be its next victim, and that the deep drapery of woe already garbs half the land.

But do we as often consider, what would be the result of yielding the point, giving up to rebellion all that it claims, allowing to every State the right to secede, and throwing to the winds that fair fabric of civil and religion freedom which our fathers bought for us with blood, and transmitted to us as their best and richest legacy,—to be kept by us, not for ourselves alone, but for all mankind?

It is not so strange that the thrones of the old world should combine and plot against this government, with its free institutions; for so long as they remain, and it prospers, as it has heretofore done, and as no other nation on the footstool ever did do, it stamps the lie upon these old world claims of the necessity for, and the divine right of kings, and tends to make the great mass of the the people discontented with tyranny at home and everywhere.

But the very reason, as it seems to us, which thus renders all the tyrannies of the old world opposed to us, should only induce us to cling to it the more strongly, and, while life remains, utterly refuse to give it up, at the dictation of whatever tyrants may demand it, whether of the old world or the new.

Should we ever be induced to yield this one point, the right of the masses to rule, and the duty of minorities to submit, under the constitution, and under laws, as they exist, until legally modified, when an alteration is deemed desirable; when, at the last, anarchy shall have come upon us like a flood, sweeping our homes, firing our dwellings, and filling all the land with violence and blood, as in the Masque of Anarchy.

"He rode
On a white horse, splashed with blood;
And was pale even to the lips,
Like Death in the Apocalypse.

And he wore a kingly crown;
In his hand a scepter shone;
And on his brow this mark I saw—
'I am God, and King, and Law!'" then, if not before, we will learn, too late, that freedom, and a land of freedom was something worth fighting for.

War is indeed terrible, and it must be a terrible necessity which compels to it; but sad and gloomy as it always is, we must not allow ourselves to forget that there are things even more to be dreaded still. In a just cause a man need not fear to die for his country. Thousands of our brave brothers and defenders have done so already, and thousands more are ready, if need be, to do so still.

But to our mind there is much to indicate that this causeless, cruel war is drawing to a close. Rebellion is fast losing its vitality, and is dying out.

The rebels must have more men or they cannot hope to successfully meet our armies upon the coming of the spring campaign, and they cannot take more men from the fields of agriculture, into the field of strife, without rendering it impossible to raise a sufficient supply of provisions to support those they already have. Their paper money is becoming almost worthless, and they cannot issue more without rendering it still more so, nor can they withdraw it from circulation, except by repudiation, which would utterly destroy what little credit they have left. Their foreign support is about gone, and they have but title left them to do, except to fight as long as they can feed the men they have, and then die a natural death, or be executed, according to the severity or clemency of the government they have sought to destoy. But some of these men are refusing to fight already, and are beginning to spurn such arbitrary rule; but we should not be surprised to see many of the rebel leaders trying to break or elude the blockade, and put off for France or England in the Spring. It is true that Granther's rule, as Lowell says, is generally the best,—

"Don't never prophesy, unless you know;"

but it does seem to us, that all the indications of the times now are, that the end of the Rebellion is at last rapidly approaching.

The News.

By special telegram from our Lansing correspondent last evening, we are informed that the Committee of Ways and Means have agreed upon a bill legalizing the bounties hitherto raised for promoting enlistments. It provides that any town or city, in filling the pending quota, may offer a bounty not to exceed $100, and in addition offers a uniform State bounty of $100. Counties cannot offer a bounty. Also that the special joint-committee on soldiers voting will report a bill to-day authorizing them to vote by proxy. The bill does not meet the views of members generally, and it is feared will create divisions.

It was reported a few days since, through rebel channels, that the United States gunboat Iron Age had blown up. This is now confirmed. It seems that she had chased the blockade runner Bendigo, and run her ashore. In attempting to get her off, the Iron Age herself grounded, and, all attempts to float her being fruitless, she was purposely blown up by her crew. Three blockade runners were captured in the vicinty of Wilmington, N. C.

Jan. 27.—The N. Y. Evening Post announces the arrival at Newark of a resident of Macon, Ga., who was at the out break of the war confident of the success of the rebels, who now declares they have utterly failed, and asserts that the leaders are conscious of the fact. He further says that the people of the South would hail with delight the restoration of the National authority. Destitution is general, and the conscription is zealously inforced. The people are praying for deliverance by the Union army.

By direccion of Gen. Butler, a naval and military expedition has been sent, under command of Gen. Graham, up James River to a point on the Peninsula within seven miles of Fort Powhattan, which captured 89 prisoners, a sloop and schooner, 240 boxes tobacco, and destroyed the rebel stores at that point, consisting of 24,000 lbs. of pork and oats and corn in large quantities. About 100 negroes came away with the expedition. Not a single man was lost.

In the U. S. Senate, yesterdy, Mr. Howard introduced an important amendment to Mr. Wilson's bill for the expulsion of Mr. Davis, of Kentucky, that Mr. Davis "be sensured" instead of "expelled." He made a speech in support of his amendment.

It is reported from Folly Island that the troops have standoned all hope of reaching Charleston this winter.

The reports of tee authorized reorganization of the Arkansas State government are confirmed. It is said that over 7,000 of the inhabitants have already taken the oath of allegiance. Within the next two months Arkansas and Louisiana will be back in the Union Tennessee will quickly follow, Texas and North Carolina will come next; by that time Virginia will be evacuated and the rebellion will be narrowed down to the limits of five States, if indeed it be not entirely extinguished.—All this will take place before the close of the next campaign.

The Kentucky Legislature cannot agree on a United States Senator. Thus far Guthrie is ahead, but as the vote is very much scattered, there is no telling who may be finally settled on by the majority.

Gen. Lee's Family.

Richmond Cor. of Mobile Register.

The introduction of a resolution in the House rleative to the commutation of officers residing in the city is of some importance when we consider that a multitude of little Captains, Majors, Surgeons, and Assistant Surgeons, snugly ensconced here, far from all danger and exposure, are getting from three to four, and even $500 a month, while General Lee, constantly exposed to the casualties of battle and of camp life, gets only the pay of a Brigadier, with the addition of $100 a month as commander of a department—not enough to support his family, now living in two rented rooms, in the plainest way, to say nothing of himself, especially if he keeps, as Beauregard did at Manassas, a general free table for everybody. How creditable to Lee, under these circumstances, is the refusal of a house tendered him by the city of Richmond. I am told that as soon as he got wind of the movement, he went to Mr. Saunders, the President of the Common Council, and told him that his family were living comfortably enough, and that if the city had money to spare it had much better be given to the soldiers, or to their widows and orphans.

THE WAR has produced strange alliens. Two Kentucians, father and son, were on a railroad train in Indiana last Sunday. The father was a rebel prisoner, the son was a Federal guard on the platform of the car. The old man, seeing his son, presumed to take more liberty than the rule allowed, and put his head outside the door. His son hastily advanced, piece at the shoulder, with a sharp, "Get back there, you old rebel!"

☞ Raeph Jewell and three sons were arrested a few days since, at Kalamazoo, for counterfeiting. A large amount was found in their possession.

Visit of a British Officer to Fort Sumter.

The London Times publishes an extract from a letter of a British officer at Charleston, dated the 16th of November, as follows:

I went yesterday evening (the 15th) to Fort Sumter. It was a most interesting expedition. The federals use a powerful calcium light at Batterv Gregg, with which they illuminate Sumter to such a degree that is impossible for steamers to go up to the wharf at night as they used to go, and we had to land in row boats.—They were shelling very rapidly, and it became most exciting when we neared the fort, especially when we came into the glare of the calcium light, and they could see us. No accident befel us, however, as we went in, and once inside the place and in the bomb proofs, we were perfectly safe. The bomb proofs are lofty and spacious, and well ventilated. The last bombardment has not injured them in the slightest degree; indeed they are, if anything, really stronger than before, from the amount of the debris knocked down upon them. Major Elliot, the commandant, was kind enough to take me out into the area and on to the parapet, to show me the effects of the bombardment—a courtesy, by the by, which, considering the lively way in which shells were flying about us, was indicative of very genuine politeness.

We had not been half a minute in the area when one of the lookouts got his jaw broken with a bit of shell, and we hardly got back when another poor fellow was brought in with two-thirds of his head knocked off. Under the circumstances we did not stay long; still, I had time enough to take a look around and see all I wished. The place is undoubtedly very much injured; indeed it is hardly possible to do the walls any further damage. The sea front is almost entirely knocked into the area, and you can now walk up from the area to the top of the walks which once faced the sea. The wall which they battered so in August in now the best one left; it retains pretty well its original height. It is the part of the building which originally contained the officer's quarters, and was made pretty solid between April and August, by filling up every vacuum with sand. The side towards the city has also; comparatively, suffered little. The casualties in the fort are seldon heavy, and arise from the men exposing themselves carelessly. The sentinels, most of whom have to be posted at night, have mostly a shelter into to which they can dodge when they see a shell coming. On our return from the fort we were again pelted with all kinds of missiles, even with grape this time; and one of our boatmen got hit in the hand, and another in the back, tho' very slightly.

New Sugar and Cotton fields.

New fields for the growth of sugar and cotton are constantly opening. The South Pacific islands are just now engaging much of the attention of capitalists. A vessel has recently left San Francisco loaded with a sugar-mill and other machinery for a company who are about to engage in the cultivation of those staples in Tahiti. This company, which has its principal office in Paris, has obtained a grant of about ten thousand acres of arable land on the south-east side of the island of Tahiti from the French government, and it is their intention to plant the whole of it with sugar and cotton. For labor it is intended to bring a force of from three hundred to six hundred natives from some of the semi-savage islands which lie in the direction of New Caledonia. Prior to the war with the French in 1846, Tahiti had begun to produce considerable sugar, as much as two hundred tons having been exported in one year. The war however, destroyed the plantatione, which could not be worked from lack of labor.—From that time to the present the island has had to import most of the sugar required for its own consumption. The sugar culture in the Sandwick Islands is growing in importance. Correspondence from Honolulu informs us that the past year has been very favorable for the crops, which are larger that ever before.—Twenty-four sugar mills are now in operation on those islands, nine of which are worked by steam.—N. Y. Post.

A New Winter Sport.

Among the sports on the ice at St. Louis, the "Democrat" of that city gives the following:

"Some enterprising genius had placed a live duck in a box, leaving about six inches of its head and neck out, and this box was placed in a hole cut in the ice, the upper portion, showing the duck's head, being exposed to view. He had a stick about two feet long, and charged ten cents for the privilege of throwing the stick at the duck's head—the lucky individual who struck and killed the duck to have the fowl as the reward of his skill. Many persons, struck with the novelty of this trick, and not doubting that they could knock the duck's head off in three throws, invested their money, and hundreds gathered around to witness the sport. Now the duck is one of the most artful dodgers extant, and he saved his life several hundred times by the quickness with which he drew in his head at the approach of the murderous stick. The proprietor of this institution pocketed about thirty dollars in a few hours, and when we left the stick was still whirling, and the duck was saving his neck with a certainty that gave promise of a long and eventful life."

Hunting White Men with Bloodhounds.

It has been several times stated in army correspondence that in the South-west the rebel officers hunt deserters and conscripts with bloodhounds, just as they once did fugitive slaves. It seemed incredibtable that this should be true, as a general fact, and we presume it was not credited, but the fact is fully confirmed by advertisements for bloodhounds in some of the Mississippi and Alabama papers for this very purpose. A Union cavalry officer on duty in West Tennessee writes:

"I have been out with my regiment scouting for three weeks in the region lying between the Tennessee and Mississippi rivers, north-east of Memphis. For the first few days we were after a guerrilla company, who were engaged in hunting up, or hunting down, conscripts with dogs. Brutal and horrible as it may seem, it is nevertheless strictly true, and you may rely on it, that at this very hour, hundreds of the people of West Tennessee, Mississippi and Alabama, are now hunted down with bloodhounds. I could not realize it until by the most positive evidence I found it true. We were almost within hearing of the baying of the hounds, and sent out a scouting party who came very near catching some of the devils. If they had been caught, they would have received short shrift."

☞ Maj. Cole, in command of a battalion of Maryland cavalry, encamped in Loudon county, was attacked at 4 o'clock on the morning of the 10th by the guerrilla Mosby, the latter's force being nearly 400 strong. After severe fighting of an hour, Mosby was repulsed, leaving his killed and wounded on the field. Among the rebel dead were found four commissioned officers. Our loss is reported two killed and eleven wounded. Among the latter are Capt. Vernon, severely, and Lieut. Rivers, slightly. Gen. Sullixan has a force of cavalry now in pursuit of the enemy. Mosby attempted to surround and surprise the camp, but found Maj. Cole on the alert and ready for him. The fight was a gallant one on Cole's part.

COFFEE AND TEA CULTIVE IN CALIFORNIA.—The cultivation of coffee and tea promises to become an important business in California. One nursery at Sacramento has five thousand coffee plants on trial, and it is believed there will be no difficulty in bringing up the plant to a standard of hardiness to weather the mild winter of that climate. Near the Mission Doleres several thousand tea-plants have been raised during the last year. The tea plant is grown in China and Japan very extensively in latitudes corresponding to all California, and the San Francisco journals think that there can be little doubt that it will be cultivated hereafter, for household purposes at least, on every farm in that State.

PRATT.—A Mr. Ephrain Pratt, of Shutesbury, Mass., who died at the age of one hundred and seventeen years, lived very much on milk, and that in small quantity; and his son, Michael Pratt, attained to the age of one hundred and three years, by similar means. Indeed, greater longevity has occurred in no instance where the individual was not a pattern of abstemiousness in diet.

AT THE DINNER table of a Cabinet officer in Washington a few days since, there were one Vice President, one Secretary of the Treasury, three Senators, three ex-Senators, two ex Major Generals, three ex Representatives and six ex-Governors, and yet there were only six persons in all. The persons were Messrs. Hamlin, Chase, Sprague, Morgan, King and Ramsey.

CROUP.

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,
EDWARD GWINELL,

To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and half,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,

MONEY EASILY MADE,
By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.
OF
Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 180 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 150 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south-east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store.

U. S. 5-20'S !

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "GENERAL RECEIVING AGENT," will continue to supply the public.

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the Interest Bearing Legal Tender 7 Per cent Notes, it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach and advance to a handsome premium as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 6-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50 $1 00, $500 and $1000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10 000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust-monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent. on the amount of income when the income of the holder exceeds Six Hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Bankers and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds; and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

For a Medicine that will cure Coughs, Influenza, Tickling the Throat, Whooping Cough, or relieve Consumptive Cough, as quick as

COES COUGH BALSAM.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in its native town and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quantity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound.

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to child, ren of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

No Family should be Without it.

It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you. It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures is has made.

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Descriptive Circulars with Samples of Work will be sent gratis.

THESE Machines make the lock-stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and and great variety of sewing required in a family, for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marsailles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle, or tension, or making any adjustment of Machine whatever!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood, and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

Please call and examine, or send for Circular.

IMPROVED DUPLEX, RUBY ACTION,

A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated .8 k gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved DUPLEX in FULL RUBY ACTION, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants, and persons traveling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING LEVERS

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our IMPROVED DUPLEX, and superior adjusted movements with 'Stop,' to be used in timing horses, etc; has FOUR INDEXES for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

We ask no pay in advance, but will forward either of them to responsible parties, to any part of the loyal States, with bill payable to expressman when the goods are delivered, giving the buyer the privilege of examination, and if not satisfactory, the watch can be returned at our expense.

The express companies refuse making collections on soldiers and other parties in the disloyal States, consequently all such orders must be accompanied by the cash to insure attention. We make a deduction of two dollars on either watch when the payment is forwarded in advance.

Money may be sent by express at our expense.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS [02 Cents] per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the inestimable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves, being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares; and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who ordered comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best article, without regard to price, for

Family Sewing,

Braiding,

Hemming,

Felling,

Tucking,

Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is out at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"The Machine, in the opinion of the committee more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any other exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21, 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine for family use. The stitch is unexceptionable." Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPARATION.
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSORBENTS into healthy action, by which the WATER, OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, OR CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance.

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which the medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those dire ful diseases?

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female.

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE,

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemen's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good:
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, betwen Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

The Winter Wind.

Hush! moaning wind, thou murmurest past,
With low, sad wailing filled;
Peace! peace to the voice of the mournful blast!
Wind, lonely wind, be stilled!

Some spirit of sadness thou must bear,
O wind! on thy rushing wings;
And this is the wailing sound I hear
When that sorrowing spirit sings:

Thy voice is not that of the gentle breeze,
That breath of the blushing spring,
That sports 'mid the flowers and laughst 'mid the leaves
Where the birds of the summer sing:

Nor the whirlwind's breath in its gathering might,
By the wings of the tempest borne,
When the lightning gleam through the clouds at night,
O'er the sky, when the storm rolls on.

But thine, O wind! is the chilling breath;
And that voice, so full of sadness,
It speaks to the heart of grief, of death,
Of all—yes, all but gladness.

And it minds us too of the cold, dark tomb,
Where sleeps the silent dead·
Of life when 'tis reft of its beauty and bloom,
And its joy and its brightness have fled.

Thou art not heard when the spring is seen
To come with her laughing showers,
When she decks the earth in a robe of green,
And wreaths her brow with flowers.

But thy voice is heard 'mid the naked trees,
When the bright flowers all are gone,
Thou comest to scatter the withered leaves,
When the summer birds have flown.

Thou followest pale WINTER's icy feet,
And thy voice its moaning keepeth,
When the Earth, like the dead in their winding-sheet,
In her cold, white mantle sleepeth!

Thou sigh'st o'er the grave where the lowly rest,
Where no mourner comes but thee;
Thy voice is heard on the ocean's breast,
Far, far o'er the deep, dark sea·

And sad must sound the dreary wail
Around some silent wreck,
As howling through each tattered sail,
It sweeps the lonely deck.

That sigh too is heard 'mid the dashing surge,
For the sleepers 'neath the wave;
That mournful blast is the only dirge
Above the sea boy's grave.

ISABEL ASHMORE,

THE MAY QUEEN.

BY JOSIE M. L. M.

In a lovely glen in a sequestered part of our village stood a small white cottage half embowered with roses and honeysuckles. It had been for many years the residence of Mr. Ashmore and his only daughter, lovely Isabel Ashmore. How my heart beat when I think of thy swan, like and glorious beauty. Yes, she was as lovely as the first blush rose of summer; but never was she so transcendantly beautiful as when arrayed for a May day festival. My eyes rested with profound admiration upon her graceful, fairy like form, her rich, golden hair clustering in drooping ringlets o'er a brow and neck of alabaster whiteness, the softly rounded rosy cheek, the full, cherry lps dimpling with smiles, the large, blue, soul speaking e es, with their sweeping fringes, so soft, light and changeful.

She was standing in a vine clad arbor, whose green leaves and early roses, here and there a pale forget me not, had enticed fair Isabel hither to fill her tiny basket, which she carried in her left hand in which she also clasped her little straw hat, trimmed with pale blue ribbon. Her dress was of pure white muslin, the skirt of which was looped at intervals with pink and white roses, exposing a richly embroidered under skirt, with one tiny foot encased in a white kid slipper, poised on the rim of a flower pot, with one small snowy hand in the act of reaching a tiny flower that grew and bloomed in fancied safety from the distance which intervened between itself and its more lovely companions.

Alas! thou sweet, trembling flower, more dainty fingers could not, cull thee, nor couldst adorn a fairer bosom.

"What a magnificent little paradise of a village this is, Paul; see the spire of yon church sparkling and glistening in the glowing beams of the morning sun; the lowing cattle, the singing birds, the murmuring of the ripling stream at our feet, have not failed to usher into Glenwood village a glorious morning. And this is your native place, Paul, but methinks you are marvelously sad and silent, while I have rattled on to myself, and have grown eloquent while viewing the romantic home of your boyhood."

"True, Willie, I do feel melancholy upon gazing the first time after an absence of seven long years, on the familiar scenes of my boyhood; and as I look around me scarcely a shrub do I see which is not associated with fondest and earliest recollections; and just beyond that spire, to which you have alluded, sleeps in tranquility both my parents, while their only child is a lone wanderer, with naught to call him to his native place, which must ever bring painful recollections, but to fulfill a promise which I made to my little cousin Isabel, who was a universal favorite of mine. Her father resides in that small, white cottage you see at the right."

"Yes, but you haven't told me of the nature of your promise, Paul."

"Well, Isabel was a lovely little girl, about nine years old, and after bidding my uncle adieu, I went in quest of my pet Isabel. I found her seated in her arbor, weeping bitterly. I seated myself by her side, and, taking her small hand in my own, I said: 'Isabel, I have come to bid you good-bye.' Her heart was too full for reply at first, but raising her head and gazing pleadingly in my face, her large blue eyes fiilled with tears, said, 'O, cousin Paul, don't go away—I shall surely die. Who will I have to take me sailing on the lake, or to play ball with?' I kissed her trembling lips, and said, 'Isabel, don't cry; you are so kind and good that every one loves you, and more than one will be glad to fill my place as your escort. Now try to be happy, and one of these days I will come back to Glenwood to see you.' She twined her little arms around my neck, and nestled her head in my bosom, and said, 'O, yes, do, dear Paul; do promise that you will come back, and I will try to be happy, and love those canaries you gave me.' I gave her the desired promise, and with a parting kiss tore myself from her clinging arms, and was soon on my journey, and seven long years have elapsed since that day, and I fear that Isabel has forgotten me, or else has pined herself away at my long absence."

"That is right, Paul; make up your mind she has taken the veil, and is wasting her life in convent walls, all for you, conceited fellow!"

"Well, we shall soon know, Willie; for here we are in the heart of Glenwood village."

"Heigh, ho! this is May Day! See there, on the green, they have erected a May pole,—come, let us spur up, and leave our horses in charge of the landlord at the inn, and hasten to the scene of action. Perhaps we are not too late to witness the corocation of the Queen and pay her our homage; and perhaps I may discover my lovely coz among the many holiday clad rustics."

The arrival of the strangers on the green caused not a little curiosity among the said rustics. Fair maidens threw sundry glances, while those of the masculine gender greeted them with a frown of suspicion, and took occasion to warn their favorites not to waste their smiles on the strangers, who were undoubtedly fellows from the city, of doubtful character. Fortunately for our friends their attention was attracted in an opposite direction, and a joyous welcome greeted the most beautiful girl that ever graced a May-day festival; attired as we last saw her in the arbor, her hat jauntily set on her head, from which escaped in free luxuriance her sunny curls. The simplicity of her costume heightened the effect of her rich and sparkling beauty.

"Oh heavens, how beautiful! the same—my sweet cousin—Willie, is she not divine?"

"Yes, she is indeed, the most lovely being I ever beheld. But, Paul, please loosen your grasp upon my arm, a pain will quite unable me to appreciate her charms."

We will leave our friends gazing upon the scene with uninterrupted admiration, and return to our heroine. Now came the election of the Queen, and judging from the admiring glances, we were not long guessing upon whom the choice would fall. The vote in favor of Isabel Ashmore was unanimous. The floral crown, composed of myrtle, roses and dewy violets, soon decked the luxuriant curls of the lovely May Queen; after which the company formed themselves into a procession, bearing garlands, bouquets and May poles, headed by their Queen with her flowers—wreathed sceptre and crown—the rays of the sun glittering on the dew drops, making them to flash and sparkle like diamonds on her brow—took up their line of match through the village streets. Cheers of applause from the inhabitants greeted them on all sides. Our friends followed the procession until they arrived at the Inn, which they entered, leaving the fair Queen and her attendants to continue their march unmolested by the ardent gaze of a pair of piercing black eyes.

"Give me your hand, Paul, you lucky fellow, are you dreaming yet? How in the world could you resist making yourself known? Oh, I see! she has stormed the citadel of your heart, leading your senses captive."

"I will confess, Willie, that my faculties are somewhat impaired, but hope that a few hours' rest and a good dinner will restore them."

"But how long do you intend remaining incognito, Paul!"

"They will conclude the amusements of the day with a dance. I shall join them and tell her that Paul has retured; meanwhile, let us refresh ourselves with as good a dinner as our kind hostess can provide us."

Night came, glorious night; and her pale Queen came slowly up, followed by her glittering attendants, and stood gazing down upon a shady grove, from which issued the sounds of revelry, in which mingled the tones of a violin, being tuned by skillful fingers; we, too, will peep with the moon upon the fairy scene. Why, as I live, there stands Paul talking with his cousin. Listen; the signal is given, and profiting by the familiarity attendant upon parties of the kind, he has lead her in triumph to the head of the dance, to the chagrin and envy of the many rustic competitors. The dance is concluded, and Paul has led his fair partner to a seat under the drooping branches of that old elm. Oh, how lucky! It has brought them so near that I can hear all that they say.

"Would you believe me, lovely Queen, if I should tell you I had frequently heard of you before to-day?"

"I really cannot say; please explain, sir."

"Had you not once a cousin, by the name of Paul St. Leon?"

"Oh! yes, my dear cousin Paul! tell me, do you know him?"

And while speaking she had grown quite pale, and had clasped the stranger's arm with her small white hands, and stood gazing beseechingly in his face.

"Sweet cousin, am I so changed that you do not recognize in me your cousin Paul?"

Willie was in the act of soliciting the black-eyed Jessie's hand for the next dance, which, however, was doomed to be postponed, for a murmur of surprise caused him to turn abruptly around, as Paul was in the act of releasing Isabel from a very cousinly embrace. The mystery soon being explained, all stood back, giving the new found friend the precedent of accompanying the Queen to her home. A week passed away and still our friends lingered at the Glenwood, amusing themselves with morning rambles, with Isabel and Jessie as their escort; but it seems their rambles have turned into an equestrian exercise this lovely morning, for Paul is assisting Isabel to mount her fine black Rover. How lovely she looks, with her neatly fitting habit and coquettish cap, from which drops a snowy feather, mingling with her curls, making a poor attempt to rival her fair brow in whiteness. Willie De Vere and Jessie Meredith have joined them at the end of the lane and now for a ride to the lake, and then for a sail on the bright waters.

"Well, here we are, after an hour's ride; allow me, coz, to assist you to dismount, and we will rest upon this bank until our companions return; and I hope they will be successful in procuring the boat from its crabbed old keeper"

"Oh we will be sure to get it, Paul, for Jessie's black eyes will plead our cause; but, Paul, I had such a sweet dream last night; would you like to hear it?"

"Certainly, my dear, I should be too happy to know all your dreams."

"Well, I dreamed you promised to stay with us always, and never return to that dusty, noisy city again."

"Why, Isabel! that was similar to my dream; but instead of calling you coz, I had substituted that of my own sweet, little wife. Now, Isabel, fulfill my dream and I will yours?"

I heard no more, but saw that Isabel's face was very red, and Paul kissed her until she put her hand over his mouth, and I think he kissed that too,—but here are Willie and Jessie with the boat.

"Take care, Isabel, that saucy wave acts as though it would like to kiss your dainty feet as a greeting."

"I do declare, Paul, you are poetical and it seems you have not exhausted all sentimental feelings in our absence."

"Oh! no, Willie, I assure you those feelings are inexhaustible, and, from Jessie's flushed cheek, I suppose you are not devoid of similar feelings."

They all laughed and away darted the boat. Of course I had but a bird's-eye view of the scene. I came to the conclusion that Paul was jealous of the waves, from the manner in which he guarded his fair charge. Paul didn't keep his promise never to leave Isabel again, but went away taking Willie with him, only to return again to the cottage in a splendid barouche, drawn by a pair of splendid horses, which the bridal party entered, and was conveyed quickly to the church, which was already filled with anxious villagers. Before the altar stood Paul St. Leon, upon whose arm leaned our lovely May Queen, arrayed in a snowy satin, her luxuriant curls looped from her brow by a bondeur of pearls, and her large, liquid eyes shone like stars through a veil of blue. Nor did I marvel at Paul's look of unutterable happiness as he bore our May Queen from our village to grace the halls of wealth and fashion.

Nor was Willie slow in imitating his example. But a few months elapsed ere Jessie, too, was borne from Glenwood village a bride, for her bright black eyes and raven tresses. And thus were our stars transplanted to another firmament, and so, with the moonlight and starlight falling upon their mansions, and the sunlight of love falling upon the hearts of its inmates, we bid them adieu.

PORES OF THE SKIN.—Besides the mouths of these little oil glands, many anatomists have considered the skin—and the cuticle of course—as pierced with little openings called pores, almost innumerable. Some have reckoned them at 1,000,000 to every square inch. Others, however, deny all this. But one thing is very certain, which is, that what we call sweat, as the accumulated perspiration of the body, when it becomes abundant, is constantly escaping through the skin and its cuticle, in the form of a thick mist or fog, as we may see by holding a bright mirror close to it, which will immediately become tarnished. Or if we sit where the sun shines accross us, upon a wall, we can see the shadow of the mist which ascends from us, rising like a sheet of thin smoke upon the wall.

CLEANLINESS.—It is of less consequence to people to know how this moisture escapes, than to know the fact that it does so, and to know also that if this constant perspiration—for that is its name—is checked for any considerable time, mischief in the form of colds, fevers, rheumatisms, and consumptions may ensue. Great mischief may also follow, if this perspiration is checked by neglect or cleanliness.

There are also other offices performed by the skin, which are curious, but I will mention no more of them now. The more you understand the structure of this part of the frame, the more you you will see how important it is that it shou'd be kept clean by washing, every day we live.—And yet how many there are, who hardly wash at all, except perhaps their faces and hands! Such persons are scarcely fit to be entrusted with a habitation so fearfully and wonderfully made. In truth, they are not usually long so entrusted with it as others. The great Architect usually turns them out many years earlier than he would, if they took care of it; and in the case of cholera or malignant fever, sometimes thrusts them out with apparent, though deserved violence—Herald of Health.

Curious Boy.

"Mal mal what does 'Hush' mean?" enquired a young urchin of his mother.—"What do you want to know that for, sonny?" "Well because, I asked Sister Sally what made her dress stick out so in front, and she said 'Hush!'"

☞ Before you take the first mouthful, place upon your plate all you are to eat, and eat but twice a day! This rule accomplishes all that the practice of weighing our food does, for soon the eye can determine, with all needed accuracy, the quantity; and without the display of a pair of scales.—Dr. Lewis.

QUESTIONS FOR DEBATE.—If the traveler who took the course of human events has never been heard of since?

If the hollow of a log can be heard?

If 12 inches make a foot, how many will make a leg?

Do potatoes ever wear out, as we often hear of potato patches?

If pig-pens will write?

Will the Cape of Good Hope fit a fashionable lady?

Be Manly.

Never try to keep out of any one's way when you owe him anything. It is bad enough, in all concience, to be in debt; make your condition no worse by growing mean under its pressure. When you cannot pay up at the appointed time, don't make believe sick, don't skulk about in out of the way streets to avoid meeting your creditors, don't sneak around the first corner when you catch sight of him before he has seen you. All such conduct is unmanly. No doubt you feel averse to standing face to face with a man whom you owe—pay day past and you the debter still—is is mortifying very; but it is only one of the natural consequences of borrowing; and as you have in ocurred the penalty, why meet it like a man.—Face your creditor, let him know that you neither forget the debt nor underate his patience with you. Say frankly that you are very sorry to keep him so long without his money, and that you will pay up as fast and as soon as you possibly can.

This is the only creditable way to conduct yourself in the case. There is no respect due to a man or woman who, feeling unable to meet their paynients at the proper time, instead of going at once and explaining the reason why they fail, and doing and saving all they can to assure their creditors that they mean no dishonesty, just sneak about carefully, anxious to shun the creditor's sight.

☞ OLD PARR, already famous, who died at the age of one hundred and thirty-three, was a farmer of extremely abstemious habits, his diet being solely milk, cheese, coarse bread, small beer, and whey. At the age of one hundred and twenty he married a second wife, by whom he had a child. But being taken to court by the Earl of Arundel, as a great curiosity, in his one hundred and fifty-second year, he very soon died, as the physician decidedly testified, after dissection, in consequence of a change from a parsimonious to a plentiful diet.

NO THANKS.—A fashionably dressed lady entered a car on the Hudson River Railroad, a few evenings since, after standing for some minutes, a young gentleman rose and gave her his seat. She made no acknowledgement of this act of courtesy. The cars stopped at an upper station on the river, and the lady was about to leave the cars, when a quaint old Dutch gentleman called to her.

"Madam, you have forgotten something."

"What, sir?" said the lady.

"Why, you forgot to thank the young man for his seat."

INFERENTIAL REASONING.—A physician took a young student to see a patient who was confined to his bed. "Sir," said the physician to the sick man, "you have been imprudent, you have eaten oysters."

The patient admitted that he had.—Returned home, the student asked the doctor how he discovered that the man had eaten oysters.

"Why," replied the doctor, "I saw the shells under the bed."

A few days after the student was sent to visit the same patient. He soon returned, however, saying that he had been kicked out of the house for telling the patient he had been imprudent; he had eaten horseflesh.

"Horseflesh, you young fool! what do you mean?" cried the doctor.

"Because, sir, I saw a saddle and a pair of spurs under the bed."

☞ The Date.—There is no fruit that can be eaten so constantly, or with so much impunity, as the date. It is like bread, and is bread to whole nations of orientals. And what a delicious bread, baked by the sun, and showered in profusion upon the earth, to be gathered and laid up for the future, either dry or in huge corbels, or pressed into a conserve, which, when cut into slices, looks and eats like plum-pudding. Immense quantities of this conserve are exported from Egypt and Arabia into all the neighboring countries, where it is much prized, especially in the harems, where the woman and children may almost be said to eat it incessantly.

☞ A few days ago a little urchin in Westminister, England, saw a shilling lying on the footway. He had not sooner picked it up than it was claimed by a carman. "Your shilling hadn't got a hole in it?" "Yes it had," said the rogue of a carman. "Then this un ain't," coolly replied the boy, and walked off triumphantly.

The Tecumseh Herald,

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 4, 1864.

Copperheads and Abolitionists.

The readiness and bitterness with which these offensive names are applied by the more zealous partizans of the present day, each to men of the opposite party, grates harshly upon the ear.

These names are offensive, because they are by those using them, meant to mean traitor, and nothing else, and yet they are for the most part applied to those whom even those applying them have no idea are traitors, or could ever under any circumstances, consent to become such.—Hence the injustice, and impolicy of the application.

That there are both copperheads and abolitionists who are traitors, no one will deny. The teachings of Fernando Wood and Vallandingham, of William Loyd Garrison and Wendell Phillips, are, and have all along been, nothing less than treason. They have all alike held that, unless the government would adopt and carry out each his own peculiar views, then that government was to be resisted and overthrown. Now, however sincere a man may be in either his anti-slavery or his pro-slavery views, the moment he puts himself upon that platform he is a dangerous man to the peace of society, and is a traitor to his country.

And when a lingering attachment to party inclines any one to feel, to prefer the success of his favorite party, to the success of our national arms, or the prosperity of our common country, it is full time for that man to stop and think whether he is not himself fast drifting into that which may lead him on to disloyalty and crime.

Men may honestly differ, and have the right to differ, in their views upon the subject of slavery, the policy of an administration, or the tendency of a party, as upon any other subject, and are not to be denounced or called opprobrious names for doing so; but they should never allow their love for party to shut out from sight, and strangle out of life, that higher and holier love for country, which is the only true basis of fealty and patriotism anywhere.

To cherish and foster, and, still more, to seek to fan into a flame, the old party spirit of former days, when parties are in fact no more, and old party issues have drifted away out of sight, never to return, is neither wise nor well.

It is well for us to remember, no matter who was right or wrong,—no matter who is responsible, or not responsible for it, (for as to this men do, and will always differ,) that it is the persistent cultivation of an intense party spirit, and an unyielding urging forward of extreme party measures, that has now involved our nation in all the horrors of a civil war.

It is of but little consequence for either party to now say to the other—if you had stopped a little short of what you did, all this might have been avoided. It is perhaps true, and if it is so, it may be equally true of both. But they did not stop, and it is now too late; and it can only be left to impartial history and the results of time to decide who were right, if there be any right about it, and who were wrong, for wrong there surely was.

It is a question which a one-sided, selfish party spirit cannot and ought not to attempt to decide.

It is not strange that men should incline to adhere to their old party affinities, nor should they be denounced for doing so, and it will generally be found that those who do blame them for this, are doing the very same thing themselves, only upon the other side.

Their real theory is, that a firm adherence to party is a duty,—only it should be to the party which is right, and that of course is theirs. But we believe, that in a time like this, a strong party spirit is not right, and that those who foster and urge it on are perpetrating a crime against our common weal.

Old issues are dead; and why should we seek to bolster up the clay cold idol, from which all life has fled?

Slavery is doomed; and it is the rebellion, not the Republican party, nor the administration of Abraham Lincoln that has doomed it. Why then any longer debate as to whether it ought, or ought not to die. We cannot save it if you would, and would not if you could.

It was once a party talisman, powerful with the people, with which to lead to victory and power; but it can do so no more. Let then "the dead past bury its dead," and let us all arouse and nerve ourselves as one common brotherhood of a common man, to meet and solve those great new issues which, so full of destiny for our country, this unforseen epoch of the times has thrown thus suddenly upon our hands.

Mr. Tanner's Lectures.

This gentleman, being himself a half-breed Chippewa, and an Indian Missionary in Minnesota, under the patronage of the Methodist Episcopal Missionary Society, recently gave us three Lectures at Bidwell's Hall in this village. He is a man of marked ability, and his Lectures are spoken of with much interest by all who heard them. We were ourselves prevented from attending more than one.

His special mission is one of Indian philanthropy, and does honor alike to his heart and manliness.

He is attempting through the public mind, to induce the United States Government to retract, that cruel and inhuman policy, so persistently pursued by it, at the dictation of unscrupulously selfish and wicked men, for more than a quarter of a century, looking solely to the gradual removal and final extinction of the Indian race, and set about the more humane attempt to protect, civilize and christianize them where they are, and of right ought to be.

He puts the population of the Indian tribes west of the Mississippi, at four millions of souls, very many of whom he has at different times visited and preached among, and justly claims, as it seems to us that humanity as well as christianity requires that we should no longer attempt to drive them out of existence, but seek rather to ameliorate their condition, to protect and save them from the vices and impositions of unprincipled traders and border ruffians.

He acted as Scout and Indian Guide to our forces in the late war in Minnesota with the Sioux Indians, and relates many interesting incidents of those gloomy days.

He relates also, as there has always been in every Indian war which we have had for the last twenty years, some flagrant wrongs and outrages, on the part of the whites, which might well provoke any people whether civilized or savage, into an attempt to secure redress by an appeal to arms.

The Indian race he holds to be a portion of the lost Ten Tribes of Israel, and believes that they crossed from Asia at the Behrings' Straits in an early day, and thus covered this Western continent.

In adverting to Missionary work among them he very naturally complains of the want of tact, and adaptation to Indian knowledge and character, while many of Missionaries, relying solely upon their college and book learning exhibited, this he consides a great obstacle in the way of success; and in speaking of it somewhat in ironey, he may have given the impression to some that he placed a low estimate upon both the character and the zeal of our Indian Missionaries, and upon the value of Missionary labor.

But he really does neither. He speaks at all times in the most glowing terms of both their purity of life and morals, and earnest zeal of these Missionaries, in their work, but only regrets that they should so much, ignore that strong common sense and tact which the Indian almost uniformly possesses, and in which he is very likely to be even their superior.

By exhibiting any marked want of appreciation of these qualities which the Indian has been taught to so much value and respect, lessens his respect for the missionary himself and of course, in the same proportion, his respect for him in his his religious teachings, and this was all that in any sense he intended to say.

The Indian has already a knowledge of the Divine Being, and his reverence for him is not inferior to that of the white man, and in one respect quite superior, for he will never, under any circumstances, take his name in vain. A real Indian does not know how to swear, until he learns it from the white man.

Their system of Families, or the brother-hood of the Totem amongst them, also the Secret brother-hood of the Meta, as explained by him, are exceedingly instuctive and interesting. The Indian character is indeed a study worthy of much consideration, for they are in many respects a noble race and as this is the land of the Indian, we confess to an abiding interest in all that pertains to them, and most cheerfully lend a helping hand to anything that can properly be done, to rescue them from an undeserved degredation, and seemingly impending oblivion.

30 Recruits From TECUMSEH or DRAFT!

The President's late call compels us to fill the quota by the 10th of march next, we therefore invite our fellow citizens to meet at Union Hall, friday, feb. 5th, 1864, at 7 o'clock P. M. and devise measures to secure that object. Rally Citizens.

The News.

February 1st, 1864.

An order from the President announces that a draft for five hundred thousand men will be made on the 10th of March next. At Washington this "500,000" is understood to mean 200,000 in addition to the call for 500,000 in October last, the draft being for whatever deficiency may exist in the whole number on the 10th of March.

From the statements of a rebel officer captured in Gen. Kelley's department it appears that the rebels have found it necessary to divide regiments from the extreme southern portion of the "Confederacy" into squads, and station them at different points in the mountains and valleys to prevent the desertion of other troops. The impressment of citizen is still vigorously carried on by the rebel government.

Gov. Gamble, of Missouri, died on Saturday.

The disaffection among the rebel troops appears to be spreading. The garrisons of Forts Mongau and Gaines, at the entrance of Mobile harbor, are reported to have mutinied on the appearence of our fleet off that place, and desertions in large numbers are also reported.

Pursuant to orders from Gen. Schofield, several persons have been arrested at Louisville, charged with kidnapping negroes in Missouri and selling them as slaves in Kentucky. The same parties are also said to have been engaged in passing counterfeit greenbacks, a very appropriate combination of employments.

The Kentucky Legislature has adjourned without choosing a United States Senator, and it is now probable that no election will take place until the fall session.

Three hundred and fifty of the 12 Michigan Infantry have arrived at Cairo, en route for home, having re-enlisted as veterans.

Feb. 3d.

The telegraph reports a few days since mentioned that rumors had been received of a revolt in the rebel garrison of Fort Morgan, at the entrance of Mobile harbor. A correspondent of the Boston Journal, with the fleet off Mobile, writes that this rumor was well founded. According to his statement, the revolt assumed immense proportions. The rebel fleet, lying in the bay, was brought in requisition to quell the outbreak, when the American flag was hoisted and all the guns of the fort were brought to bear upon the gunboats, compelling the latter to retire. The mutineers, probably in high exultation at the temporary success of their daring scheme, seen to have negelected the proper precautions, and were therefore subsequently conquered. It is also stated that secret societies exist among the soldiers, the members of which are pledged to fight no longer. Large numbers have already deserted, and others are reported as ready to follow at the first favorable opportunity.

Advices from Memphis state that the 16th Army Corps are preparing for a movement into Mississippi for the purpose of securing supplies of corn and forage.

The Baltimore & Ohio Railroad is again the victim of a rebel raid. Considerable damage has already been done. The telegraph wires were yesterday cut east of Cumberland, and three bridges over the Forth Branch and Patterson Creek destroyed.

The Richmond Examiner is most gloomy over the prospects of their sham Confederacy. It says the time for offensive military movements by the South has passed, and that their future reliance must be on their powers of endurance.

Dispatches from Mobile to the Richmond papers announce that about the 25th ult. our gunboats entered the Pascagoula River, and, landing our forces took possession of Madisonville and were evidently contemplating an advance on Mobile. Pascagoula is at the mouth of the river of the same name, which empties into the Gulf of Mexico about 20 miles west of the entrance to Mobile Bay, and is north.east from Ship Island.

An absurd report is started by the New York World to the effect that we are on the eve of a war with France. It is said that Mr. Seward, assuming that the unsettled condition of Europe would not admit of complications with the United States, has made such demands of the French Government as they could not accede to, and that our Government must either recede from its claims or accept a war. We place no reliance upon the report.

The Kentucky Legislature have still, thus far failed to elect a U. S. Senator.

A correspondent of the Boston Journal, on board of the gunboad Jackson, at Ship Island, writes on the 18th ult. as follows: Last night about 10 o'clock a small sail boat came down the sound with some very important intelligence. The rebels in Fort Morgan revolted, and during the difficulty the gunboats in Mobile Bay attemted to arrest the garrison of the fort. The whole fort being in revolt, and with the American flag flying, they opened on the rebel gunboats with every gun in the fort. They succeded in driving the gunboats off, but were not on their guard, and that night a large force was sent down from Mobile, capturing the whole garrison excepting four men, who escaped in the darkness in a small boat, and came to Ship Island, when we heard for the first time the astounding intelligence. Since then we have heard more of the revolt from some additional deserters. Seventy of the revolters are condemned to be shot to-day in Mobile.

We also learn from these deserters that on Horn Island, up the sound, there are 18 more deserters from the rebel army, and in and around Mobile, and on Round Island, there are about 50 deserters from the same quarter.

These deserters bring the very important intelligence that the rebel army in and around Mobile have organized secret societies determined to fight no longer.—It is said that the movement started among the soldiers is daily growing stronger, and many officers are compromised in the movement. I think it is the most important movement since the war, and is most significant in favor of the successful termination of this war. I am confident that the news is true.

Legislature.

SENATE.

Lansing, Feb. 2.

Mr. Croswell, from the Judiciary Committee, to which was referred the constitutionality of the soldiers' suffrage law, made a report, affirming the constitutionality of the same.

The following bills were passed:

Amboy, Lansing and Traverse Bay, Battle Creek and Hastings, Jackson and Grand Rapids, and Grand Rapids and Indiana Railroad bills; Senate bill No. 8 (Babcock's), to legalize the action of certain counties in regard to bounties; a bill to extend the time for the collection of taxes in the township of Ingersoll, Midland county, and the bill to legalize the organization of the village of Fenton.—The bill to legalize the action of the School Board of Portage, Houghton county, was lost, but reconsidered and tabled.

The afternoon session was occupied in committee of the whole on the soldiers' suffrage bill.

In the House, the soldiers' bounty bill was under consideration, numerously amended, and ordered reprinted. Several entire new sections were added; one to enable towns and counties to retire their old bonds and issue new ones, and one to meet the case of counties that had issued the bonds which had been subscribed for and issued by sub-districts.

The following bills were passed: To extend the time for the collection of taxes in the town Holly, Genesee county, in the town of Woodstock, Lenawee county, in the town of Romulus, Wayne county, and Lapeer, Lapeer county;

A bill to grant an extension of time to the Grand Rapids & Indiana Railroad;

To provide additional pay for subordinate officers in the State Prison.

To enable corporation by vote to change their place of doing business;

To provide for recording United States revenue stamps;

To aid in the construction of a railroad from Paw Paw to Lawton.

A resolution was passed for the adjournment of the House on Thursday evening. Hereafter the morning session will commence at 9 o'clock.

A Dancing Party in Norway.

Soon we heard a sound resembling the yells of a pig. This was a violin. It was accompanied by a noise resembling the beating of a flour barrel, which, we found proceeded from the heel of the musician, who had placed a wooden board under his left foot for the purpose of beating time with effect. He thus, as it were, played the fiddle and beat the drum at the same time. Round this musician the young men and maidens formed a ring, and began to dance. There was little talking, and that little was in an undertone. They went to work with the utmost gravity and decorum. Scarcely a laugh was heard—nothing approaching to a shout—during the whole night; still they enjoyed themselves thoroughly. I have no doubt whatever of that. The nature of that dance was somewhat incomprehensible. It seemed as if the chief object of the young men was to exhibit their agility by every species of impromptu bound and fling of which the human frame is capable—including the rather desperate feat of dashing themselves flat upon the ground. The principal care of the girls seemed to be to keep out of the way of the men, and to avoid being killed by a frantic kick, or killed by a random blow. But the desperate features in each dance did not appear at first. Every man began by seizing his partner's hand, and dragging her round the circle, ever and anon twirling her around violently with one arm, and catching her round the waist with the other, in order, as it appeared to me, to save her from an untimely end. To this treatment the fair damsels submitted, with pleased though bashful looks. But soon the men flung them off, and they went at it on their own account; but they kept up a sort of revolving course round their partners, like satellites encircling their separate suns. Presently the satellites assumed some of the characteristics of the comet. They rushed about the circle in wild, arratic courses; they leaped into the air, and while in that position slapped the soles of their feet with both hands. Should any one deem this an easy feat let him try it.

Then they became a little more sane, and a waltz, or something like it, was got up. It was really pretty, and some of the movements were graceful; but the wild spirit of the glens re-entered the men rather suddenly. The females were expelled from the ring altogether, and the youths braced themselves for a little really heavy work; they flung and hurled themselves about like maniacs, stood on their heads and walked on their hands,—in short, became a company of acrobats, yet always kept up a sympathetic feeling for time with the music. But not a man, woman, or child there gave vent to his or her feelings in laughter! They smiled; they commented in a soft tone; they looked happy—nay, I am convinced they were happy—but they did not laugh. Once only did they give way to noisy mirth, and that was when an aspiring youth (after having made the nearest possible approach to suicide) walked round the circle on his hands and shook his feet in the air. We left them after a time, in the full swing of a prosperous manufacture of enjoyment, and walked home, about two o'clock in the morning, by brilliant daylight.—Good Works.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

CROUP.

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,

Tecumseh Lecture and Library Association

There will be a meeting of those who have already giving in their names, (and of all who desire to do so,) as members of the association, for the purpose of perfecting said organization at Bidwell's Hall, on Thursday evening Feb. 18th, 1864, at 7 o'clock. The general plan of the organization contemplates making it a permanent benefit and attraction to the place Its funds are mostly to be derived from an Initiation Fee of $3, and a Premium Note of $30, running without interest and liable to an annual assessment of $2, only. It will embrace a Lyceum, Lectures, a Library and Reading Room, containing papers and magazines, and the library, open for reading two or three evenings in the week during the winter, as the Society shall direct, and books from the library to be drawn and returned every two weeks, in such manner and under such restrictions as the association shall direct. Public Lecturers of note and ability from abroad, will be engaged for the winter course, as the society shall direct. The Gentlemen will engage in Lyceum Debates, and the Ladies with Essays for the same. All both gentlemen and ladies who would secure to themselves increased facilities for intellectual and literary enjoyment are cordially invited to take part in the undertaking. It is proposed to commence with one hundred numbers, and by the terms of its organization its permanent existence is as you see, secured for at least fifteen years.

Piano Fortes

We would call the attention of our readers to the fact that R. Read, has opened a room with J. E. Hall, for the sale of Pianos. His superior instruments not only come well endorsed by many of the most distinguished pianists, including such artists as Wm. Mason, Strakosch, Mills, Sanderson, Morgan, Hagen, Maretzek and others, with Gottschalk at their head, all of whom have recommended them in the strongest terms; but, what is better, the instruments themselves assert their own superiority in a manner which no musician can mistake. Their tone is something wonderful. It is all tone and no noise—powerful, brilliant and sweet—with a peculiar penetrating quality, not unlike that of an old Cremona violin.—Call and see the Pianos and enquire the prices.

☞ The following is the list of lucky ones, who drew the best prizes at the Gift entertainment, which was given at Union Hall, in this village, last Friday evening.

Hub Stout, Gold Watch, valued	$100.
Mrs. E. Carson, Cutter,	65.
Mrs. J. A. Merritt, Silver Watch,	25.
T. Cummins, Silver Watch,	20.
H. Wescott, Album,	10.
H. Williams & Co., Album,	7.
R. C. Catlin, Album,	6.
E. H. Hoag,	4.
S. G. Aten, Silver Teas,	9.

There were a number of other gifts drawn varying in value from six dollars to sixteen cents. The exhibition passed off satisfactorily, and those who did not get a cutter or gold watch, seemed to think that they had got their money's worth of fun.

☞ Gilbert Gage, of Dover, Lenawee county, recently sold a steer five years old, weighing 2,400 lbs., for $170. Mr. Walter Thompson, of Madison, of the same county, sold a pair of yearling steers for $76,50, that weighed 2,110 lbs.

☞ One evening last week an elderly man was found lying on a sidewalk at Adrian with both legs broken.

U. S. 5-20'S !

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "General Subscription Agent" will continue to supply the public

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury, mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking Associations now organizing in all parts of the country will in a very short period absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from twelve to fifteen millions weekly frequently exceeding three millions daily and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Daily Receipts of the Patent and Internal Revenue, and in the Interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come to put on the market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association as well as the minds of all who have idle money at their hands to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach and advance to a handsome premium as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 6 20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50 $100 $500 and $1000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10 000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities towns or counties, and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent., on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds Six Hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds; and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

In the matter of the estate of Sarah A. Cole minor. Notice is hereby given that by virtue of license and authority for that purpose granted to me by the Judge of Probate in and for the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, I will sell to the highest bidder, at Public Auction, to be held at the office of Bills and Baxter in the village of Tecumseh, in said County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, on Saturday the 20th, day of February next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon—of that day, all the right, title and interest of said Sarah A. Cole minor of, in or to the following described premises, lands or parcels of land lying, situated being in the township and village of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan to wit:

All that piece or parcel of land, in the village of Tecumseh, county of Lenawee and State of State of Michigan bounded by a line commencing on the west line of Ottowa street in said village, eleven rods south of the south-west corner of Ottowa and Chicago streets in said village, and running thence west to lands of M. A. Patterson, thence south five rods, thence east to said Ottowa street, thence north on the west line of said Ottowa street to the place of beginning, containing about fifty-five roads of land more or less.

Also, a vacant lot of land in the east half of the north east quarter of section twenty-eight (28) in town five (5) south of range four (4) east and described as follows, commencing at a point ten roads north of the line between sections 28 and 33, in said town, and eighty one rods and one link west of the line between section 27 and 28; thence north ten rods, thence east eight rods, thence south ten rods, thence west to the place of begining, and containing eighty rods of land, more or less.

Also, another piece of land situate in the said east half of the north east quarter of section twenty eight, commencing at a point twenty four roads north of the line between said sections 28 and 33, eighty-one rods and one link west of the line between sections 27 and 28, thence north ten rods, thence east eight rods, thence south ten roads, thence west eight rods, to the place of begining, and containing eighty rods of land more or less, excepting therefrom two rods of land in width on the west side of said premises for public use as a highway, and all of said lands being also subject to the right of dower in the widow of Stephen E. Cole deceased.

CROUP.

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,

EDWARD GWINELL,

MERCY GWINELL.

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, tuck, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand: with directons so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilites for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

Orange Judd of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tub full of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large percentage on its cost. We think the machine much more than PAYS FOR ITSELF EVERY YEAR in the saving of garments. There are several kinds, nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs, otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good Canvasser wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense

A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material—by the most experienced judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. Improved twelve full ruby action, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants, and persons traveling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING LEVERS

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our Improved Duplex, and superior adjusted movements with "Stop," to be used in timing horses, etc; has Four Indexes for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above COST

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is that their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for prarticular localities of country, but he helps the Tea buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of Tea, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

Hemming,

Felling,

Tucking,

Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it.—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder.—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced Machines.—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fulfills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs' as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have one in our own family."—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette

"We esteem it the best machine for family use The stitch is unexceptionable."—Signed by many hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

THE SCANDINAVIAN

"No post-up Union contracts our powers, For the whole boundless Continent is ours."

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula, Syphilis, Skin Diseases, Old Sores, Salt Rheum, Rheumatism, Dyspepsia, Sick Headache, Liver Complaint, Fever and Ague, Leucorrhœa, Female Complaints, Erysipelas, St. Anthony's Fire, Tumors, Eruptions, Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever-Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache, Costiveness, Colic Pains, Cholera Morbus, Indigestion, Pain in the Bowels, Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of digestion and excites the assimilative into healthy action, by which the water or calcerous depositions, and all unnatural enlargements are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for men, women, or children.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever."
Shall be every freemon's cry;
Union forever, let it stand,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has, bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, betwen Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

To Maty.

BY B. J. NICHOLS.

Maty, dearest, when your mother
Lies slumbering beneath the sod,
Strive, my dear child, your grief to smother;
Look for comfort unto God.

Mourn not for me, darling Maty,
For, Oh! I long to be at rest,
Where no sorrow, care and trouble
Will no more disturb my breast.

Lay me down beside your father,
Gently in the quiet tomb;
Let not deep and deadly sorrow
Fill thy youthful heart with gloom:

Think thy mother watches o'er you
Still to guide you safe from harm.
God has promised to protect you—
Look to his Almighty arm.

I will watch and guide your footsteps
O'er life's dark and stormy sea.
Will you listen to the teachings
Of the Angel ones to thee?

Be kind and gentle to thy brothers,
Be submissive, good and true.
Strive, Oh strive to heed these teachings
That your mother gives to you.

Oh! I've loved you all so purely,
None can know a mother's love,
None can know her cares and sorrows,
But the God that rules above.

An Indian's Gratitude.

During the summer of 1862, the civilized world was astounded at the atrocious barbarities that were perpetrated upon the settlers of Minnesota by armed hands of infuriated savages. Every atrocity known to the calender of crime was enacted, with all its bloody and heart rending accompaniments, without regard to age, sex, or condition. For many months the different tribes who lived in the neighborhood had been banded together for the purpose of exterminating the white settlers, goaded, doubtless by the non-payment of their government claims, and alarmed at the continual encroachments of the white settlers upon their hunting grounds. With such quietness and security was the whole matter conducted that no suspicion of their intentions entered the minds of the settlers, and the confidence which association implants in the human breast remained undisturbed.

On the night of ——, 1862, at that solemn hour when the parting and the coming day meet in fond embrace, the pall of death fell upon the village of——. The eyes that were closed by the gentle hands of sleep, were forever sealed by death, never to open again upon the light of this world. The fond mother, who slumbered with her babe pillowed upon her bosom, was inhumanly massacred, and her darling in life was her companion in death. Neither age, sex, nor infirmity was a shield against the fury of the savage demons, and the scalping knife and tomahawk glistened in the light of the burning village. The village was reduced to a shapeless mass of smouldering ruins, with which were mingled the charred remains of those who loved their village home.

Among those who escaped the uplifted hand of the revengful savages was old Joe Stack; but while his life was spared him, yet he was taken prisoner, and marched away amid the exultant and execrating abouts of the savages.

Joseph Stack, or as he was more familiarly known "Old Joe," was a man of the age of fifty years, tall, stout, and muscular, with iron-grey hair and a grizzly beard, and possessing a countenance which stamped him as an honest man.—He had resided in the settlements for a quarter of a century, long before the birth of the village above alluded to. A New Englander by birth, and possessing the education and polished intellect characteristic of that portion of the country, and a descendant of the Pilgrim fathers, old Joe was ever a truthful, honest, and truly religious man. He married in early life, but the happiness of his blooming manhood was blasted by the withering hand of death, and he soon consigned to their last resting place the mortal remains of his beloved wife. Shortly after he removed to the frontier settlements, and sought, by the dangers and excitements of a frontier life, to obliterate from memory the harrowing and afflicting scenes of his early life. He was a resident of the village at the time the Indians made their night attack, was there taken prisoner, firmly secured to prevent any possibility of escape, surrounded by a guard of Indian warriors, he was taken to the nearest Indian village, where they arrived soon after mid-day.

As some time had now elapsed since their descent upon the village, and the outrage had become known throughout the surrounding country, it became necessary, as a matter of prudence, that they should continue their flight uninterrupted until they reached the heart of their settlements, where their increased numbers and superior knowledge of the locality would prove of vast advantage to them in a collision with the white settlers.

The Indians were all well mounted, and poor old Joe, deprived of a horse, nearly overcome by fatigue, and his mind nearly crazed from the recollection of the appalling scenes of the previous night, pinioned so tightly that the circulation of the blood was greatly impeded, and in some of his limbs entirely prevented, was compelled by his savage attendants and the frequent application of the lash, to keep up with the band. To fall now would bring instant death upon him, so summoning to his assistance those qualities of patience, fortitude and endurance, which had never deserted him through life, he renewed his efforts, and finally reached the Indian village where a halt was ordered, completely prostrated and unable to proceed further. His captors soon realized a sense of his stupidity, and the question of his disposition was paramount in their minds.—To release him now would be to place the settlers upon their track. He was unable to travel further, and to make him captive would involve delay, and it was therefore determined that the chiefs and the warriors should assemble in council and decide upon his fate. A courier was accordingly dispatched to the wigwams of the warriors, and the council was soon assembled which was to decide upon the ultimate fate of old Joe.

Old Joe sat in the centre of the group upon the hide of a buffallo which had been stretched upon the ground for his accommodation, surrounded by the warriors of the tribes, their eyes glistening with demoniac fury, and their faces bedaubed with with the hideous war paint. Big Thunder now arose to adress the council, and the eyes of the warriors present were steadfastly fixed upon him. He was a chief of seventy years, and though he slightly bent beneath the weight of time, he still possessed all the haughtiness and dignity of a mighty warrior. His words, though few, were slowly and impressively delivered, and were as follows:

"Warriors! we have assembled to talk together, and to decide upon the fate of yonder pale face. Shall to-morrow's sun shine upon him a free man returning to his people, or shall to-night's moon mingle its rays with his scalp, as it hangs upon the pole of the wigwam. You shall decide. I have spoken."

When he resumed his seat a cry arose, "To the stake with him!" "To the stake with him!" "Death to the pale face!"—Ogeechee, a veteran warrior, then arose and spoke as follows:

"Warriors! you cry death to the pale face. As the mountain echoes to the valley so do I, Ogeechee, cry death to the pale face. Warriors, listen to my words, and if they fall upon you like an April shower, changing the cold and barren winter of vengeance into the genial spring of forgiveness, then shall Ogeechee's heart rejoice. If they fall upon you like hail, making winter more wintry, let them not chill your hearts against our captive.—Warriors, when the prairies began to soften before the smile of spring, I set out upon a hunting expedition. The melting snows had swollen the mountain torrents and deluged the valleys. My route led me across a foaming torrent which dashed along with the speed of the untamed steed. In crossing my foot slipped, and I was soon struggling with the flying waters. Warriors, my scars attest my bravery, and I have always beaten my enemy. I was conquered by the maddened waters. I remembered nothing more until I awoke from my sleep in the land of the Great Spirit, and found leaning over me the form of 'Old Joe,' our prisoner.—But for him Ogeechee would have gone to the land of the Great Spirit, and to the happy hunting grounds Ogeechee is here—old Joe is here. My life was his—his life is mine. Shall it be said that Ogeechee was ungrateful? Never! Warriors I claim the life of the captive."

When Ogeechee resumed his seat amid a painful silence, for his words had touched the Indian heart, preceiving which, Panther, an inveterate enemy of the white race, arose, and in words of fervid eloquence addressed the council:

"Warriors! the words of Ogeechee were like the breath of summer! Mine shall be like the blast of winter! The words of Ogeechee fell upon your ears as gentle as the falling leaf upon the softened earth. Mine shall be like arrows, to pierce your hearts. Warriors, look around you.—But a few moons back we roamed through our hunting grounds, undisturbed. Now our Great Father has sent his pale faces here, and we are driven on and on, like cattle before the lash of their master, until our hunting grounds are gone, and the bones of our dead warriors bleached beneath the sun of Heaven! Our squaws, rent with the pangs of hunger, ask us for food. Food! Where is our food now?—The pale faces took our lands, they took our food upon those lands, and our squaws must die. The orb of day, when it rises above the the tops, gives promise of a beautiful day; but ere long, clouds and darkness may obscure its brightness.—The golden promises of pay, which our Great Father gives us for the lands the pale faeds have stolen, have been overcast by the clouds of infidelity and neglect, and the rain drops of want shower upon us.—Warriors we have unburied the tomahawk, the scalping knife glistens by your side, and the war paint is upon your faces Shall you wash it off? Yes; but it shall be in the blood of the pale faces.—Your scalping knives shall be sheathed but it shall be in the hearts of your foes. The tomahawk shall be buried when the last pale face shall have gone beyond the limits of our hunding grounds, never to return again. Shall the pale face live, and like a snake, poison the hand that spared him? No—let the pale face die!"

Panther resumed his seat amid intense excitement, and an attempt was made by the young men to run off old Joe, and summarily dispose of him, but the keen eye of old warriors discovered the movement, and it was frustrated. It was decided by the council that old Joe should be burnt at the stake within an hour from that time, as any further delay might endanger the safety of the band.

Joe received the news of his fate with an air of indifference and nonchalance that charmed the warriors, for no race of men so highly prize courage, and so truly despise cowardice as your Indian brave.

He was firmly secured to a tree by thongs of buffalo hide, and bundles of wood, which to him were the faggots of death, were piled around him. Everything was soon in readiness, the men had returned to their wigwams to prepare for the coming carnival of death, leaving a stout Indian to guard the captive, and it only required the presence of the chiefs as the signal to carry the execution into effect.

Ogeechee knew the unoppeasing enmity of his companions against the white population, and though despairing of having any effect upon their minds, he determined to address them on behalf of old Joe, and by a recital of the obligation he was under to him, attempted to avert the doom which threatened him. His failure weighed heavily upon his spirit, but otherwise he betrayed no emotion, or exhibited any sypmtom of discontent, which would lead his associates to infer that he was dissatisfied at the result of the conference. He preserved that cold, stolid indifference which was a personal characteristic of him.

Shortly after the talk at the council had ended, and the men of the tribe had gone to their wigwams to prepare for the scene, Ogeechee hurried to the spot where old Joe was secured, strictly guarded by the warrior, who stood but a few paces to the rear, tomahawk in hand, ready to pounce upon the prisoner at the slightest manifestation of a desire to escape. Approaching the sentinel, he spoke as follows:

"Malito, the war paint upon thy face is faded and blurred. Go to your wigwam, and return here with thy cheeks decked in colors for the war path. I shall guard the captive, and here I shall wait thy return."

Malito was only too anxious to avail himself of the opportunity, and hastened away. When he had departed, Ogeechee cut the thongs which secured the captive.

"Old Joe of the pale-face settlement," said he, "your road lies to the south, mine to the North. Fly like the eagle—Ogeechee is not ungrateful."

Old Joe grasped the hand of Ogeechee, and then fled into the woods. His limbs, stiff and paralized, the effects of the manner in which he was secured, necessarily retarded his flight; but he perseveringly pressed onward toward the goal of life, and liberty, with all speed possible. For a time fortune seemed to smile upon his efforts, and hope beat high within his breast, but escape from bondage was not to be purchased without a greater sacrifice. The noise and tumult which arose from the direction of the Indian village informed him that his flight had already been discovered, and the pursuit commenced This seemed to discourage him, but nevertheless he continued his flight, pressing onward with rapidity, keeping well within the shelter of the woods, and taking advantage of all the numerous streams that watered the country conceal the vestiges of his trail. At present the result depended upon the fleetness of the pursuers and the pursued, and old Joe, with his frontier experience, his frame hardened by the toils which often beset his path, and inured to the hardships of the backwoodsman, was no idle game for the bloodhounds who were on his track. Before him, and dividing the woods where he then was from those beyond, was situated a level prairie of about one mile in width, and this old Joe was compelled to cross. He dreaded the result of his flight across this open land, but to hesitate would be madness, and he boldly started forward at an increased pace. Scarcely had he gone one half the distance, when he discovered the form of Panther, mounted upon his horse, and flying toward the distant woodlan, so as to surround and prevent him from securing the cover of the woods

Now the struggle became intense, but the advantage was with Joe, as the Panther had to travel over four times the distance to circumvent him. Panther had not forgotten his rifle, and old Joe knew well the fame of the Indian warrior whose unerring aim was a theme of universal comment throughout the settlements. He knew also that once within the range of that deadly weapon his life was valueless, and hence he watched with intense anxiety, the gradual but sure approach of his savage pursuer. From the combined efforts of his revengeful spirit, and the excitement of the pursuit, the eyes of Panther glowed like living coals of fire To him the capture of old Joe would be an exploit which would be heralded with rejoicing by his people. They would gather around him, the chiefs would thank him, and the people would shout his name. If they asked for old Joe, he would point to the dripping scalp upon his belt, and then the heavens would be rent with their shouts again. He urged on his flying steed to renewed efforts, until he had arrived within range of his flying enemy, and raising his rifle to his shoulder he drew the trigger, but the hard clink of the hammer upon the nipple told that it was uncapped. Infuriated, he threw it from him, and drawing his tamahawk, with a yell, continued the pursuit, but blinded with passion he did not perceive a sudden rise in the prairie, and his horse coming in contact therewith stumbled and threw his rider with a fearful force over his head. His neck was dislocated by the fall, causing immediate death, and a mangled mass of human clay only remained of the once brave and haughty warrior.

Old Joe soon reached the cover of the woods, and after many days of weary journeying he at length reached the settlements in safety, greatly overcome by fatigue, and much to the surprise and gratification of the settlers who thought he had suffered the fate that had been meted out to the unhappy inhabitants of the village of——.

Ogeechee, after old Joe had fled, determined not to survive his treachery to his people, plunged his knife into his manly bosom, and the heart of Ogeechee soon ceased to beat forever. In this position he was discovered by the warriors, who attributed his death to the cunning of old Joe, and he was buried with all the pomp and circumstances attending the funeral rites of an Indian brave. His memory is sacredly revered by the white settlers, to whom old Joe related the history of his captivity, for they truly knew how fathomless are the depths of an Indian's revenge and an Indian's gratitude.

☞ A mother was hugging and kissing a four year old, when she exclaimed, 'Charley what makes you so sweet?'—Charley thought a moment, and having been taught that he was made of the dust of the ground, replied, with a rosy smile,' I think, mother, God must have put a little suger with the dust, don't you?'

☞ The same ladies who would faint to see a man's shirt on a clothes line, will, in a waltz, lovingly repose their heads upon the same garment when a man is in it, allowing him to take liberties for which a country girl would box his ears till his cheeks tingled.

☞ Some one inquires, in the name of Mrs. Partington "Why can't the Captain of a vessel keep a memorandum of his anchor, of weighing it every time he leaves port?"

"Bite Bigger, Billy."

One day a gentleman saw two boys going along one of the streets in New York. They were barefooted. Their clothes ragged and dirty, and tied together by pieces of string. One of the boys was perfectly happy over a half-withered bunch of flowers which he picked up in the street.

"I say, Billy," said he to his companion, "wasn't somebody real good to drop these 'ere posies jest where I could find them—they're so pooty and nice. Look sharp, Billy, mebby you'll find something bimeby."

Presently the gentleman heard his merry voice again, saying, "O, jolly! Billy, if here ain't most half a peach, and it ain't much dirty, neither. Cause you hain't found nothin' you may bite first." Billy was just going to take a very little taste of it, when his companion said, "Bite bigger, Billy, mebby we'll find another,' fore long."

What a noble heart that boy had, in spite of his rags and dirt! He was "doing good" in the way that we are speaking of. There was nobody for him to be kind to but his companion in poverty—the poor, ragged boy at his side. But he was showing him all the kindness in his power when he said "Bite bigger, Billy." There was nothing greedy, nothing selfish about that boy. His conduct shows how even a poor, ragged boy can do good by showing kindness.

"Bite bigger, Billy—mebby we'll find another 'fore long." Who can help admiring the noble heart of that poor boy? I would rather have that boy's kind and generous spirit than have a monarch's crown upon my head without it. "Bite bigger, Billy!" Think of these words if you are ever tempted to be unkind or selfish to your companions.

GO-AHEADISM.—Sir Charles Lyell, when in the United States, received the following advice from a friend. When you are racing with an opposition steamboat, or chasing her, and the passengers are cheering the captain, who is sitting on the safety valve to keep it down with his weight, go as far as you can from the engine, and lose no time, especially if you hear the captain exclaim, "Fire up, boys—put in the resin!" Should a servant call out, Those gentlemen who have not paid their passage will please go to the ladies' cabin!" obey the summons without a moments delay, for then an explosion may be apprehended. "Why, to the ladies' cabin?" said I. "Because it is the end of the boat, and they are getting anxious for the personal security of those who have not yet paid their dollars, being, of course, indifferent about the rest. Therefore never pay in advance, for should you fall overboard during the race, and the watch cries out to the captain, "A passenger overboard!" he will ask, "Has he paid his passage?" and if he receives an answer in the affirmative, he will call out, "Go ahead!"

The Prophetic Dew Drops.

A delicate child, pale and prematurely wise, was complaining on a hot morning that the poor dew drops had been too hastily snatched away, and not allowed to glitter on the flowers, like other happier dew drops that live the whole night through, and sparkle in the moonlight and through the morning, onward to noonday. "The sun," said the child, "has chased them away with his heat, or swallowed them up in his wrath." Soon after came rain and a rainbow, whereupon his father, pointing upwards, said: "See, there stand the dew drops, gloriously reset—a glittering jewelry—in the heavens; and the clownish foot tramples on them no more. By this, my child, thou art taught that what withers upon earth, blooms again in heaven." Thus the father spoke, and knew not that he spoke prefiguring words; for soon after the delicate child, with the morning brightness of his early wisdom, was exhaled, like the innocent dew drops, from earth into heaven.

RATHER NOT.—We find the following in the Buffalo Courier: An Ohio newspaper printer, whose wife was not at all noted for her beauty and gentleness, was compelled to set out on a journey, and leave his work in the hands of the apprentices. The evening succeeding his departure, when the boys came in to supper, the wife, in addressing the elder, in an unusually kind tone said: 'William, while your master is gone you must take his place.' William, confused and horrified, his face burning with blushes, in a voice of abject beseechingness stammered out, 'please ma'am, I'd prefer to sleep with the boys.'"

Foreign Complications.

Absorbed in a life-struggle for the perpetuity and even very existence of our democratic government and free institutions at home, we have, for the most part of late, overlooked foreign policies and plans as pertaining to our own.

The day for serious apprehension from an active interference against us from any of the governments of the old world is now, we believe substantially past.

England, with her feudal aristocracy, from the first bitterly opposed to us, and anxiously looking and hoping for our downfall, has encouraged rebel privateering, to the serious detriment of our commerce it is true, but also to an extent which even the London Times denounces as dangerous by involving and subjecting them to claims for the recovery of commercial damages, and the tide of popular sentiment amongst the middle and lower classes there is fast overwhelming the power and bitterness of the aristocracy.

The mooring of a Russian fleet of war in New York harbor, and the cordiality with which it was received also, opened the eyes of that government to the possibility of danger to themselves in such a foreshadowed alliance, and the roar of the British Lion has, from that day, been as mild and harmless as that of a "suckling dove."

France, or rather Louis Napoleon, has, as we believe, heretofore had a more serious purpose of interfering with the affairs of this government.

But his success in his Mexican Expedition, which was only preparatory to a Confederate Alliance, has not been such as to flatter him into any precipitancy in the matter. Nor has the success of the Confederate rebels been such, of late, as to make an alliance with their crumbling cause especially desirable.

Napoleon's principal strategy just now is not, how to get successfully into, but out of Mexico.

There is virtue in that old Monroe doctrine yet, and whatever old government of Europe choses to test it, will find that the United States is not the only government upon the American continent that believes in, and will fight for it. An expedition three thousand miles from home and from their base of supplies, is something more than mere child's play, and if the French autocrat can once get fairly out of his present rash and ill-advised undertaking, there is little danger of his repeating the experiment upon a nation so powerful as that of the United States.

There is, besides, every appearance of a general war brewing in Europe which shall, in immensity of proportions, realize the propetic visions of the field of Armageddon.

Russia was humbled, not conquered, at Sevastopol. Conscious of the ability, she is, slowly but surely, watching and waiting for an opportunity to wash out the stain.

Political combinations and complications have rendered France and England jealous, each of the other, and they both feel that in the great impending struggle they must be, and stand prepared, to rely rather upon themselves than upon any false-hearted ally, and therefore it is that just at this time they are particularly just as much in favor of the Monroe doctrine as we ourselves are or can be.

And it is such considerations as these, as well as our constantly increasing strength, that inclines us to believe that the time for any foreign interference in the issues of this rebellion has gone by, never to return.

"Repudiated"

We notice, that Azariah Elridge D. D., and E. H. Thompson, Esq., authors of the famous visitor's report, to which we alluded to a few weeks since, have been surperseded by our worthy Superintendent of Public Instruction, and the Rev. Dr. Hogarth, of Detroit, Geo Woodruff, Esq. of Marshall, and Dr. S. S. Cutter, of Coldwater, appointed in their stead. This is a prompt and fitting repudiation of those gentlemen who entirely neglecting the performance of their own duties stepped so far out of their way to volunteer a rather extended criticism upon those of others.

It may perhaps seem strange to some, that the expiration of an official term should be held to be repudiation in any sense, but as this is the view taken and expressed by these gentlemen they will not of course complain that the same rule should be applied personally to themselves.

Correspondence.

MR. EDITOR:—The following letter has just been received in acknowledgement to one that was put in a box of Hospitable stores and started off to our western soldiers, asking the one that got it to answer it.

To most of us an answer was not necessary to satisfy us that our contributions reached the needy soldier in the far off south or west; but to others a weekly epistle, just like the following, is necessary to wake them up to do their duty, even half way.

LITTLE ROCK, ARKANSAS, Jan. 22d, 1864.

Respected Friends of Tecumseh:—With great pleasure I received your good letter a short time ago. I should have answered it immediately, but other business has detained me.

"But you remain in grateful remembrance of every soldier in the army for your labor and your kind sympathy for us. We feel encouraged to fight the battles of our country, to endure hardships and trials, and to sacrifice our lives, if need be, by your help. Your field of labor is large and cannot reach us, but the soldiers all know that they have kind friends at home, who labor and pray for us all.

"I was strongly reminded, the other day, of the influence that your kind labor has upon the mind and feelings of the soldiers. The Sanitary Commissioners had brought down a large lot of goods for the soldiers of the army; and among the things (too numberless to mention) was what we call a house-wife, which indeed comes very handy for every soldier. I wish you could have seen their silent expressions, by a smiling countenance, or heard their praises and gratitude to the blessed ladies of the North, as these house-wives were divided out among them There were mittens also sent us. But much as the boys dislike to get a mitten from the young ladies, now they proved very acceptable, as the cold weather has been quite severe for two weeks. The sick in the hospitals appreciate the luxuries sent them very much. The number sick is comparatively small at present. The weather has changed, and the mild spring breeze is having a good influence upon the soldiers' health

We have all re-enlisted as veteran soldiers, and our motto is, to stand by the flag that we have carried for over two years, as long as there shall be a rebel in arms, and until the stars and stripes float over every State in the United States, God assisting us.

I shall have no war news to write, as we are living comparatively quiet, at present, and we are so far out of the way that we hardly know what is going on in other parts of the world. We have been expecting an attack from the rebels for some time, and the Federals had a fight with them two days ago at Pine Bluff, 20 miles from here,—when the rebels got routed and driven back. The citizens of the State have just been electing a new Governor, and will soon be ready to come back to the old Union as a free State.

"The masses of the people here are strongly opposed to slavery, and want it wiped out from the continent. Our cause is prospering, and we look for peace with confidence. Only, dear friends, remember us—pray for us,—and with your aid and sympathy, we shall come out conquerers. Accept our thanks and gratitude, and we remain your humble friends.

BOND ALSOM.

☞ Two scamps have been convicted in Chicago for swindling. As Prof. Humbolt, they advertised their ability to predict the future husband or wife of any party, and promising to send the photographs of those interesting personages for the small consideration of 25 cents. They visited all the photographic galleries in the city, and purchased all the old, imperfect and useless, and often recognizable photographs they could find, at possibly three to five cents each, and to their correspondents they mailed one of these ghastly pictures. Correspondence commenced slowly at first, and each old maid who had almost abandoned all hope of meeting an affinity, was so delighted at receiving an assurance that she was to be called for, and had even the assurance afforded by a "counterfeit" presentment of the coming man, generally ventilated her success to such an extent that the applications for husbands rapidly increased. Over 1,000 letters had been received when the police put an end to the business.

APPOINTMENT.—Gov. Blair has appointed Hon. T. W. Ferry, of Grand Haven, as the Commissioner for this State for the Gettysburg Cemetery. It is an excellent appointment.

☞ Unrequitted love is a great power in society. Its influence lately caused a Washington lawyer to blow his brains out, and a St. Louis Dutchman to drown himself.

☞ Many a man thinks it a virtue that keeps him from turning a rascal, when it is only a full stomach. One should be careful and not mistake potatoes for principles.

The News

Monday, Feb. 8th.

Late intelligence from Tennessee state that the fights recently reported as occurring there were only skirmishes between cavalry foraging parties, and that their importance has been much exaggerated.

The President has issued a proclamation approving the trade regulations recently adopted by Secretary Chase.

A New York journal states that Gen. Halleck will resign in case Grant is made a Lieutenant General. It also says that the draft ordered for the 10th of March will not be postponed.

Affairs in Tennessee are assuming a more interesting phase. It is reported that Longstreet's army has been heavily reinforced, and is concentrated at Sevierville. Communication with Gen. Parrott at Cumberland Gap, is cut off, but intelligence received from him by a courier states that he can hold his position for months, if necessary. The battle at Tazewell on Sunday last, was of several hours' duration. Gen. Willcox is reported as having received a painful though not serious wound. Our forces were repulsed but fell back to a good position. No serious apprehensions for their safety are felt at Gen. Grant's headquarters, although a Washington dispatch represents the situation as critical.

It is reported that between 8,000 and 9,000 deserters have come into our lines at Chattanooga since the battle of Missionary Ridge, and it is thought that this is one reason why the rebel Gen. Johnston has removed his forces from Dalton to Rome, Georgia.

Our Friday's dispatches left Gen. Early and Col. Mulligan facing each other at Moorfields, on the south branch of the Potomac. We now learn that a fight of six hours' duration ensued, in which the rebels were worsted and compelled to retreat up the river, closely followed by our forces. Thus for the present, we presume, ends the operations in Western Virginia.

We have some particulars of the affair at Newbern. It seems that on Sunday last the rebels appeared in large force before that post and drove in our pickets.—A reconnoissance was made by detachments from one or two eastern regiments, but the reconnoiterers were speedily gobbled up by the overwhelming numbers that they encountered. It will be remembered that we have already had, through Gen. Butler, intelligence of the safety of Newbern.

Tuesday, Feb. 9.

A Richmond paper says that place is threatened by our forces, 30,000 of which are represented as moving on the city.—

Dispatches from rebel sources give further details of the reported fight on the Big Black, in which it is stated that our forces were defeated. Notwithstanding this, much anxiety appears to be felt for the safety of Mobile, at which place much excitement is said to prevail.

From the dispatches published this morning it would appear that the recent movement on the Rapidan is not yet at an end, as previously intimated. Heavy firing was heard on Sunday, which was supposed to proceed from an engagement with the cavalry force sent in pursuit of the enemy.

An amendment to the conscription bill has been adopted by the House, providing that persons furnishing substitutes not liable to the draft shall be exempted for the period for which they were drafted. Where the substitute is liable to the draft, the persons are exempt only until the next call for troops.

Late advices from Newbern represent that the enemy have retired and that all is now quiet.

It was reported some time since that the rebel army had evacuated Dalton, but our dispatches to day contradict the statement.

By means of the Conscription Bill the rebels are said to have great success in filling up their army, which is now represented to be larger than ever before.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Richmond Examiner says several thousand Yankee prisoners are about to be sent to Georgia. Nine hundred of the 6,000 or 7,000 in Richmond were in the hospitals on the 26th.

A gentleman from Washington informs the Pittsburgh Express that it will soon be impossible for a vessel to get into that port without incurring almost an equivalent positive loss.

The steamer Austin, from Havana, arrived at Mobile Jan. 9th, with a cargo of pork, etc. for the rebel government.

WASHINGTON, Feb. 5.—The Naval Committee of the House have gone to Chester, Pa., to investigate the charges of fraud in connection with the naval contracts there.

The bands of guerrillas seem to have vacated Fairfax county, Va. A cavalry expedition made a long scout towards Blue Ridge without finding anything except a few stragglers from Mosby's band.

NEW YORK, Feb. 6.—The Times' letter from Chattanooga says rebel deserters are pouring into our lines by hundreds, and open mutiny was feared by the rebel leaders in consequence of the late conscription law.

Napoleon's Dying Words.

A late visitor at his tomb in St. Helena writes: "I turned away from house and tomb with deeper convictions that even of 'the vanity of man as mortal.'—Who would not? And the death-room! How the last words linger about it which Napoleon uttered in it, from a crushed and bleeding heart!

'General Bertrand, I shall soon be in my grave. Such is the fate of great men So it was with Cæsar and Alexander.—And I, too, am forgotten, and the Marengo conqueror and emperor is a college theme. My exploits are tasks given to pupils by their tutor, who sits in judgement upon me, according to me censure or praise. And remark what is soon to become of me. I die before my time, and my dead body, too, must return to the earth, and become food for worms.—Behold, the destiny now at hand of him who has been called the Great Napoleon? What an abyss between my great misery and the eternal reign of Christ, who is proclaimed, loved, and adored, whose kingdom is extending over all the earth.'"

The Omnibus Brigade.

The Richmond Examiner grows humorous over the wholesale conscription.—We find the following in its columns:

"The repeal of the substitute law is having the effect of forcing into the army both fat and lean; it is, we hear, proposed for the benefit of the very men whose size incapacitates them for infantry and artillery exercises, and whose weight would prove fatal to their horses should they 'join the cavalry,' to raise a company, consisting of men weighing 250 pounds and over, to take the field in iron-clad omnibuses, and to be called the "Omnibusters." Owing to the great weight of the men and machine, it is believed that not more than four warriors can be allowed to an omnibus; but the smallness of their numbers will make amends for the colossal proportions of the men and the great efficacy of their arms, it being contemplated to have them sheathed in iron and armed with the most distructive weapons known to modern warfare, whilst two mountain howitzers will, during an engagement, belch forth death and destruction from the sides and stern of each omnibus. It is believed that the size alone of these warriors will have a very demoralizing effect upon the Yankees, who have been taught to believe that we are near the point of starvation.

The rendezvous for recruits is to be opened on Vauxhall Island. Persons duly qualified and desirous of joining this new and favorite branch of the service should apply at once, as the time within which voluntary enlistments will be permitted expires next Monday. Persons willing to enlist as drivers will be paid a handsome bonus.

SHARP PRACTICE.—Some merchants in New York who have been surreptitiously sending goods in the South have been "done" out of a few thousand dollars by a "cute Yankee captain of a sloop running between New York and Rockaway.—The merchants, hearing of his intimate knowledge of the eastern shore of Virginia, and the great speed of his craft, sounded him on the probability of running the blockade. Indignant at first, he finally was induced to entertain the proposition on being promised a share of the profits, and indemnity for the sloop should she be captured. The next day the shippers received notice from Rockaway that the captain had safely arrived there, and that the cargo had been confiscated—to himself. Of course they could do nothing; to prosecute the captain would ruin them, or to make any attempt to recover the goods would result probably in securing themselves lodgings in Fort Lafayette. The captain, it is supposed, will make $7,000 or $8,000 by the operation, which, although not strictly an honest one, may not trouble his conscience much.

☞ Mr. Milburn Bridges, who resides some six miles from Columbia, Tenn,, on the Shelbyville pike, was recently robbed of $4,000, and badly beaten by the villian who robbed him. A few days afterwards the Sheriff of Maury county, Mr. Thomas J. Crosby, living some miles from Columbia, on the Williamsport road, was robbed of $13,000, by men clothed in the uniform of the Federal army.

A memorial has been sent to Congress by the Board of Trade of Philadelphia, remonstrating against the passage of a national bankrupt law.

☞ Counterfeit $20 greenbacks are in circulation, so skillfully executed that one was received by one of the Boston banks a few days since.

☞ The distance to Virginia City, in the mining region of Idaho Territory, is 1,600 miles from Atchison, 850 miles from St. Paul.

☞ Somebody said the other day that a stick thrown at a dog, in front of a Washington hotel, hit five Brigadier Generals.

☞ 'I say mister,' said one Yankee to another, 'how come your eyes so croked?' 'My eyes? Why sitting between two girls and trying to look at both of them at the same time.'

☞ "Old age is coming on me rapidly," as the urchin said when stealing apples from an old man's garden, and saw the owner coming, cow hide in hand.

☞ A Michigan soldier who was arrested for stealing a rebel's goose, said he found the bird hissing at the American flag, and arrested it for treason.

☞ A gentleman, walking with two ladies, stepped on a hogshead hoop, that flew up and struck him in the face.—"Mercy!" said he, "which of you dropped that?"

Sabbath School Convention.

The annual meeting of the County Sabbath School Association was held in the chapel of Plymouth Church, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday afternoon and evening, Feb. 3d., 1864. There were some forty or fifty ladies and gentlemen present from different parts of the County, but, owing to the very limited notice given, there was not as large an attendance as might otherwise have been expected.

Mr. A. L. Millerd, one of the Vice Presidents, was called to the chair for a portion of the meeting, and the Rev. Mr. Skillman of Macon, for the remainder of the afternoon Session.

A Committee to nominate officers for the ensuing year, reported the following, who were unanimously chosen:

President—Rev. S. P. Wishard, of Tecumseh.

Vice Presidents—E. R. Willard, Adrian City; Prof. John McEldowney, Adrian town; Dr. R. B. C. Newcomb, Blissfield; Fitch Reed, Cambridge; John M. Bird, Dover; C. Quick, Fairfield; Rev. J. W. Allen, Franklin; A. Kent, Hudson Rev. W. Skillman, Macon; Benj. Allen, Madison; W. Hopkins, Medina; Rev. D. H. Evans, Palmyra; Israel S. Hodges, Ogden; Hiram Raymond, Raisin; Sanford Hause, Ridgeway; A. J. Knight, Riga; Wm. Rhodes, Rollin; J. S. Smith, Rome, F. A. Baker, Seneca; P. Bills, Tecumseh; A. L. Smith, Woodstock.

Secretary—H. E. Baker of Adrian.

Treasurer—W. S. Wilcox of Adrian.

Executive Committee—C H. Dewey, Cambridge; W. H. Osborne, Macon; Rev. H. Judd, Hudson.

The Committee to look after the matter of procuring funds to employ a colporter to visit the destitute portions of the County, through Mr. W. S. Wilcox, reported general dilatoriness in action, which was finally wholly suspended when it was ascertained that a colporter could not be obtained for less than five or six hundred dollars, while they were limited to four hundred.

This report was received and the Committee discharged.

It was also resolved to hold a meeting a short time before the meeting of the State Association, and endeavor to perfect a connection with that body. A motion was also carried to empower the President to arrange a programme of exercises, to be advertised with the call for each meeting.

The special meeting was voted to be held at Clinton, the President to designate the time.

The annual meeting was fixed at Hudson on the first Wednesday in February, 1865, at one o'clock in the afternoon.

☞ The portraits in the Governor's room, at New York, have been levied on to satisfy a judgment of $28,558 32, obtained last year by a couple of city contractors The Comptroller refused to pay the claim, and the picture will be sold unless the matter is arranged.

ROBACK'S STOMACH BITTERS

Having been called upon to examine the formula or receipe for the above Bitters which has been given to me by the inventor, I take pleasure in stating to the public, that they are well known to the medical profession as possessing properties purely tonic, and the combination is well calculated, and especially adapted to that class of diseases arising from a disordered condition of the hepatic functions, or general derangement of the liver, so common in the malarious districts of the West and South. They contain a larger proportion of tonic ingredients than any other Bitters that have been submitted to me for chemical examination. I bespeak for them a wide spread popularity and cordially commend them to the public use.

Very respectfully,
C. W. ORDWAY, Analytical Chemist.

ROUP.

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,
EDWARD GWINELL,

Hotel Needed.

It has long been a matter of surprise to persons acquainted with the hotels in Tecumseh, that we should be so destitute of good houses for the accommodation of the traveling public. We persume there is not another town in the State, of the size of Tecumseh, that is so poorly supplied with hotel accommodations. We are deserving of at least one first-class hotel and such a house here, well managed, would pay handsomely. We hope soon to see some enterprising capitalist open a number one hotel in Tecumseh.—A better opening for that business cannot be found.

Movement in Real Estate.

There was quite a change of neighbors here one day last week. John S. Sherman, Esq., purchased the residence of George Curtis, Esq., corner of Chicago St. and Maiden Lane, at $1300; Geo. Curtis, that of A. Hanford, Esq., corner of Pottawatamie St. and Maiden Lane, at $1800 and A. Hanford that of George W Ketcham, Esq., corner of Chicago and Oneida St. at $3000. This leaves our friend Ketcham "out in the cold," but he is not the man to stay there long; he proposes to build again for himself in the spring, we believe.

We learn also, that our fellow townsman, the Hon. P. Bills, sold two of his stores, belonging to the old Franklin House property, in the city of Adrian, the same day, last week, at $9000.

Alf. Burnett

Well known on both sides of the Atlantic as one of the finest Elocutionists, and a most amusing mimic, will give one of his jovial entertainments at Bidwell's Hall, on Friday Evening, Feb. 12th.—His facial expression is most wonderful and Mr. Burnett is said to be the only living man that can, at the same time, laugh on one side of his face, and cry up on the other. His changes of feature are so entire as to defy recognition from his most intimate friends; while in his rapidity of change of dress and character, he is without an equal in the world. He cannot fail to please all who possess either a sense of the ludicrous or a touch of sentiment. Be sure to go and see him.

War Meeting in Ridgeway

At a meeting of the citizens of Ridgeway on the evening of the 8th inst., it was resolved to canvass the township by committees in each school district, to raise the necessary amount to meet the exigencies of the pending draft for 200,000 more militia. The results of these collecting efforts is to be reported at an adjourned meeting on Thursday evening, the 11th inst. Special application is to be made to those liable to the draft, as the parties supposed to be sufficiently interested, to give at least ten dollars each, for a guarantee of exemption under the present call.

The Reason Why.

The reason why G. T. Ketcham can sell his Valentines at "Old Prices" this year is because he is the "largest dealer" in the place. Last summer he contracted with one of the largest Valentines Houses in New York, to manufacture exclusively for him. By making this contract he bought his Valentines one quarter cheaper than any one horse establishment in the country can. Consequently while other dealers who buy on "commission" have had to advance their prices, he can sell at old prices. No clocks repaired or kept on hand

Universalists Church.

Rev. H. L. Hayward, will deliver a lecture in the Universalist Church in this village, next Sunday evening, on the subject of Temperance. The attendance of our citizens is respectfully invited.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Tuesday the twenty-ninth day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three,

Present, ROBERT R. BEECHER, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of John Niblack, deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of John Niblack one of the executors of the last will of said deceased praying that his final account with said estate may be allowed and that the moneys in his hands may be distributed and that the executors may be discharged.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the 8th day of February next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

Probate Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, s. s.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Monday the 7th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Calvin Wood, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Peter S. Knight praying that the administrator on said estate may be directed by a decree of said court to deed certain lands of said deceased to said petitioner, described in said petition and for reasons in said petition stated.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday the first day of February next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, six successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ASSIGNEE'S SALE
OF
Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 280 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 160 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above 40 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south-east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store.

TERMS:—One dollar and fifty cents per year if paid in advance; one dollar and seventy-five cents if paid within three months and two dollars invariably after that time.

U. S. 5-20'S !

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "GENERAL SUBSCRIPTION AGENT," will continue to supply the public.

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury, mostly within the last seven months: The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the interest-bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come, to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money or their Funds, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium, as was the result with the "Seven Thirties" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, in Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin, these duties being for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three times greater than the required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. Government has hoped that the surplus Gold in the Treasury would gradually will enable the Department to resume specie payments upon a Basis of Gold.

The Loan is called 5-20's because it is believed that whilst the bonds may run for 20 years the Government has the right to pay them off in Gold at par at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50, $100, $500 and $1,000, or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10,000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties, and the Government exempts them, is only one and a half per cent. on the amount of income when the income of the holder exceeds Six Hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc, must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds, and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great, but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

In the matter of the estate of Sarah A. Cole minor. Notice is hereby given that by virtue of licence and authority for that purpose granted me by the Judge of Probate in and for the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, I will sell to the highest bidder, at Public Auction, to be held at the office of Bills and Baxter in the village of Tecumseh, in said County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, on Saturday, the 23rd day of February next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon—of that day, all the right, title and interest of said Sarah A. Cole minor of, in or to the following described premises, lands or parcels of land lying, situated being in the township and village of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan to wit:

All that piece or parcel of land, in the village of Tecumseh, county of Lenawee and State of State of Michigan bounded by a line commencing on the west line of Ottowa street in said village, eleven rods south of the south-west corner of Ottowa and Chicago streets in said village, and running thence west to lands of M. A. Patterson, thence south five rods, thence east to said Ottowa street, thence north on the west line of said Ottowa street to the place of beginning, containing about fifty-five roads of land more or less.

Also, a vacant lot of land in the east half of the north east quarter of section twenty-eight (28) in town five (5) south of range four (4) east and described as follows, commencing at a point ten roads north of the line between sections 28 and 33, in said town, and eighty-one rods and one link west of the line between section 27 and 28; thence north ten rods, thence east eight rods, thence south ten rods, thence west to the place of begining, and containing eighty rods of land, more or less.

Also, another piece of land situate in the said east half of the north east quarter of section twenty eight, commencing at a point twenty-four rods north of the line between said sections 28 and 33, eighty-one rods and one link west of the line between sections 27 and 28, thence north ten rods, thence east eight rods, thence south ten rods, thence west eight rods, to the place of begining, and containing eighty rods of land more or less, excepting therefrom two rods of land in width on the west side of said premises for public use as a highway, and all of said lands being also subject to the right of dower in the widow of Stephen E. Cole deceased.

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy it its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to child, ren of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

☞ No Family should be Without it. It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you. It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures is has made.

WANTED

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, quilt, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand; with directons so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilites for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

ORANGE JUDD, of the "American Agriculturalist," says of the

UNIVERSAL CLOTHES WRINGER

"A child can readily wring out a tubfull of clothes in a few minutes. It is in reality a CLOTHES SAVER! A TIME SAVER! and a STRENGTH SAVER! The saving of garments will alone pay a large per centage on its cost. We think the machine in the saving of garments: There are several kinds nearly alike in general construction, but we consider it important that the Wringer be fitted with Cogs otherwise a mass of garments may clog the rollers, and the rollers upon the crank-shaft slip and tear the clothes, or the rubber break loose from the shaft. Our own is one of the first make, and it is as GOOD AS NEW after nearly FOUR YEARS CONSTANT USE."

Every Wringer with Cog Wheels is Warranted in every particular.

NO WRINGER CAN BE DURABLE WITHOUT COG-WHEELS.

A good CANVASSER wanted in every town.

☞ On receipt of the price from the places where no one is selling, we will send the Wringer free of expense.

Descriptive Circulars with Samples of Work will be sent mail free.

THESE Machines make the lock-stitch alike on both sides, and use less than half the thread and silk that the single or double thread loop-stitch Machines do; will Hem, Fell, Gather, Cord, Braid, Bind, &c., and better adapted than any other Sewing Machine in use to the frequent changes and great variety of sewing required in family; for they will sew from one to twenty thicknesses of Marsailles without stopping, and make every stitch perfect, or from the finest gauze to the heaviest beaver cloth, or even the stoutest harness leather, without changing the feed, needle, or tension, or making any adjustment of Machine whatever!!

They are simple in construction, and easily understood; and if any part is broken by accident, it is readily replaced.

These are PECULIAR FACTS, and will go far to determine the choice of any intelligent buyer.

A first class Hunting Time-Piece of silver material over which is electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, most durably wrought, making the imitation so faultless that it cannot be detected from the solid material by the most experienced judges; acids will not affect it. London made movement. IMPROVED DUPLEX, IN FULL RUBY ACTION, has sweep seconds, and is not to be excelled in general appearance. This is decidedly one of the best articles ever offered for traders and speculators. Engineers, emigrants, and persons traveling will find them superior to any other; alteration of climate will not affect their accuracy. Price, packed in good shape and good running order, only $35, or case of 6 for $200.

SILVER DOUBLE TIME HUNTING LEVERS.

Best quality silver cases, over which electro-fine plated 18 k. gold, similar to our IMPROVED DUPLEX, and superior adjusted movements with "Stop," to be used in timing horses, &c. THIS FOUR INDEXES for Washington and Greenwich time, sweep second and all the improvements. All in all, taking its beautiful and faultless appearance and its superior movement into consideration, we regard it as decidedly the cheapest article of the kind in the market. Price, in good running order, $35, or case of 6 for $200.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Thursday the 7th day of January in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four. Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Stephen E. Cole, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Benjamin L. Baxter, guardian of a minor child of said deceased, praying that he may be appointed administrator on the estate of said deceased for reasons in said petition stated.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday the 15th day of February next, at ten o'clock in the fore noon be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioneer should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioneer give notice to the persons interested in said estate of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

THE GREAT AMERICAN TEA COMPANY,

51 Vesey Street New York;

Since its organization, has created a new era in the history of

Wholesaling Tea in this Co.

They have introduced their selections of Teas and are selling them not over

TWO CENTS (02 Cents) per pound above COST,

Never deviating from the ONE Price asked.

Another peculirity of the Company is tha their Tea Taster not only devotes his time to the selection of their TEAS as to quality, value, and particular styles for particular localities of country, but he helps the TEA buyer to choose out of their enormous stock such Teas as are best adapted to his particular wants, and not only this, but points out to him the best bargains.

It is easy to see the incalculable advantage a Tea Buyer has in this establishment over all others.

If he is no judge of TEA, or the Market, of his time is valuable, he has all the benefits of a well organized system of doing business, of an immense capital, of the judgment of a professional Tea Taster, and the knowledge of superior salesmen.

This enables all tea buyers—no matter if they are thousands of miles from this market—to purchase on as good terms here as the New York merchants.

Parties can order Teas and will be served by us as well as though they came themselves being sure to get original packages, true weights and tares; and the tea warranted as represented.

We issue a Price List of the Company Teas, which will be sent to all who order comprising

Hyson, Young Hyson, Imperial, Gunpowder, Twankay and Skin.

Oolong, Souchong, Orange & Hyson Pekoe,

JAPAN TEA OF EVERY DISCRIPTION, colored and uncolored.

This list has each kind of Tea divided into FOUR classes, namely: Cargo, high Cargo, Fine, Finest, that every one may understand from description and the prices annexed that the Company are determined to undersell the whole Tea Trade.

We guarantee to sell all our Teas at not over two cents (02 Cents) per pound above cost, believing this to be attractive to the many who have heretofore been paying Enormous Profits.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

T. WILCOX & GIBBS' Sewing Machine is the best adapted to the family, at the lowest cost for Family Sewing,

Braiding,

Hemming,

Felling,

Tucking,

Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine, that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison."—New York Daily Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced Machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any other exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs' as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine."—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine in use. The stitch is unexceptionable."—a number of hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

and

BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,

Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,

Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemen's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good:
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, betwen Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

Appeal to Michigan.

Arouse, arouse, ye loyal men!
And gather round the flag;
Protect its folds from traitor hands,—
Tear down the rebel rag.
Shoulder your arms! march boldly forth,—
Aye, rally while you can:—
Nor have it said—they drafted men
In brave old Michigan.

Will you stand back, with folded arms,
And look, with cowardly leer,
On those who leave their friends and homes,
And bravely volunteer?
Not if you're brave and loyal men,
And wish for peace to plan,
Will you stand back and wait the draft,
In proud old Michigan.

Then, young men, rally! quit the store,
The workshop and the plow,
And take upon yourself and heart
A sacred, solemn vow,
That you'll protect our nation's flag.—
Speak bravely, like a man,—
"I will not wait and stand the draft,
In northern Michigan.

And woman's prayers will follow you,—
And God protect your form:
You only trust in Him, through faith,
And lean upon His arm.
And when you shall return again,
To those who for you wait,
You will be proud that you did go
To save our noble State.

The Result of Courtesy.

A few years ago, on a radiant spring afternoon, two men, who, from their conversation, appeared to be foreigners, stopped before the gate of one of our large workshops in Boston, for the manufacture of locomotive engines. Entering a small office, the elder of the two men inquired of the superintendent in attendance if he would permit them to inspect the works.

"You can pass in and look about, if you please," said the superintendent, vexed, apparently, at being interrupted in the perusal of his newspaper. He then scanned the two strangers more closely. They were respectably but plainly dressed, and evidently made no pretentions of official dignity of any kind.

"Is there any one who can show us over the establishment, and explain matters to us?" asked Mr. Wolfe, the elder of the strangers.

"You must pick your own way, gentlemen," replied the superintendent; "we are all too busy to attend to every party that comes along. I'll thank you not to interrupt the workmen by asking questions."

It was not so much the matter as the manner of his reply that was offensive to Mr. Wolfe and his companion. It was spoken with a certain official assumption of superiority, mingled with contempt for the visitors, indicating a haughty and selfish temper.

"I think we will not trouble you," said Mr. Wolfe, bowing; and, taking his companion's arm, they passed out.

"If there is anything I dislike it is incivility," said Mr. Wolfe to his companion, when they were in the street. "I do not blame the man for not wishing to show us over his establishment; he is no doubt annoyed and interrupted by many heedless visitors; but he might have dismissed us with courtesy. He might have sent us away better contented with a gracious refusal than with an ungracious consent."

"Perhaps we shall have better luck here," said the other stranger; and they stopped before another workshop of a similar kind. They were received by a brisk little man, the head clerk, apparently, who in reply to their request to be shown over the establishment, answered, "Oh, yes!—come with me, gentlemen, this way." So saying, he hurried them along the area strewn with iron bars, broken and rusty wheels of iron, fragments of old cylinders, into the principal workshop. Here, without stopping to explain any one thing, he led the strangers along with the evident intention of getting rid of them as soon as possible. When they paused where the workmen were riveting the external castings of a boiler, the clerk looked at his watch, tapped his right foot against an iron tube, and showed other signs of impatience. Whereupon Mr. Wolfe remarked, "We will not detain you any longer, sir," and with his friend took leave.

"This man is an improvement on the other," said Mr. Wolfe; "but all the civility he has is on the surface; it does not come from the heart. We must look further."

The staangers walked on for nearly half a mile in silence, when one of them pointed to a picture of a locomotive engine with a train of cars underneath. It overtopped a small building not more than ten feet in hight, communicating with a yark and workshop.

"Look," said the observer, "here is a machinist, whose name is not on our list."

"Probably it was thought too small a concern for our purposes," said his companion.

"Nevertheless, let us try it," said Mr. Wolfe.

They entered, and found at the desk a middle-aged man, whose somewhat grim aspect, and apron round the waist, showed that he divided his labors between the workshop and the counting-room.

"We want to look over your works, if you have no objection."

"It will give me great pleasure to show you all there is to be seen," said the mechanic, with a pleasant alacrity, ringing a bell and telling the boy who entered to take charge of the office. He then led the way, and explained to the strangers the whole process of constructing a locomotive engine. He showed them how the different parts of the machinery were manufactured, and patiently answered all their questions. He told them of an improved mode of tubing boilers, by which the power of generating steam was increased, and showing with what care he provided for security from bursting. Two hours passed away. The strangers were delighted with the intelligence displayed by the mechanic, and with his frank, attentive, and unsuspicious manner.

"Here is a man who loves his profession so well that he takes pleasure in explaining its mysteries to all who can understand them," thought Mr. Wolfe.

"I am afraid we have given you a good deal of trouble," said the other stranger.

"Indeed, gentlemen, I have enjoyed your visit," said the mechanic, "and shall be glad to see you again."

"Perhaps you may," said Mr. Wolfe, and the strangers departed.

Five months afterwards, as the mechanic, whose means were quite limited, sat in his office, meditating how hard it was to get business by the side of such large establishments as were his competitors, the two strangers entered. He gave them a hearty welcome, handed chairs, and sat down.

"We come," said Mr. Wolfe, "with a proposition from the Emperor of Russia."

"From the Emperor? Impossible!"

"Here are our credentials."

"But, gentlemen," said the now agitated mechanic, "what does this mean? how have I earned such an honor?"

"Simply by your straightforward courtesy and frankness, combined with professional intelligence," said Mr. Wolfe. "Because we were strangers, you did not think it necessary to treat us with distrust or coldness. You saw we were earnest in acquainting ourselves with your works, and did not ask, before extending to us your civilities, what letters of introduction we brought. You measured us by the spirit we showed, and not by the dignities we could have exhibited."

The mechanic visited St Petersburg, and soon after moved his whole establishment there. He had imperial orders for as many locomotive engines as he could construct. He has lately returned to his own country, and is still receiving large returns from his Russian workshop. And all his prosperity grew out of his unselfish civility to two strangers, one of whom was the secret agent of the Czar of Russia.

Genious, Talent, and Cleverness.

Genious rushes like a whirlwind; talent marches like a cavalcade of heavy men and heavy horses; cleverness skims like a swallow in the summer evening, with a sharp, shrill note and a sudden turning.—The man of genius dwells with men and with nature; the man of talent in his study; but the clever man dances here, there and everywhere, like a butterfly in a hurricane, striking everything and enjoying nothing, but too light to be dashed to pieces. The man of talent will attack theories, the clever man will assail the individual and slander private character.—The man of genius dispises both; he needs none, he fears none, he lives in himself, shrouded in the consciousness of his own strength, he interferes with none, and goes forth an example that "eagles fly alone; they are but sheep that herd together."—It is true, that would a poisonous worm cross his path he may tread it under his foot; should a cur snarl at him he may chastise him; but he will not, cannot attack the privacy of another.

The Musician's Marriage.

After having passed the summer in visiting the principal towns of Germany, the celebrated pianist, Liszt, arrived at Prague in October, 1846.

The day after he came, his apartment was entered by a stranger—an old man, whose appearance indicated misery and suffering. The great musician received him with a cordiality which he would have not perhaps have shown a noble man. Encouraged by his kindness, his visitor said: I come to you, sir, as a brother. Excuse me if I take this title, notwithstanding the distance that devides us; but formerly I could boast some skill in playing on the piano, and by giving instructions I gained a comfortable livelihood. Now I am old, feeble, burdened with a large family and destitute of pupils. I live at Nuremburg, but came to Prague to seek to recover the rennant of a small property which belonged to my ancestors. Although nominally successful, the expense of a long litigation has more than swallowed up the trifling sum I recovered. To-morrow I set out for home—penniless.'

'And you have come to me? You have done well, and I thank you for this proof of your esteem. To assist a brother professor is to me more than a duty—it is a pleasure. Artists should have their purse in common; and if fortune neglects some in order to treat others better than they deserve, it only makes it more necessary to preserve the equilibrium by fraternal kindness. That's my system; so don't speak of gratitude, for I feel that I only discharge a debt.'

As he uttered these generous words, Liszt opened another drawer in his writing-case, and started when he saw that his usual depository for his money contained but three ducats. He summoned his servant.

'Where is the money?' he asked.

'There, sir!' replied the man pointing to the open drawer.

'There! why there is scarcely anything!'

'I know it, sir. If you please to remember, I told you yesterday that the cash was nearly exhausted.'

'You see my dear brother,' said Liszt, smiling, 'that for the moment I am no richer than you; but that does not trouble me; I have credit, and I can make money start from the keys of my piano: However as you are in haste to leave Prague and return home, you shall not be delayed by my present want of funds.'

So saying he opened another drawer, and taking out a splendid medallion, gave it to the old man. 'There,' said he, 'that will do. It was a present made me by the Emperor of Austria: his own portrait set in diamonds. The painting is nothing remarkable, but the stones are fine. Take them and dispose of them, and whatever they shall bring shall be yours.'

The old musician tried in vain to decline so rich a gift. Liszt would not hear of a refusal, and the poor man at length withdrew, invoking the choicest blessings of Heaven on his generous benefactor.—He then repaired to the shop of the principal jeweler in the city, in order to sell the diamonds. Seeing a miserably dressed man anxious to dispose of magnificent jewels with whose value he appeared unacquainted, the master of the shop very naturally suspected his honesty; and while appearing to examine the diamonds with close attention, he whispered a few words in the ear of one of his assisttants. The latter went out and speedily retured, accompanied by several soldiers of police, who arrested the unhappy artist, in spite of his protestations of innocence.

'You must first come to prison,' they said 'afterward you can give an explana- to the magistrate.'

The prisoner wrote a few lines to his benefactor, imploring his assistance.—Liszt hastened to the jeweler.

'Sir,' said he, 'you have caused the arrest of an innocent man Come with me immediately and let us have him released. He is the lawful owner of the jewels in question, for I gave them to him.'

'But sir,' said the merchant, 'who are you.'

"My name is Liszt.'

'I don't know any rich man by that name,'

'That may be; yet I am tolerably well known.'

'Are you aware, sir, that these diamonds are worth six thousand florins—that is to say about five thousand guineas, or twelve thousand francs?'

'So much the better for him on whom I have bestowed them."

'But in order to make such a present you must be very wealthy.'

'My actual fortune consists of three ducats.'

'Then you are a magician?'

'By no means; and yet, by just moving my fingers, I can obtain as much money as I wish.'

'You must be a magician!'

'If you choose, I'll disclose to you the magic I employ.'

Liszt had seen a piano in the parlor behind the shop. He opened it, and ran his fingers over the keys; then seized by sudden inspiration, he improvised one of those soul-touching symphonies peculiar to himself.

As he sounded the first chords, a beautiful yong girl entered the room. While the melody continued she remained speechless and immovable; then as the last note died away, she cried with irresistible enthusiasm:

'Bravo, Liszt! 'tis wondrous!'

'Dost thou know him, then, my daughter?' asked the jeweler.

'This is the first time I have had the pleasure of seeing or hearing him,' replied she, 'but I know that none living, save Liszt could draw such sounds from the piano.'

'Expressed with grace and modesty, by a young lady of remarkable beauty, this admiration could not fail to be more than flattering to an artist. However, after making his best acknowledgments, Liszt withdrew, in order to deliver the prisoner, and was accompanied by the jeweler.

Grieved at his mistake, the worthy merchant sought to repair it by inviting the two musicians to supper. The honors of the table were done by his amiable daughter, who appeared no less touched at the generosity of Liszt than astonished at his talent.

That night the musicians of the city serenaded their illustrious brother. The next day the nobles and most distinguished inhabitants of Prague presented themselves at his door. They entreated him to give some concerts, leaving it to himself to fix any sum he pleased as a remuneration. Then the jeweler perceived that talent even in a pecuniary light, may be more valuable than the most precious diamonds. Liszt continued to go to his house, and, to the merchant's great joy, he preceived that his daughter was the cause of these visits. He began to love the company of the musician, and the fair girl, his only child, certainly did not hate it.

One morning the jeweler, coming to the point with German frankness, said to Liszt:

'How do you like my daughter?'

'She is an angel!'

'What do you think of marriage?'

'I think so well of it, that I have the greatest possible inclination to try it,'

'What would you say to a forture of three million francs?'

'I would willingly accept it.'

'Well, we understand each other.—My daughter pleases you, you please my daughter. Her forture is ready; be my son-in-law.'

'With all my heart.'

The marriage was celebrated in the course of the following week.

And this, according to the chronicles of Prague, is a true account of the marriage of the great and good pianist, Liszt.

A CONSCIENTIOUS MINISTER.—There is a story of a travelling preacher, whose opinions in regard to horseflesh were quite as ready and orthodox as were the views of scriptural doctrine with which he enlightened his back woods audiences, who once stopped at the house of a brother of the same faith, who had reared a beautiful colt. Between the two services of Sunday, the two ministers visited the barn of the resident preacher, where the latter introduced his promising colt to his travelling brother. The guest was so much delighted at the fine points of the animal, that he could not restrain himself, and he immediately blarted out the question; "Suppose it were not the Sabbath, Brother S——, how would you trade?"

☞ Some times since two young ladies near Newmarket fell into company with a gipsy, who for a trifling sum, proposed showing them their future husbands' faces in a pail of water. The water being procured, they were desired to look. They did so; when discovering nothing strange, they exclaimed, "We see only our own faces. "Well replied the gipsy, "those will be your husbands' faces when you are married."

☞ The man who imagined himself wise because he detected some typographical errors in a newspaper has been trying to get a perpendicular view of the rainbow.

Marriage in Borneo.

Marriage, which generally succeeds a lengthened routine of enigmatical courtship peculiar to those people, is celebrated with great pomp and considerable originality. The bride and bridegroom are conducted from opposite ends of the village to the spot where the ceremony is to be performed. They are seated on two bars of iron, symbolical of the vigorous and lasting blessings in store for them.—A cigar and betel leaf, carefully prepared with areca nut, are put into the hands of each. One of the officiating priests advances, waves two fowls over the heads of the betrothed, and in a long address to the Supreme Being, and a short one to the couple, calls down eternal blessings on them, implores that peace and happiness may attend the union, and gives some temporal advice, sometimes of a character more medical than saintly. The spiritual part being thus concluded, the material succeeds. The heads of the affianced are knocked against each other three or four times; than the bridegroom puts his betel leaf and his cigar into the mouth of the bride, and she puts her betel leaf and her cigar into the mouth of the bridegroom; and thus they are acknowledged a wedded couple with the sanction of their religion. At a later period of the nuptial evening fowls are killed, the blood caught in two cups, and from its color the priests foretells the future happiness or misery of the newly married. The ceremony is closed by a feast, much dancing and noisy music.

☞ I am thinking of the time, Mary, when, sitting by thy side, and shelling beans, I gazed on thee and felt a wondrous pride. In silence learned we o'er the pan, and neither spoke a word, but the rattling of the beans, Mary, was all the sound we heard. Thy auburn hair hung down, Mary, and kissed thy auburn cheek; thy azure eyes, half filled with tears, bespoke a spirit meek. To be so charmed as I was then, had ne'er before occurred, when the rattling of the beans, Mary, was all the sound we heard. I thought it was not wrong, Mary, so leaning on the dish, as you snatched up a hand of beans, I snatched a nectored kiss.—And suddenly there came a shower, as I neither saw nor stirred; but the rattling of the beans, Mary, was all the sound we heard.

Speaking Well of Others.

If the disposition to speak well of others were universally prevalent, the world would become a comparative paradise.—The opposite disposition is the Pandora box which, when opened, fills every house and every neighborhood with pain and sorrow. How many enmities and heart-burning flow from this source!—How much happiness is interrupted and destroyed by Envy, jealousy, and the malignant spirit of evil, when they find vent by the lips, go forth on their mission like foul fiends, to blast the reputation and peace of others. Every one has his imperfections; and in the conduct of the best there will be occasional faults which might seem to justify animadversion. It is a good rule, however, when there is occasion for foultfinding, to do it privately to the erring one. This may prove salutary. It is a proof of interest in the individual, which will generally be taken kindly, if the manner of doing it is not offensive. The common and unchristian rule, on the contrary, is to proclaim the failings of others to all but themselves.—This is unchristian, and shows a despicable heart.

☞ A lady remarkable for having a high sense of her own dignity, being one day detained in her own carriage by the unloading of a cart of coals, in a very narrow street, leaned both her arms upon the door, and asked the man, How dare you, sir, stop a woman of quality in the street? "Woman of quality!" said the man. "Yes, fellow!" rejoined the lady; "dont you see my arms upon the carriage?" "Yes, I do indeed," he replied, "and a pair of coarse arms they are too!"

☞ The late Dr. West having married a very tall lady, whose name was Experience, was asked his opinion of matrimony; to which he replied that "by long Experience he had found it to be a very comfortable thing."

☞ An Irishman, who had been asked to furnish proof of his marriage, took off his hat and exhibited a scar on his head. "Here," said he, "is me marriage certificate,—That's Judy's mark."

Peace Propositions Again.

In Congress on Wednesday last, Hon. Fernando Wood appeared on his peace hobby. He observed that while the Union Congress was discussing conscription the rebel Congress was discussing propositions of peace, and he was in favor of a convention to agree upon a basis of peace. Mr. Cox, of Ohio, enacted the part of Sancho to Mr. Wood's Don Quixote, and as a trusty squire ought to, advocated sending his great master to Richmond, and expressed the opinion that if he was sent there he could secure peace at once. The position assumed by Cox on this subject surprised some of his associates greatly, as he has been setting up some pretentions to being a war Democrat.

But what were these Peace Propositions alluded to by the distinguished New Yorker, that were under discussion in the rebel Congress? Were they of such a nature as furnished hope of adjustment, and should have rejoiced the heart of a loyal man? We subjoin them, as they appear in the Richmond Examiner of Feb. 8th, that the reader may judge for himself:

"Resolved, That the Confederate States invite the United States, through their Government at Washington, to meet them by representatives equal to their representatives and Senators in their respective Congress, at ——, on the —— day of —— next, to consider,

"First—Whether they cannot agree upon the recognition of the Confederate States of America.

"Second—In the event of such recognition, whether they cannot agree upon the formation of a new Government, founded upon the equality and sovereignty of the States; but, if this cannot be done, to consider,

"Third—Whether they cannot agree upon treaties, offensive, defensive and commercial.

"Resolved, In the event of the passage of these resolutions, the President be requested to communicate the same to the Government at Washington, in such manner as he shall deem most in accordance with the usages of nations; and in the event of their acceptance by that Government, he do issue his proclamation of election of delegates, under such regulations as he may deem expedient."

It will be observed that these resolutions say nothing whatever about the restoration of the Union. The movement they propose to inaugurate is a movement to complete the disunion of States, and establish a portion of them as a new government under some other control and subordination than the Constitution of the United States. In a word, they propose a disunion peace, and Mr. Wood expresses a willingness to negotiate on that basis, and condems the Republicans because they will not assist him in consummating the national destruction.

There is no testimony to show that these resolutions, atterly inadmissible as they are, secured the assent of any portion of the rebel Congress. Propositions looking toward peace, introduced in that body hitherto, have never secured more than the one vote of the mover, and have uniformly been laid on the table. The paper that published the resolutions pronounced them "extraordinary," and refrained from the least expression of approval. So far as any expression has been made by the rebel President, it has been to the effect that no terms short of a recognition of the independence of the Confederacy would be accepted. The resolutions quoted above were referred at once to a secret session, and the tone and temper of the discussion concerning them may never be known.

We hardly know what to think of a man who will stand up in Congress and propose peace upon such terms as these, and a negotiation for peace upon no more encouragement than this.

We dislike to call any man a traitor, but we have before expressed—what we believe to be only the common sentiment of all true men—a want of confidence in Fernando Wood, and a belief that many of his acts, and most of his teachings, are at least, not far removed from treason.

Whether he be a traitor or not, it is certain that no rebel himself, trampling upon the stars and stripes, cursing alike the government and the Constitution of the United States, and glorying in Jeff. Davis, and the success of the rebels in arms, and the humiliation of those opposed to them, could or would have asked anything more than this in their behalf.

It will be a very different peace from that, and asked, too, in a very different spirit, that those rebels will receive from the hands of our victorious army, and the representations of an injured and insulted people, with the blood of their brothers all around crying to them from the ground, whenever they shall really consent to ask, and the Congress of the United States shall vouchsafe to grant to them, and to us too, that precious boon so greatly to be desired by all.

But to discuss, or in any sense to entertain such a proposition as the above, and upon only such encouragement as that, is not only basely craven in itself, but is also an absolute aid and encouragement to the rebellion, whether intended so or not, and it is, in moral effect, just what the physical effect would be, of feeding, with a false humanity, a starving rebel, who still refuses to lay down his arms, and who, you well know, will employ all the additional strength he shall thus receive, in only so much the longer continuing to shoot and maim and murder your brothers in the field seeking to protect and defend you.

To call this an effort for peace is basely false. It is, and is in reality designed to be only a covert attack upon the government and the Union, and necessarily an aid to the rebellion.

Atlantic and G. W. Railway.

The Atlantic and Great Western Railway is now compleded to Galion, and on Saturday last an excursion party passed over the line from Galion to Akron, a distance of eighty one miles. The completion of this link is a valuable addition to the line, placing it as it does in connection with the Pittsburgh and Ft. Wayne and Chicago Railroad at Mansfield, and with the Cleveland, Columbus and Cincinnati and Belfontaine Line, at Galion. The newly completed portion of the road passes through the flourishing towns of Mansfield, Ashland, West Salem, Bridgport, and Wadsworth, and through a country noted for its richness and agricultural productiveness. From Galion to Dayton the road is in a very advanced condition, and were the weather at all favorable, the line could be completed within a month or six weeks. It will undoubtedly be in running order by May.—From Galion to Springfield, a distance of eighty-three miles, the road is fully graded and the track is being laid westward from two points, Galion and Marion.—About ten miles of the iron is already laid, and the remainder is either delivered on the line or on the way. The whole of the cross ties are along the line between Galion and Dayton.

The Great Western Railway.

The prospects of this enterprise, one of the best lines in America, neves were better than at the present time. It is true that no dividend will be paid for the last half year; but when it is considered that the road has been put into excellent order, and is now better than it has been for many years, the absence of a dividend will not be regretted by the shareholders. When the present manager assumed control he had an arduous task to perf[illegible] The receipts had been run down, and the road was doing a losing business. In a short time, however, a change for the better took place, and a dividend was the result of Mr. Swinyard's first half year of management. Since then he has labored might and main, against many and serious obstacles, to overcome difficulties which he has succeeded in removing; and we venture to say that the road is now in the most prosperous condition it ever enjoyed. The war in the United States, as every one knows, has operated prejudicially upon the interests of the company, and the result has been a heavy loss upon the through business; still, as it is a difficulty which can not be overcome so long as the war lasts, the loss will have to be submitted to, for the business is too valuable to be sacrificed altogether. By closing up the grain traffic between Sarnia and this city, the Manager effected a very large saving to the Company, inasmuch as the trains would have been run at ruinous rates. The Grand Trunk has taken the business thus thrown out; but it has been done at a very great loss. Mr. Swinyard's shrewd business habits have enabled him to manage the line successfully, and it is gratifying to find that he has done well under the most adverse circumstances. The half yearly meeting was to take place in England on the 17th inst., and we will have the result in a few days. The report, an abstract of which we have published, shows a highly satisfactory state of things.—Hamilton Spectator.

Important Decision.

A committee of the Wayne County Board of Supervisors having solicited the opinions of the U. S. District Attorney, the City Counselor and Col. Hill, as to whether the draft for 500,000 men recently directed by the President is not the same draft as that heretofore known as "the 5th of January draft," only increased in number and extended in time, each of these gentlemen has replied substantially in the affirmative. The City Counseler says: "I am of opinion that the impending draft for 500,000 men is but a continuation of the first draft for 300,000; that while the number called for is increased, it is still the same draft, and that the new bounty bill legalizes all bonds and loans authorized by the Board af Supervisors previous to its passage, and that such bonds and loans may be legally used for the purpose of filling the quota on the pending draft for 500,000."

Under this decision—and it is no doubt correct—the Board of Supervisors of this county may issue Bonds sufficient to pay bounties to all who enlist prior to March 10th.

The News

Monday, Feb. 15th.

Memphis papers of the 12th say that a part of Sherman's expedition was attacked on the Yazoo River by 3,000 Texans, with artillery. After a brisk fight the enemy were repulsed. Our loss was slight.

A sick negro soldier was brutally murdered by a rebel Lieutenant and two of his men. In retaliation Col. Wood ordered the prisoners to kneel upon the dead body of the murdered negro, in which position they were shot. This example will probably prove a salutary lesson.

Deserters are coming into our lines at Little Rock in great numbers. Eight regiments are now forming from these deserters, and two of them are already filled.

Moseby has been making another dash on our pickets near Manassas.

A rebel deserter came into our lines with a recent copy of the Richmond Examiner of Tuesday last, which states that 100 Union prisoners had escaped from Libby Prison by digging a tunnel under the street. It was supposed that the prisoners were secreted in the vicinity of Richmond. Col. Straight and several other prominent officers are among those recently escaped.

The enrollment bill, as returned to the Senate with the House amendments, will be acted upon by the Military Committee of the Senate to-day. The points of difference between the two branches of Congress are comparatively trifling, and they will soon be adjusted, and the bill will speedily become a law.

Advices from Charleston to the 2d inst. give further details of the destruction of a blockade runner, intimations of which have previously been received from rebel sources. Attempts continue to be made to reinforce the diminished rebel garrison at Fort Sumter, but without success.—An attempt to destroy two of our gunboats by an infernal machine proved a failure, the "machine" sinking and eight of the crew going down with her. Deserters represent the state of affairs in the city of Charleston as gloomy in the extreme.

A gang of rebels captured a passenger train on the Baltimore & Ohio Railroad on Thursday, and are said to have realized a handsome sum by extorting ransoms from the passengers, whom they liberated after taking their money, watches, jewelry, etc.

The Senate was principally occupied on Saturday in the discussion of the bill to equalize the pay of soldiers. Mr. Sumner's amendment was adopted, providing that colored troops shall receive $13 per month after January 1st, 1864.

A Washington dispatch says that the rumors recently prevalent, that communication with Cumberland Gap was cut off, are unfounded.

Gen. Grant has written a letter to Mr. Washburne, in effect declining the proposed honor of a Lieutenant Generalship.

Advices from Natchez report, among other interesting items, that the Union feeling is gaining ground among the rebels in that vicinity.

Advices from the Department of the South say that the rebels are anticipating an attack on Savanah, and that Gen. Beauregard had in consequence removed his hendquarters thither.

A delegation of wool growers from Ohio, Virginia and Pennsylvania is in Washington endeavoring to secure an increased tariff on imported wools. Of course this will greatly add to the profits of wool-growing all through the country.

Tuesday, Feb. 16th.

A bill has been introduced in the House, authorizing the Secretary of the Treasury to sell $12,000,000 in gold.—Mr. Chase says he will have even more than that to spare at the end of the present fiscal year.

No later intelligence of a definite nature has been received from Gen. Sherman's expedition. The army at Chattanooga is reported under marching orders, no doubt with a view to movements in concert with Gen. Sherman.

The reported escape of Col. Straight and several other Union officers in confirmed.

The guerrillas who waylaid a train on the Baltimore and Ohio Railroad, on Thurday evening last, and plundered the passengers, are being closely pursued, and already part of the gang have been captured.

Jeff. Davis has issued a proclamation to his army, thanking his men for re-enlisting after the expiration of their original term of service. From the tenor of the document we should be led to believe that the said re-enlistment was not as compulsory as we know it to have been. Jeff evidently still retains one characteristic of his Irish origin, to wit—blarney.

It is reported by way of Nashville that Gen. Sherman took possession of Jackson, Miss., on the 5th inst., meeting but little opposition. This is the third time within a year that this place has been captured by the Union forces.

The Senate special committee on slavery have decided to report a bill legalizing the President's Emacipation Proclamation.

The number of mills engaged in manufacturing lumber, mostly propelled by steam, exceeds in the aggregate 1,000, cutting annually from 1,000,000,000 to 1,200,000,000 feet, yielding at $10 per thousand feet, $10,000,000 or more. —While in prison, after planning his escape, John Morgan wrote to lady friend in a peculiar cypher, which, when read in the usual manner, contained nothing contraband. Acting on the information thus secretly conveyed, the young lady sent John some books, in the back of one of which she concealed greenbacks, and wrote her name across the place, to indicate where the money was deposited.—The money thus sent enabled Morgan to pay the expenses of his escape.

—Governor Brough, of Ohio, recently observed a young officer in the streets of Columbus grossly intoxicated. He telegraphed to the Secretary of War for his removal, and by the time the young man recovered his sobriety he found his commission vacated; nor could the persuasions of influential friends change the determination of the Governor, who declared that, as President of a railroad company, he had made it a rule to dismiss any employee subject to intoxication, and he could not deviate from that rule in a case where the offender was entrusted with the care of men.

This is no fancy sketch; it is truth. It shows that either there is extreme poverty with the mass of inhabitants, or that they are lacking in charity to the poor. The woman is living, and three children dependent upon her.

As we do not export these coins, the question is asked, what has become of them all, especially as there were coined at the Philadelphia mint fifty-four millions three hundred and sixty thousand, being over four and a half millions per month. So very scarce are they in circulation, just now, that it is with difficulty enough can be found to change a five cent note. The question has often been asked, what becomes of the millions of pins made daily, and with as much propriety it may be put, what becomes of all the cents, more particularly as they are known to be worth less than their face value.

Oil Struck at Albion.

Great excitement has been created at Albion by the accidental discovery of an oil well. The discovery was made on Saturday last, about 4 o'clock in the afternoon, by some boys who were fishing in the race near the flouring mill of J. Crowell. They saw the surface of the water covered with oil, and supposed that it came from a drain which empties into the race a short distance below the mill. Notice of the fact was given to the men employed in the mill, and they supposed that it came from some leaky cask in one of the cellars in the vicinity. Upon investigating the affair still further, it was ascertained that an oil spring had commenced to flow in the cellar of the store of Geo. N. Cady. The store owned by Mr. Cady was built seven years before, and at that time there was a spring of drinking water in the cellar, which was afterward planked over with the remainder of the cellar bottom. From this spring the oil is now flowing with great rapidity—estimated at 40 barrels per day. The news of the discovery ran over the place like wildfire, and hundreds of people flocked to visit the oil spring. Many of the citizens gathered the oil and used it in their kerosene oil lamps, and found it a very good substitute for that article. It burns well in its crude state and is quite as pure as most of the petroleum in its native state. Mr. Cady is filling all the casks he can obtain in the vicinity, and it promises to be a rich mine of wealth if the flow continues. This State can now boast of a new source of material wealth, as probably others will sink oil wells in the vicinity. She has not only her immense pineries, limitless copper, iron, lead, silver and coal mines; rich and almost unparalleled salines, extensive beds of gypsum, but also deposits of petroleum, which probably only need development to rival in extent and richness the oil wells of other States.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, COUNTY OF LENAWEE, First Judicial District, In Chancery. Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee. In Chancery.

Helen Maria Montgomery, Complainant,
vs.
Henry Montgomery, Defendant.

At a session of the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, in chancery, held at the Circuit Court Room in the City of Adrian, on the 18th day of November 1863—Present Hon. E. H. C. Wilson, Circuit Judge

It appearing in this cause by the affidavit of P. Jills that Henry Montgomery the above named defendant is not a resident of this State but is a resident of Indiana one of the United States, and that a subpoena in this cause cannot be served on him by reason of his absence from this State.

On motion of Bills & Baxter, solicitors for complainant, it is ordered that said defendant cause his appearance to be entered in this cause, and notice thereof to be served on complainant's solicitors within three months from the date hereof, and in case of his appearance, he cause his answer to the complainants bill to be filed, and a copy thereof to be served on the complainants solicitors within twenty days after service of a copy of said bill on him, or that said bill be taken as confessed against him.

And it is further ordered that within twenty days from the date hereof, the complainant cause a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper published in the village of Tecumseh in Lenawee County, and that said publication be continued in said paper at least once in each week for six successive weeks, or that said complainant cause a copy thereof to be personally served on said defendant Henry Montgomery at least twenty days before the time prescribed for his appearance.

☞ The following is from a letter lately received from a Lieutenant of the 4th Michigan Infantry:—"My opinion of the war is, that by the first of December, 1864, peace will be declared—the volunteers at home—the Federal arms victorious—slavery abolished, and Abraham Lincoln President of all the United States." So mote it be.

☞ The furloughs of the returned veterans require that at the expiration of the time for which they were granted, the parties furloughed shall report at the rendezvous of their regiments, or be considered deserters. We give this item for the benefit of those of our friends who are not aware of the fact, in order that they may not induce furloughed soldiers to overstay their time and subject them to court-martial.

Fruit Show.

There will be a Fair at Adrian, in Odd Fellow's Hall, on Saturday, Feb. 20, inst., commencing at 1 o'clock P. M. This Fair will be conducted under the auspices of the Adrian Horticultural Society, which is now in successful operation. The public are generally invited to attend, and bring specimens of Winter Fruit, and compete, free of all charges, for the following premiums.

For the largest and best collection of Apples, 82.00
" " 2nd " " 1.00
" " best single variety,—6 specimens, 1.00
" " largest and best collection of Pears, 2.00
" " best single variety, 1.00
" " " collection of Canned or Bottled Fruit, 2.00
" " " " specimen Peaches, 1.00
" " " " " Pears, 1.00
" " " " " Cherries, 1.00

As the object of this exhibition is to show not only the best method of cultivation, but also the best manner of keeping and preserving Winter Fruit, the Exhibition will not be confined to the specimens of their own growing merely; but will be permitted to enter for competition any specimen he may avail himself of

Specimens of bottled or canned fruit, must be accompanied by the method in which they were put up.

By order of the Committee.

The Lady's Friend.

The February number of the LADY'S FRIEND is on our table, and truly is far superior to the January No., for good, rich and rare reading matter. This number leads off with a beautiful steel plate, engraved in the highest style of art, called "The Sylvan Retreat." Then follows a splendid double richly colored Fashion Plate; then a new and popular piece of music, "Kind friends are near her," being an answer to "Who will care for Mother now." This piece of music, of itself, is worth the price of the number. Then a striking engraving of the "Rescue of Arthur Steele," illustrative of an interesting story, called "Olive's Trial." Then, in the body of the book, fifteen pages of engravings, devoted to the Fashions, Work Table, Novelties, Flowers, &c. And then follows fifty pages of most excellent reading, prose and poetry. Send for it. Addres Deacon & Peterson, Philadelphia, Pa.

Religious Meetings

There are the usual extra meetings during Lent, at the Episcopal Church in this place, which are well attended and with an increased interest. And, also, there was held last week, at the Presbyterian Church, in this place, a four days meeting, participated in by the Pastors of three or four of the surrounding churches, and with so much apparent benefit and interest that they are still continued. There has also been recently held a like series of extra meetings in both the Baptist and Methodist Churches in this place, and with marked results.

Dentistry.

A worthy man and a worthy business are two instincts which go far in making up a worthy community. We wish to say a word with reference to the mechanical skill of E. Hause, of this village. As a Dentist, he is far above par, as his neat and life-like work will fully indicate. He enjoys the reputation of a good workman, and has gained this honor by making almost natural teeth, and fitting them to the jaw with regularity. To all those who are suffering from the teeth-ache, we would say, he has a remedy that is a sure cure? See his advertisement.

Hood & Co

Are daily making additions to their already large stock of Dry Goods, Ready-Made Clothing, &c., and they are selling goods cheaper than they can be purchased elsewhere. They have just received the largest, best, and cheapest lot of crinoline ever brought into this section. Our better half says that they keep the best, and sell the cheapest,—and it must be so, for she will not lie.

Library and Lecture Association.

All who have subscribed to the stock of the Tecumseh Library and Lecture Association are invited to meet at Bidwell's Hall on Thursday evening Feb'y 18th, at 7 o'clock, P. M. to adopt Constitution and By-Laws for the government of the society, also to elect officers to serve until the first annual meeting.—The attendance of all the members is desired.

Special Township Meeting.

A special town meeting has been called to take place at Union Hall, Feb. 22d, for the purpose of determining by vote of the electors, what sum, and whether by tax or loan, shall be raised in said township, as a fund to pay bounties to volunteers enlisted into the service of the United States to the credit of this township and applied on our quota, under the last call of the President for men for the army.

☞ Gilbert Gage, of Dover, recently sold a steer five years old, weighing 2,400 lbs., for $170. Mr. Walter Thompson, of Madison, sold a pair of yearling steers for $76.50, that weighed 2,110 lbs.

☞ Mr. Samuel Rundell, a popular and very excellent teacher in our Union School, died after only a weeks sickness on Monday and was buried on Wednesday last. His remains were taken to Franklin for interment. His loss will be greatly felt, not only in the school, but by the entire community here. A more extended obituary notice of him will appear in our next.

ROBACK'S OLD CATAWBA BRANDY

made from the PURE JUICE OF CATAWBA GRAPE, which is grown in abundance in Ohio and from which this article is obtained—it has an agreeable flavor, fine clear color, and possesses all the qualities for medicinal purposes, and for a beverage of the best imported brandies. As a flavoring for mince pies and other cooking purposes it it the best economical artical that can be used, being one half a dollar cheaper by the bottle, and nearly two dollars per gallon cheaper than other Brandies sold for that purpose. Wherever it has been introduced it has found rapid sales, and is daily gaining in popularity, giving in all cases the utmost satisfaction. Call for "Roback's Catawba Brandy," which may be found for sale by Druggists, Grocers and dealers generally throughout the West.

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so.—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

DR. JOHN L. LYON'S

FRENCH, PERIODICAL DROPS

THE GREAT

FEMALE REGULATOR,

Are the only known remedy that will safely, certainly and invariably restore and regulate the female system, removing all irregularities, and producing health, vigor, and strength.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are a fluid preparation, the only one of the kind ever discovered in this country, which acts directly on the parts affected, while pills and powders can only reach them as they work through sympathy, but not as sure and positive.

Are you suffering from a constant anxiety for the regular return of nature's prescribed laws?

Save yourself all uneasiness, for Lyon's Periodical Drops, if taken a day or two before the expected period, will positively and invariably regulate its coming, as pure as effect follows cause, as certain as daylight follows darkness.

Are you sick, enfeebled by disease, or unable to bear the labor and danger of Nurses?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Come to you as a blessing, for is not prevention better than cure?

If regularly taken, it is a certain preventive, and will save you much peril and many hours of suffering.

Have you been afflicted for many years with complaints incident to the sex, that have baffled the skill of physicians, and are hurrying you on to an early grave?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are the most reliable regulator ever known, and cure, like magic, all those irregularities that have defied the doctor's skill.

Will you waste away with suffering from Leucorrhœa, Prolapsus, Dysmenorrhœa, and a thousand other difficulties, all summed up under the name of suppressed and obstructed nature, when an investment of one dollar in

will surely save you?

Do not use the drops when forbidden in the directions, for although a positive cure, and harmless at all other times, they are so powerful and finely calculated to adjust and govern the functions of the sexual organism, that, if taken at improper times, they would produce results contrary to nature, against which all, particularly those who would reproduce, should carefully guard.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Cannot harm the most delicate constitution at any time; yet the proprietors wish to guard against its misuse, hoping that a thousand bottles will be used for a good purpose where one is used for an illegitimate one.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS.

the never-failing Female Regulator, is for sale by every Druggist, in both city and country, and do not, if you value your health and wish for a reliable medicine, buy any other. Take no other; but if the Druggist to whom you apply has not got it, make him send and get it for you.

ROUP.

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,
EDWARD GWINELL,

U. S. 5-20'S !

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "GENERAL SUBSCRIPTION AGENT," will continue to supply the public

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly, frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has ample and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come, to seek a market for any other loan or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach and advance to a handsome premium, as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that whilst the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50, $100, $500 and $1000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10 000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities, towns or counties, and the Government tax on them is only one and a half per cent., on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds Six Hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds; and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

Agents in every Town and County to sell Dale's Newly Patented Neat and Durable

Running Stitch Sewing Machine.

THIS MACHINE will hem, run up breadths, gather, ruffle, shir, tuck, &c., exactly like hand sewing, only more perfect and much faster, with single or double thread, either cotton, linen or silk, using the common sewing needle, (which can be purchased at any store for six cents a paper,) making a uniform long or short stitch as the will of the operator. It will sew any kind of material that requires the running stitch, weighs one pound and can be carried in the pocket or work box, and is so arranged as to be attached for use to a table-top or work-stand; with directons so that a child who can read may operate it without instructions.

The superior tools and large facilitites for manufacturing enables us to put them in them in the market at the low price of $6 00 by retail.

THE Wilcox & Gibbs' Sewing Machine is the best at one, without regard to price, for Family Sewing.

Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even and elastic seem, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub.

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced Machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have ex perience in our own family"—Boston Traveller

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine in use"—The stitch is unexceptionable."—Respected citizens of Philadelphia.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER AND BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints,
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them, and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati.

Read Dr. Roback's Special Notices and Certificates published in a conspicuous part of this Paper from time to time.

Price of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Purifier, $1 per bottle, or $5 per half dozen. Of the Scandinavian Vegetable Blood Pills, 25 cents per box, or 5 boxes for $1.

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the
BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and expedites the Assimilative Process, by which the WATER OF CALCAREOUS depositions, and all ANIMAL ENCUMBRANCES are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, and CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power.
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing.
Weak Nerves,	Trembling.
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness.
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot hands	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which the medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITE, EPILEPTIC FITS,

in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those dire ul diseases?

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

Why Don't You Take the Papers?

BY N. P. WILLIS.

Why don't you take the papers?
They're the life of my delight;
Except about election time,
And then I read for spite.

Subscribe! you cannot lose a cent,—
Why should we be afraid?
For cash thus spent, is money lent
On interest four fold paid.

An old newspaper friend of mine,
While dying from a cough,
Desired to hear the latest news,
While he was going off.

I took the paper and I read
Of some new pills in force;
He bought a box—and is he dead?
No—hearty as a horse.

I knew a printer's debtor once
Rack'd with a scorching fever,
Who swore to pay her debt next day,
If her distress would leave her.

Next day she was again at work,
Divested of her pain,
But did forget to pay the debt
Till taken down again.

"Here, Jesse, take these 'silver wheels,' Go pay the printer now!"
She spoke, and slept, and then awoke
With health upon her brow.

I knew two men as much alike
As e'er you saw two stumps,
And no Phrenologist could find
A difference in their bumps.

One took the papers, and his life
Is happier than a king's,
His children all can read and write,
And talk of men and things.

The other took no paper, and
While strolling through the wood,
A tree fell down upon his crown,
And killed him "werry good."

Had he been reading of the news,
At home like neighbor Jim,
I'll bet a cent that accident
Would not have happened him.

Why don't you take the papers?
Nor from the printer sneak.
Because you borrow from his boy
And paper every week.

For he who takes the papers,
And pays his bills when due,
Can live at peace with God and man,
And with the Printer too.

Popping the Question.

We have heard of many cases of "popping the question," under very singular circumstances, the eccentric, the abrupt, the business-like, the silly, and a hundred other styles. Of the eccentric, we would cite the case of a well-known merchant, who, while dining at a friend's house one day, sat next to a lady who possessed rare charms of conversation. The merchant did not possess this faculty in a very rare degree, but he could do the next best thing—he could appreciate, an appreciation which he endeavored to show by the following mode of action:

"Do you like toast, Miss B.?"

"Yes," responded the lady, slightly surprised at the question.

"Buttered toast?"

"Yes."

"That is strange, so do I. Let us get married."

There cannot be much doubt that the lady was taken slightly aback, a fact that did not prevent the marriage from comming off in a month afterwards, nor the accession of the lady to one of the finest establishments in the city.

As a specimen of the abrupt, we will cite the case of a gentleman who had retired from business at the age of forty, and built himself a beautiful house, determined to enjoy life to the utmost. One day a friend was dining with him, and said half jokingly:

"You have everything here that the heart can desire but a wife."

"That's true; I must think of it." He then relapsed into silence for a few minutes, at the end of which time he rose, begged to be excused for a short time, and left the room. He seized his hat and went instantly to a neighbor's, and was shown into the parlor, with the information that neither the master nor the mistress were at home. He told the servant that he wanted neither, and requested that the housekeeper be sent to him. She came, and the gentleman thus addressed her:

"Sarah, I have known you for many years, and I have just been told that I want a wife. You are the only woman I know that I should be willing to entrust my happiness with, and if you agree we will be instantly married. What is your answers?"

Sarah knew the man that addressed her, and knew that his offer was serious, and as well weighed as though considered for a year, and she answered him in the same spirit.

"I agree."

"Will you be ready in an hour?"

"I will."

"I shall return for you at that time."

Which he did, the gentleman who had suggested the idea accompanying him to the clergyman's. Many years have passed since then, neither party has seen cause to regret the abrupt proposal and acceptance.

Of the business style, we can cite a case related to us, which we know to be true. A young man who had succeeded to the ill-kept and badly cultivated, though really valuable farm of a deceased uncle, saw at a glance that two things were absolutely necessary to enable him to succeed; the first being a wife to take charge of the woman's department, and the second a few thousand dollars to stock it with. He could not help thinking to himself that, possibly, these two great aids to his happiness and prosperity might be found together, and yet without attempting to put matrimonial ideas into practice, he allowed them to haunt him continually.

With this upon his mind, our farmer started upon a horseback journey to a distant part of the country, and upon his return made an acquaintance upon the road, in the person of an old gentleman who was jogging the same way. The companions dined together at a wayside inn, and fraternized very pleasantly, during which the young man informed the elder of all his plans and aspirations, when the old gentleman addressed the younger:

"I rather like you, my friend, and your honest way of telling your story, and if you will come and see me I shall be glad. I've three daughters, all as good girls as ever lived. Now perhaps one of them may be the very one you are looking for; if so, I will do my best towards making the balance of the matter agreeable. Ride over and see me to-morrow, take dinner and [illegible] I will give you a fair chance to see them and judge."

The young man instantly agreed to the proposal, making only a condition that the daughters should not be informed of the nature of his errand. This was agreed to, and they separated.

The next day at the time appointed, the young man dismounted at the door of the house of his new-made friend, and was heartily welcomed. The hour before dinner was consumed in looking over the farm, the young man in admiring its keeping, the old one in approving of the sensible and practical remarks of the younger, when the meal was announced, and the three young ladies and the mother were introduced. They were all, as the old gentleman had said, fine-looking girls, but the youngest, rosy-cheek, blue-eyed, and laughing-faced, charmed the young farmer especially. The dinner over, they once more walked out for a chat.

"Well, how do you like my daughters?" was the old gentleman's first question.

"They are all nice girls, very nice," said the young man.

"And which of them do you like best?" was the next question.

"The youngest, Kate, she is charming, and if I am to be your son-in-law, you must give me Kate."

"This will never do to take the youngest and by all odds the prettiest," said the old man thoughtfully.

"I must have her or none," was the response of the young man.

"How much money did you say you wanted?"

"Five thousand dollars will put my farm in excellent order, and make it worth twenty thousand to-morrow. I must have five thousand dollars."

"I'll give you the sum with either of the other girls," said the old gentleman, positively; "but I will give but three thousand with Kate."

"Then I may as well go to my home. Five thousand dollars I must have—I've set my mind upon it."

"And I have just as strongly determined to do only what I have said," was the old gentleman's reply; "so I suppose the matter is at an end. However, we will be good friends, and you must sometimes ride over and see me."

Thus ended the conference, and they parted. The young man mounted his horse, and rode down toward the road, but just as he was about to open the gate, stooping from his saddle, the laughing faced Kate sprang through the shrubbery to save him the trouble.

"Can't you accept my father's terms?"

"Yes, by George I will, if you say so," was the instantaneous response.

"Then come over to-morrow morning before ten o'clock and tell him so," and the girl vanished like a fairy among the leaves.

The young man rode slowly home, but he was on hand next morning, according to bidding, and married the fair Kate in two months after.

As a specimen of the absurd, we cannot do better than cite a case that occured within our own jurisdiction, in a country village of Massachusetts. There was a certain Zachariah Peebles, a stout, industrious, sober and bashful farm-hand, a resident of that locality. Zack was celebrated not for what he did say, but for what he did not, his silence being a matter of marvel through all that chattering neighborhood. Zach, with all his taciturnity, was not proof against the shafts of love, and one day was smitten with the wholesome charms of the only child of widow Brown, a bright eyed, good looking girl, possessing the same trait of silence as Zack, although not in so eminent a degree.

The first time Zack showed his admiration for Sally was by seizing up a large basket of cow feed which she was about to carry into the stables, and hurrying thither in a frightened way, much as though he was taking it from a burning house.—After that he seemed to be perpetually on the watch for opportunities to save the fair Sally from heavier work. These delicate attentions could not fail to attract the attention of the widow Brown, who, really respecting the young man, invited him into the house, and from that time Zack was a fixity. He would sit in the chimney corner of the old fashioned house, scarcely ever speaking, dividing his attention equally between the fire, and feasting his eyes on Sally. For two years this quiet adoration went on, and the neighbors wondered why, as there was nothing to prevent it, they did not get married.—It never has been known whether the idea came entirely [illegible] whether it was a hint from a friend, but at last he did find the courage to pop the question. It was done in this way:—The time was New Year Eve, and the fair Sally had been preparing at stout jug of mullen cider, that she might have something to cheer Zack's heart when he came in.—Zack came, he drank, and took his accustomed seat in the chimney corner, where he sat quietly for a few minutes, and then, without any previous symptoms, he rose up to his full height, six feet and two inches, putting his head up the chimney so that but little of him was seen above the waist, and delivered the following oration:

"If somebody loved somebody as well as somebody loves somebody, somebody would marry somebody."

Zack remained with his head up the chimney after this speech, silent as death, for some minutes, until he came forth from his place of refuge at the earnest solicitation of widow Brown, with a face glowing like the setting sun. The thing was done, however, and Zack and Sally were married in a few months after, and we are convinced that if either of them could be induced to talk now, after a trial of a dozen years, they would say that that was the best mode of popping the question.

Among the oddities of the mystery, the one over which we have personally wondered much, occurred in Philadelphia, with our own knowledge.

A lady and gentleman who had been acquainted but a week, and who move in the very first circles, were walking upon the street, the lady showing the lions of the city to the gentleman, who was a stranger in the place. In the course of their ramble they were stopped by a wedding party, who were alighting from their carriages at the door of a church. The lady and gentleman went in, and together they stood till the ceremony was over. At the instant, the gentleman, taking the lady's hand in his, led her unresistingly to the altar, without a single word spoken and presented her to the astonished minister, with the request that they should be made one. In ten minutes the knot was tied, and we have no reason to believe that either have, in the ten years they have been joined, seen cause to regret the suddenness of the idea.

—"Does this razor go easy?" asked a barbar whose victim was writhing under a chimey instrument whose chief reccommendation was a strong handle.

"Well," replied the poor fellow, "that depends on what kind of an operation you call this. If you're skinning me, in goes tolerable easy; but if you're shaving me it goes rather hard."

Olla Podrida.

For a "Slow-Coach" Family.

Don't take a newspaper; don't read one of any kind. If you hear persons discussing this or that great battle, ask stupidly what it all means. Emulate Rip Van Winkle; steep your senses in moral and mental oblivion, and pay no attention to what is passing about you; in this way you may save two or three dollars—the price of a paper—and lose five hundred or five thousand dollars by not being informed about markets, supply and demand, and a thousand other things as essential to an enterprising man as light and air. If you have children, don't take any paper for them; tell them "book larnin' ain't no 'count." Let them tumble in the highway unwashed, uncombed, and in rags and tatters. If they don't graduate in the State Prison it will be through no fault of yours. If you are a farmer, plow, sow and reap as your stupid father did before you. Scoff at all newspapers, and sneer and deride at progress of all kinds; then if you do not succeed in making other people think that they are all wrong, and that you alone are sagacious, it must be that the world is curiously awry, and needs reforming badly. The sooner you undertake it the better.

By not reading papers you will succeed, if a farmer, in having the finest crop of knotty, wormy apples that can be found; potatoes that would take the prize at any fair for rot; cabbages that are all leaves and no head; turnips destroyed in the shoot by worms; hay mouldy and musty, because he despised barometers and cut it just as the mercury was falling; corn half a crop, because you exhausted the land with it for years, and starved Nature to such a pitch that she had nothing to yield in return; all these calamities, and many more, will befall you because you don't keep pace with the times. You call it "hard luck," but men of common sense call your course by a name you never heard of—stupidity; that's more "book larnin'."

A man that does not take a paper of some kind or another in this time of the world, must expect to be a prey to all sorts of swindlers, a victim to bad management, and out of spirits, out of pocket, temper, money, credit, in short, everything under the sun that tends to make life bearable. The newspaper is the great educator of the people, after all; so let us then exclaim, "THE PRESS FOREVER!"

—Scientific American.

Jack and his Hard Lump.

"Halloo, Jack! halloo! Won't you have a glass this cold morning?" cried a tavern keeper to a jolly Jack Tar who was smartly stepping along the road.

Jack had formerly been a hard drinker, and had spent many a bright sovereign in the tavern he was now passing; but a year ago he had signed the temperance pledge.

"No, Landlord, no! I can't drink; I've got a hard lump at my side." As the witty sailor said these words he pressed his hand against his side, adding, "oh, this hard lump."

"It is all through leaving off grog," replied the landlord; "some good drink will take your lump away. If you are fool enough to keep on being teetotal, your lump will get bigger, and very likely you'll be having a hard lump, at your other side."

"True, true, old boy!" with a hearty laugh, responded the merry tar, as he briskly drew out a bag of gold from his side pocket, and held it up to the publican's gaze: "This is my hard lump.—You are right in saying that if I drink my lump will go away, and if I stick to teetotal I shall have a bigger lump. Good bye to you landlord. By God's help I'll keep out of your net, and try to get a hard lump on both sides!"

Durability of Wood.

The piles sustaining the London bridge have been driven five hundred years. In 1845 they were critically examined, and found to have been decayed but slightly; these piles are principally of elm. Old Savoy palace in the city of London, is sustained on piles driven six hundred and fifteen years ago; they consist of oak, elm, beech and chestnut, and are perfectly sound. The bridge built by the Emperor Trajan over the Danube, affords a striking example of the durability of timber in a wet state. One of these piles was taken up and found to be petrified to the depth of three fourths of an inch, and the rest of the wood had undergone no change, though it had been driven sixteen hundred years.

What makes a Man.

A man never knows what he is capable of until he has tried his powers. There seems to be no bound to human capacity. Insight, energy, and will, produce astonishing results. How often modest talent, driven by circumstances to undertake some formidable looking work, has felt its own untried and hitherto unconscious powers, rising up to grapple and master it; and afterwards stood, amazed at its own unexpected success!

Those circumstances, those people, enemies or friends, that provoke us to any noble or manly undertaking, are our greatest benefactors. Opposition and persecution do more for a man than any seemingly good forture. The sneers of critics develop the latent fire in the young poet. The anathemas of the angry church inflame the zeal of the reformer. Tyranny, threats, fagots, torture, raise up heroes and martyrs who might have otherwise slept away slothful and thoughtless lives, never dreaming what splendid acts and words lay buried in their bosoms. And who knows but the wrongs of society are permitted because of the fine gold which is thus beaten out of the crude ore or humanity?

Here is a truth worth considering.—Are you in poverty? Have you suffered wrong? Do circumstances oppose you? beset by enemies? Now is your time! Never lie there depressed and melancholy. Spend no more days in idle whining.—Up like a lion! Make no complaint, but if difficulty fights you, roar your defiance. You know not yet what is in you. You are at school, this is your necessary discipline, poverty and pain are your masters—but use the powers God has given you, and you shall be master at last.—Fear of failure is the most fruitful cause of failure. Stand firm upon the rock of your manhood, and in the end you shall not fail. What seems failure at first, is discipline. Accept the lessons; trust the grand result; up and against, strike again; and you shall always gain, whatever the fortunes of to-day or to-morrow's battle.

TOWN AND COUNTRY.—Never live in a large city, if you can by any possible means afford to live in the country.—There is a pestilence ever haunting the one—a moral, as well as a physical miasma—There is health, and also comparative innocence, dwelling in the other.

"God, the first garden made, and the first city Cain."

And Nature has kept up the distinction very carefully ever since. The scent of the flowers, the fresh, cool verdure of the trees, the velvety carpeting of the grass—all inspire the heart amid them with a feeling somewhat akin to their own unsophisticated nature. But the houses, the signs, the paved streets, the jaded horses, the wan faces, the looks of cunning or of vice, the very gasaroma of a city's streets, teach us a lesson of life so covered with artificialities of both pleasure and pain, that we turn from it in disgust (if our taste has not been vitiated by habit), and rush to the purer air of rural scenes, with a consciousness of forsaking man and his works, to take refuge with God, his creatures, and his creation.

A QUAKER WOMAN'S SERMON.—My dear friends, there are three things I very much wonder at. The first is that children should be so foolish as to throw stones and clubs and bricks up in trees to knock down fruit; if they would let it alone it would fall of itself. The second is, that men should be so foolish, and even so wicked, as to go to war and kill each other; if let alone they would die themselves. And the third and last thing that I wonder at is, that young men should be so unwise as to go after the young women; if they would stay at home the young women would come after them.

☞ "Will you give me them pennies now?" said a big newsboy to a small newsboy, after giving him a severe thumping.

"No I won't."

"Then I will give you another good pounding."

"Pound away. Me and Dr. Franklin agrees. Franklin says, 'Take care of the pence, and the pounds will take care of themselves.'"

☞ Industry will make a purse, and frugality will give you strings to it.—This purse will cost you nothing. Draw the strings as frugality directs, and you will always find a useful penny at the bottom.

—One swallow doesn't make a summer, but young men should remember that too many swallows are certain to make a fall.

A Striking Anecdote.

A caviller once asked Dr. Nettleton, "How came I by my wicked heart?" "That," he replied, "is a question which does not concern you so much as another, namely, how shall you get rid it. You have a wicked heart, which renders you entirely unfit for the kingdom of God; and you must have a new heart, or you cannot be saved; and the question which now most deeply concerns you is, How shall you obtain it?" "But," says the man, "I wish you to tell me how I came by my wicked heart." "I shall not," replied Dr. Nettleton, do that at present; for if I could do it to your entire satisfaction, it would not in the least help you towards obtaining a new heart. The great thing for which I am solicitous is, that you should become a new creature, and be prepared for heaven. As the man manifested no disposition to hear anything on that subject, but still pressed the question how he came by his wicked heart, Dr. Nettleton told him that his condition resembled that of a man who is drowning, while his friends are attempting to save his life. As he rises to the surface of the water, he exclaims, "How came I here?" "That question," says one of his friends, "does not concern you now. Take hold of this rope." "But how came I here?" he asked again. "I shall not stop to answer that question now," replies his friend. "Then I'll drown," says the infatuated man, and spurning all proffered aid, sinks to the bottom.

To Whisky Drinkers.

What do you drink whisky for? Do you know? Well, we would like to know who does. It is a vile practice, and which politicians, common people, and the rest of mankind, and even editors and lawyers indulge. It is a very mean practice. It destroys the intellect, kills the body and damns the soul. The devil won a great victory when he introduced whisky into the world. He knew what he was about. It was his business to sit [illegible] souls, and he knew that was the best recruiting officer for the armies of perdition that he could employ. We have a few words to say to whisky drinkers. Don't touch it. It injures, it ruins, it kills. The kindest, truest, best hearted men in the world drink liquor to excess. God, and God alone, knows the struggles of such men to resist temptation. He alone knows how earnestly they prayed to be delivered from evil. Oh, how many we know, kind hearted, true, loving men, who are rapidly passing down to death on the rushing tide of intoxication. Do you drink? Stop to-day for your own sake. Do you know a friend who sometimes drinks to excess, but who is trying to lead a sober life? You do? Well don't tempt him. It is a great crime to use your influence for the destruction of a fellow creature. If you will injure yourself, do so; but don't be instrumental in the murder of your neighbor.—Louisville Journal.

FUN should be cultivated as a fine art, for it is altogether a fine thing. Whoever knew a "funny man" to be a bad one? On the contrary, is he not, nine times out of ten, generous humane, social and good? To be sure he is. Fun—it is a great thing. It smoothes the rough places of life; makes disposition as fresh and rosy as a maiden's kiss; scatters sunshine and flowers wherever it goes; gives the world a round, jolly countenance; makes all the girls as pretty as June roses, and mankind one of the best familys out. We go in for fun. The man who won't cultivate it, must keep a good sized half rod between us.

—At Gettysburg 28,000 muskets were taken. Of these 28,000 were found to be loaded, 12,000 containing two loads, and 6,000 from three to ten loads each. In many instances half a dozen balls were driven on a single charge of powder. In some cases the former possessor had reversed the usual order, placing the ball at the bottom of the barrel and the powder on top.

TECUMSEH, MICH., FEB. 25, 1864.

The University Once More.

The newly elected Board of Regents have just closed their second meeting at Ann Arbor.

An immense pressure was forced upon them by the Tappan men of Detroit and Ann Arbor. A meeting of the students was got up for the occasion, and the Board were memorialized to repeal the Blue Laws, remove Dr. Haven, restore Dr. Tappan, censure the action of the old Board, and break up things generally.

The Board received what they had to offer, heard what they had to say, went into executive session by themselves, and after carefully canvassing the whole question decided by a vote of five to one, as we are informed, to confirm and adopt the Blue Laws; not to remove, but cordially to support and sustain Dr. Haven, and neither to recall Dr. Tappan nor in any way dissent from the action of the old Board in these matters.

And now for the sake of the University, and for the sake of the best interests of the whole State, in this regard, we do hope that this will be regarded by all as a finality in the matter.

This whole quarrel in and about the University, became a ridiculous absurdity long ago, and every body could see it so, except a very few, who have made all the noise from the first and have given indubitable evidences that they had Tappan upon the brain so badly that they could not see anything but simply his interests and wishes, to be consulted in a State University numbering nearly thirty Professors and almost one thousand students.

[illegible] even these men have all along, [illegible] censuring the old board of regents, [illegible] what they have called a hasty and ill-[illegible]sed, and sometimes a narrow-minded [illegible] incompetent action in this matter, [illegible] the New Board beyond all prece[illegible], and expressed a perfect confidence [illegible] their judgment of the case, and a will[illegible]ness to abide by any decision they [illegible] upon a careful review and due [illegible]deration, make with regard to it.

[illegible] review has been had, that consid[illegible] taken, and that decision made,—and [illegible] all now see whether they will abide [illegible] or not.

[illegible] University of Michigan belongs to [illegible] people, of the whole State, and [illegible] they would seem to suppose, to [illegible] of two Detroit Dailies and [illegible] third of the people of Ann [illegible]

If the people of this State wanted the editors of the Detroit Tribune, and Free Press, to run the University for them, they would undoubtedly have elected them Regents, that they might have done so; or if they wanted these citizens of Ann Arbor to run the Institution for them, they would undoubtedly have sought to amend our State Constitution that they might do so; but as they have done neither of these, we must be permitted to say that we cannot but regard it as a pretty strong indication that they do not desire anything of the kind.

Whatever little irregularity and embarrassment has of late occurred at the University, during the present term, may be, we think, traced directly to this unfortunate out side interference with its internal and executive management, which properly belong to the Board of Regents, the University Senate, and the various Faculties, and to no one else. And now, that it is rendered certain that nothing can be gained, while so much injury has been already done by it, and so much more may yet be done by its further continuance, we do hope, that we have at last seen the end of all such attempts at an irregular outside interference, and that our noble University may at length be permitted to go on in its unparalleled course of prosperity and usefulness, in quietude and peace

A Terrific Railway Leap.—About 40 miles west of Toronto the Grand Trunk Railway crosses the river Credit by a bridge 120 feet high. It is built of solid masonry and iron. The other day one of the axles of a freight train broke which threw the two hindmost cars off the track and into the deep abyss. The conductor and two brakesmen were in the last car, being boxed up so that they had no chance of escape, and were hurled with the car into the awful chasm. All the bodies were terribly crushed and mangled, so much so as to be quite beyond recognition. The head of the Conductor, Mr. Kennedy, was completely severed from the trunk.

U. S. Bakery, Alexandria, Va., Co. F, 26th Reg, Feb. 15, 1864.

Mr. Editor:—

Sir—It is not often that you and the readers of your paper get sight of a letter from our Company, and the main reason seems to be because we do not write. To tell why we do not write, might expose our ignorance more than we are willing to do. Still I may say that one reason why is, we do not know as you want to take the trouble to publish these letters.

My object in writing now is to inform the friends of the company that there is a great change among us. The religion of Jesus has come in our midst and it has taken posession of some of the once most wicked members of the company, and it causes them to change greatly.

The same power has helped some of the old professors to renew their lives and live for God and the advancement of His kingdom.

Ten new ones have professed faith in Christ. Others are busy thinking and pondering over the true way to run life's journey.

Our Captain, though not a professor of this religion, gives us his influence, and seems highly pleased to know that such a work has been done, and is still progressing. Our Lieutenants are also men of principle, and we may, from all signs of success that are visible, take new courage in the midst of the work.

We feel that we are indebted for this work to the influence and exertions of the persons connected with the U. S. Christian Commission. We bless God for what our eyes have seen, and for what our ears have heard; and we still look to God for better times. Religion is a glorious thing. It makes us happy—it makes us true men. It prepares us for life—it prepares us for death,—it will save us in Heaven.

Friends of the soldiers, we ask you to aid us by your earnest prayers. Trusting in God, we remain our country's defenders.

United States 5-20's.

It may not be known to some of our readers that these Government securities, which are payable at the pleasure of the Government, after three years from April next, may be paid in the notes of the National Bank, and are not to be paid in specie. The act authorizing the issue of bonds, payable after ten years, and within forty years, provides that both interest and principal shall be paid in specie. As matters now stand, the Treasury will only be called on to pay specie on the interest of its bonded debt, before ten years from the date of the issue of its 10-40 bonds. This gives the Government ten years to prepare for, and inaugurate a general return to a money basis of specie. It is not likely that it will be deferred so long, but prudence requires that ample time should be allowed to bring about an event of such magnitude in monetary affairs.

The reorganization meeting at Memphis on the 10th adopted emancipation resolutions, and endorsed Governor Johnson.

The News.

Monday, Feb. 22.

American affairs appear to have received some attention in the British Parliament. Earl Derby, in assailing the foreign policy of the Government, censured it, among other things, for not accepting Napoleon's proposal for recognizing the Confederate States. Another member expressed the hope that the Government would tender its advice to the American belligerents, with a view of putting an end to the present conflict.

After a skirmish of two or three days, our forces have captured and now hold Yazoo City, Miss.

The recent expedition into Florida resulted in a very slight loss to our forces and the destruction of over $1,500,000 worth of rebel property. An intercepted communication from a rebel official shows that the South is very destitute of beef, bacon, etc., and that Florida was considered an available resource for supplies.

Intelligence from Sherman's expedition states that he encountered and defeated a rebel force of from 4,000 to 5,000 just before reaching Jackson, Miss. The enemy retreated from the latter place, crossing the Pearl River so hastily that his pontoons and a portion of his artillery fell into our hands, besides a number of prisoners.

Another dispatch, from Huntsville, Ala., says that Sherman has had a fight with Polk, near Brandon, Miss., in which Sherman was victorious, capturing 12,000 prisoners.

The rebel Gen. Price has obtained a furlough of sixty days, for a visit to Texas and Mexico, and the belief is said to be prevalent in the rebel army that he does not intend to return.

Refugees from Mobile state that there are 15,000 rebel troops in and around that city, and the citizens feel secure from an attack.

Intelligence from New Orleans brings the information that the rebel General Dick Taylor, made a recent attack on our forces at Natchez, with 3,000 men. After two attacks he was repulsed with loss. Gen. Grover has been making a raid on the rebel conscript camps across Lake Ponchartrain, and in a radius of 50 or 60 miles has broken up several, and brought in a large number of horses, cattle and sheep.

Later advices from Europe by the Africa state that a collision had occurred between the Danes and the Germans. The former have evacuated Schleswig and the Dannewerk, retiring to Flensburg, the Germans pursuing.

A notorious guerrilla chief of Western Virginia, known as Dan Dickey, has been captured.

Tuesday, Feb. 23.

The National Union Committee met at Washington yesterday, and issued a call for a National Union Convention, to be held at Baltimore on the 7th of June next. The basis of representation is fixed at two delegates for each vote in the electoral college. All States having representatives in Congress are entitled to send delegates.

A Richmond journal gives the names of a number of re-captured Union officers, who have been returned to that city. Among them are Lieuts. J. C. Hall and —Greble, 8th Michigan, and Daniel Frausbury, 1st Michigan Cavalry.

Interesting intelligence from rebel sources, relative to Sherman's movements, has been received. He is represented as tearing up the railroad track in his rear, a sure indication that no retrograde movement is intended. The rebel Governor of Alabama has issued a proclamation warning non-combatants to leave Mobile.

News from the Army of the Potomac state that rebel deserters continued to come in, and that the 14th and 15th Louisiana had nearly all deserted.

Of the escaped prisoners from Richmond, 45 have arrived and 25 have been captured leaving 39 to be accounded for.

The Virginia State Convention re-assembled on the 22d inst. There is little doubt that the State will be declared free. The status of repentant rebels is exciting attention, and it is proposed to restore them to the rights of citizenship after the lapse of five years.

There are rumors, from rebel sources, that the enemy will try to force our army back on Washington by a movement along the Blue Ridge, and bring on another battle at Bull Run. It is stated from the same source that work on the rebel iron-clads has been suspended, and no hopes are entertained of making those in their possession available.

It is reported that 500 of Lee's cavalry have disbanded until March 15th for want of forage. A large portion of his cavalry force is scattered through the country for the purpose of obtaining subsistence for men and horses.

☞ A considerable nest of counterfeiters have just been broken up at Kalamazoo; four persons have been arrested, after passing $45 on the Madison Branch of the Bank of the State of Indiana. On their persons were found $2,200, all in 5's. The money is said to be a miserable imitation of the real. Counterfeit 1's on the 'Farmer's Bank of Attica,' Batavia, Genesee Co. N. Y., has also been lately made public in Detroit; the plates captured and the villian also, but the latter was finally let loose because the directors of the bank refused to prosecute the case, even after the Detroit detectives had ferrited the matter out. If this is the way a matter of this kind is to be treated, we advise all to let the 'Bank of Attica' bills alone and let them go home both good and bad.

☞ There are men in St. Joseph county who have offered teamsters from six to ten dollars per day to go to Idaho. The demand has been supplied. Ho! for Idaho!

☞ The maple sugar season has commenced in Sanilac county.

Daring Capture.

A letter dated at Port Hudson, La., Jan. 28th, gives the following account of the capture of the rebel Colonel Fradvort by a Boston boy, a private in the 3d Massachusetts Cavalry:

'One of our scouts Philbrick, of the 3d Massachusetts Cavalry, recently rode out alone, within the enemy's lines, and captured a rebel Colonel, with an audacity that deserved especial notice. Col. Bradford was visiting his affianced at a plantation house four miles from Jackson, where he supposed himself entirely safe, for the rebel pickets were within call. Philbrick, late at night, stole into the negro quarters and learned from the slaves, who are always our friends, all that he wished to know. Quietly fastening his horse, he crept to the front door, burst it open, and pistol in hand, astonished the assembled party with the sight of a Union soldier on the rampage. The scout thundered out his orders to an imaginary company through the back window, kicked over the whist table, smashing the goblets and a bottle of "Widow Cliquot" that had probably paid recent duty at Baten Rouge, disarmed the Colonel and took both him and his servant prisoners, mounted them on their own horses and brought them off amid the tears and lamentations of the "affianced" and her friends. Through by-roads the unlucky Colonel was brought safely to camp, and is now on his way to Virginia with a letter of introduction to Gen. Butler. The prisoner nearly ground up a fine sett of natural teeth when he learned that his capture had been effected by a single soldier, armed no better, than himself."

A Cab from Boston to Chicago.—The Detroit Advertiser and Tribune says: "On Thursday last a car passed through this city by way of the Grant Trunk and Michigan Central roads, that was loaded in Boston, and had come thus far direct by rail over the roads of different gauge, Chicago being its final destination. It is a new invention, by a Mr. Tistale, the object being to procure rolling apparatus that should run on variously gauged roads.—The wheels are so placed upon the axle that they are almost self-adjusting when a different gauge is encountered. The wheels slide upon the axle, holding in their place by a groove closely fitting a ridge upon the axle. The wheels can be moved laturally by the withdrawal of a couple of pins, widening and contracting the gauge at pleasure, a short rail laid in a peculiar manner facilitating the passage of the car from the broad to the narrow gauge.

A Touching Incident.—An officer, just returned from the West, relates a touching incident of the loyalty and tendency of many of the inhabitants of that nominally secesh land. After the battle of Bean Station, the rebels were guilty of all manner of indignity towards the slain. They stripped their bodies, and shot persons who came near the battle-field to show any attention to the dead. The body of a little drummer boy was left naked and exposed. Near by in an humble house, there were two little girls, the eldest but sixteen, who resolved to give the boy a decent burial. They took the night for their task. With hammer and nails in hand, and boards on their shoulders, they sought the place where the body of the dead drummer boy lay.—From their own scanty wardrobe, they clothed the body for the grave. With their own hands they made a rude coffin, in which they reverently put the dead boy. They dug the grave and lowered the body into it and covered it over.—The noise of the hammering brought some of the rebels to the spot. The sight was too much for them. Not a word was spoken, no one interfered, and when the sacred rites of the burial were performed, all separated, and the little drummer boy sleeps undisturbed in his grave on the battle field. Such tenderness and heroism deserves to run along the line of coming generations with the story of the woman who broke the alabaster box on the feet of the Savior, and with her who of her penury cast her two mites into the treasury.

Dangerous Counterfeit of Greenbacks.—We have been shown a new and very dangerous counterfeit twenty dollar legal tender treasury note. The general appearance is almost an exact imitation of the genuine, but close scrutiny with a magnifying glass shows the engraving in detail to be coarser. On the most careful comparison there is but one point of difference that we notice, which would be a guide for the inexperienced, and that is the "H" in the word THE in the words "payable at THE Treasury of the U. S.," has no crossbar, while in the genuine the H is perfect. The specimen shown us was offered at the counter of Messrs. Waldy & Co.'s banding house yesterday afternoon, and detected. This is the first appearance of this dangerous counterfeit in this vicinity that we have heard of.—the public should be on the watch for them.—Adrian Watchtower.

☞ A 20-inch Rodman gun was cast on Thursday at Pittsburg. It carries a ball weighing 1,000 pounds, and is the largest gun ever cast.

☞ The question of price for admission to the great New York Sanitary Fair has not yet been settled. The papers advise it to be placed so low that the million can visit it.

Scraps of News.

—By order of the War Department, enlisted men who lose or dispose of revolver pistols intrusted to their care, will hereafter be charged $20 in each case, that being the amount of pecuniary damage sustained by the government as estimated by the Ordinance Department.

—A man named James Graham, has been arrested in Van Wert county, Ohio, for passing counterfeit postal currency. $130 of the counterfeit currency was found on his person. He belonged to a gang of counterfeiters, one of whom was previously arrested, with $1,600 of the same money in his possession.

—Artemus Ward has been very successful in California. He has "spoken his piece" about twenty times, and had received for it about $8,000 in gold.

—Henry Ward Beecher calls the London Times the common sewer of the British artistocracy.

—A discovery has been made in France, which will probably revolutionize the paper business. Excellent paper is manufactured from the wood of the oak, walnut, pine, chesnut, and various vegetables, without any addition of rags. A reduction in price of from fifty to eighty per cent. is predicted. The Paris correspondence of the New York Times writes the above facts.

—The Legislature of Wisconsin has ordered the Governor's message to be printed in eight different languages—English, German, Norwegian, Irish, Welch, Holland, French and Bohemian.

—It is suggested in some of the Pennsylvania papers that a place should be set apart for the burial of the rebel dead on the Gettysburg battle-field. The recent rains have washed the places where they are buried, and the bones are exposed; besides which, in a short time, the land will be put under cultivation, and no traces of their last resting place will be left.

—A new Union depot is to be constructed at Cleveland, which is to be 600 feet long and 180 feet wide. It is to be built of massive brown sand stone, with an iron truss roof. It will accommodate all the railroads leading into the city. This depot is to cost $126,000 and when completed, will be one of the largest buildings of the kind in the United States.

—A bill is being matured in Congress defining the position and duties of Chaplains, also regulating their pay. An exchange suggests that the bill provide that it shall be the specific duty of each Chaplain to keep a full and correct record for the Government of all movements, fights, and casualties.

—On Monday last a man named Haskell was accidentally shot while sitting in a car in the depot at Toledo. The accident was caused by the dropping of a revolver from the hands of a passenger.—The ball entered the leg near the ankle, passing through the bone and lodging in the stocking of the wounded man.

—The merchants of St. Johns, New Foundland, are strongly opposed to the Reciprocity Treaty. A meeting of the commercial society of that place has been held to consider the operation of this treaty. An expression of opinion was, however, postponed, to await the action of the other colonies.

—The people of Chicago are excited over the appearance of a ghost in that city, which it is asserted has been seen by divers persons on divers occasions. His ghostship is said to be the troubled spirit of a man, who died of drinking Chicago water.

—Gen. Rosecrans has authorized in his Department of Missouri the Bishop to take possession of all Methodist Church buildings in the interior where pastors are disloyal, or where pulpits are unsupplied, with a view to appointing loyal pastors.

The quota of Saginaw City, under the last call is now filled.

—Capt. March's company left Hillsdale on Wednesday en route for Knoxville, Tenn., under command of Lieut. Hancock.

—The 16th Regiment left Saginaw on Wednesday last; 150 new recruits joined the regiment before its departure.

—Over 40 men have enlisted in less than a week at Buchanan since the last call for "200,000 more" was promulgated.

—The Advent Christian Conference of Michigan and Northern Indiana is now holding its session in the Advent chapel at Buchanan, in Berrien county.

A meeting was held for the first time in the new M. E. Church, at Pontiac, on Sunday last. A collection of $100 was taken for the benefit of the Sabbath School.

—Bayard Taylor is to lecture before the Young Men's Association, at Jackson Hall, on Saturday evening, Feb. 27th. Subject, "Russia and her People."

—A railroad meeting was held at New Hudson, Oakland county, on the 18th inst., to initiate measures to insure the construction of a railroad between Detroit and Howell, which was well attended.

A Story for M. Bates.

One day, when Mr. Bates was remonstrating with Mr. Lincoln against the appointment of some indifferent lawyer to a place of judicial importance, the President interposed with, "Come, now, Bates, he's not half so bad as you think. Besides that, I must tell you, he did me a good turn long ago. When I took to the law, I was going to court one morning, with some ten or twelve miles of bad road before me, and I had no horse. The Judge overtook me, in his wagon. 'Hello, Lincoln, are you not going to the court house?' Come in and I'll give you a seat." Well, I got in, and the Judge went on reading his papers. Presently the wagon struck a stump on one side of the road; then it hopped off to the other. I looked out, and I saw the driver was jerking from side to side in his seat. So, says I, 'Judge, I think your coachman has been taking a little drop too much this morning.' 'Well, I declare, Lincoln,' said he, 'I should not much wonder if you are right, for he has nearly upset me half a dozen times since starting.' So, putting his head out of the window, he shouted, 'Why, you infernal scoundrel, you are drunk!' Upon which, pulling up his horses, and turning round with great gravity, the coachman said: 'By gorra! that's the first rightful decision you have given for the last twelve month!'"

A Singular Story.

The Schenectady Star tells the following: "A lady—married, and having a large family—living in Johnstown, died under rather singular circumstances some days since. She pretended to have learned, by visitation or premonition, the exact period of her death, and accordingly, some weeks previous to that event, made all preparations for it, paying farewell visits to her numerous friends, arranging her grave clothes, etc. She did not appear to dred the speedy death which she believed awaited her; she spoke of it as she would of an ordinary occurrence, and evidently believed that others would so regard it. On Saturday, apparently in her usual health, she did her own washing and baking, washed herself from head to foot, wrote two farewell letters to her children, and finally carried the clothes she threw off up two pair of stairs and hung them carefully away, saying she should not need them again. She spoke truly, for the next morning she was found dead in her bed. The lady was not deranged, and her well known character precluded the idea of her taking any means to make her belief come true."

☞ A Chattanooga letter writer tells of two members of the 78th Pennsylvania who have taken possession of Lookout summit, erected a shed, hoisted up materials over a couple of ladders, and are now reaping an abundant harvest of green backs, by taking pictures in this elevated locality. The soldiers crowd here in scores to cut hickory canes and grub the gnarled roots of the laurel for pipes; and, attracted by the novelty of the matter, cannot resist the temptation to have a picture of themselves. Accordingly they "strike an attitude," on the extreme verge of a cliff, 2,200 feet above the level of the Tennessee, either defiant and warlike, or musing and abstracted, as their genius prompts, and the man of chemicals does them in "melainotype" for $3, and sells them a frame to put it in for $5, and all in the short space of about 10 minutes.

Flag to the "Eighth."—Just as the Eight Michigan Infantry, who have seen such arduous service, at Port Royal, S. C., and its adjacencies, were about leaving Cincinnati, after having been guests at the "Garrison," for a length of time, the Regiment was presented with a splendid flag by the proprietor of that house. The presentation address was given by a lady boarder. Our Michigan boys are honored wherever they go as the bravest of the brave and worthy of the greatest laurels.

Singular Statement.—Two soldiers in guard were recently found murdered at St. Petersburg. It was suggested that the eyes of the murdered soldiers should be immediately photographed, in the hope of successfully testing the discovery recently made, when, to the surprise of all, the result was the production of the portraits of two soldiers of the private guard at the palace, on whose breasts were the insignia of the Cross of St. George. The murderers were at once sought out and apprehended.

☞ It is said that the fall of the Lewiston Suspension Bridge, during the gale on Monday morning, was owing to the guys having been carried away by the ice jam. The bridge was built some twelve or fifteen years ago, and cost $60,000. No one was on it when it fell, which was about 9 o'clock in the morning.

☞ There will be two eclipses this year, both of the sun. The first on the 5th of May,—cannot be seen in the North western part of North America; but partly in California at sunset. On the North Pacific Ocean the sun will be nearly totally eclipsed. The second is an annular eclipse of the sun, Oct. 30th, invisible on account of the moon being so far South; but to be seen in Mexico and the whole of South America.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT!

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES.

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT.

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that often a few instructions will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle; which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich, alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction; easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleandd or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Felt, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using Weed's Patent Thread Controller. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted.

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

Home Insurance Co, of N, York

The subscriber is agent for the above well known and eminently responsible Company—and is prepared to Insure for parties in Tecumseh and other places on Merchandise from eastern Cities coming westward, and on Flour or other Western produce going East by Rail Road Lake and river transportation—under his open policy on terms as favorable as with any reliable company—this agency affords western Merchants and others opportunity to effect their Insurance at home and get the benefit of the rebate from the premium.—Orders solicited—and letters promptly answered. WM. HAYDEN.

MONEY EASILY MADE.

By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so.—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

No advertisement considered less than one square. Transient advertisements unaccompanied with directions for the number of insertions, will be continued until ordered out, and charged accordingly. Business cards of five lines, or less, inserted at $5.00 per year.

Work neatly executed at this office. Charges reasonable.

☞ Rev. H. L. Hayward, will deliver a Temperance Lecture at Bidwell's Hall, Friday evening, Feb. 25th.

☞ Potatoes wanted, for which the highest market price will be paid. Enquire at this office.

☞ We will be thankful for information, from any one, in regard to occurrences of local interest.

Worth Knowing.

On Monday, Feb. 29th there will be a grand opening of a new and full assortment of Wall Paper at J. D. Robbins' Jewelry Store.

☞ "Ho, for Idaho," appears to be the "war cry" in every quarter. It is more than probable that all the gold (!) will be ho-ed out long before the criers get there.

☞ Soldiers and Officers in the army, being exposed to sudden changes, should always be supplied with "Brown's Bronchial Troches," as they give prompt relief in a Cold, Cough, or an Irritated Throat.

☞ New Books at Ketcham's—Miles O'Reilly, His Book, The Parlor Magician Diary of a Detective Police Officer, Webster Haynes' Speeches, Stephen the Prophet, Atlantic, Continental, Peterson and Godey's Magazines for March.

☞ The Saloon and Hotel keepers of Hudson have raised their prices for liquors and refreshments, and advertise their advanced sale in the Hudson papers. "Thirsty souls" going in that direction will take notice.

☞ Herick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus is far superior to super carbonate of soda, and may be used in the same manner, with cream tartar, and for all other purposes where soda is used. It is perfectly healthy, and requires less in quantity than any other saleratus, and you will never have any other. Grocers and Druggists sell it.

Corporation Election.

This election for the village of Tecumseh will be held at Union Hall, Monday, March 7th, next, for choosing the officers following: President, Recorder, Six Trustees, Two Assessors, Treasurer and Marshall. The Polls will open between the hours of nine and ten o'clock a. m. and close at three o'clock p. m.—Tecumseh, Mich. Feb. 23d, 1864.

E. B. WOOD, Village Recorder.

Special Township Meeting.

At a special town meeting held at Union Hall, on the 22d, for the purpose of determining by vote of the electors what sum, by loan, shall be raised in said township, as a fund to pay bounties to volunteers enlisted into the service of the United States to the credit of this township and and applied to our quota, under the last call of the President for men for the army, the following vote was cast:

For raising One Hundred Dollars to each Volunteer credited to Tecumseh under last call by loan,—YES—285.

For raising One Hundred Dollars to each Volunteer credited to Tecumseh under last call by loan,—NO—17.

Enlistment Returns.

The following is a report of all volunteers mustered into service, of the following towns, in the State, and credited from date of last draft to, January 31st, 1864, including the surplus over last draft:

☞ Of those little ones, that visited us some time since the Rochester Democrat says: Joseph Leffel is the smallest business man in the world, and indeed, quite an atom, as compared with General Tom Thumb, Mr. Leffel being only forty-four inches in height, and weighing but fifty-five pounds. Mr. Leffel is now thirty-two years of age. He is an intelligent, able bodied, handsome featured, man, and sports a moustache that would really do credit to the Scotch giant. He has filled the office of Supervisor in Springfield, and is regarded as one of the most public spirited citizens of that place. He is about to marry Miss Sarah E. Balton, who is smaller than Mrs. Thumb, and was formerly Dolly Dutton's maid of honor.

Shade Trees.

Last fall a special premium of $10 was offered by the Monroe County Agricultural Society to the person who would transplant and cause to take root the largest number of shade trees along the sides of the highways leading into Monroe City, and within a mile of the city lines. Also, another, of $5, to the person who should furnish the next largest number. It is now the right time of the year to prepare for ornamenting the streets with shade trees, and if proper encouragement could be given to farmers to set them along the sides of the highway across their farms, it would add much to their beauty and value—especially when the farms are contiguous to the village. Something like the above mentioned at Monroe might be a proper inducement to stimulate action.

In the Village the additional beauty and value given to the property thus adorned will doubtless produce a large increase of shade trees this coming spring and the Village Fathers would consult the future interests of the place by adopting a systematic ordinance on the width of side walks—fixing the proper distance from the lines of lots for setting trees; as it is now, each individual sets his trees according to his own fancy and usually about the centre of where the side walk will eventually be located. After a few years, when the trees are well grown they will be found to occupy the centre of the side walk and become nuisances instead of ornaments.

Word on Advertising

Discontinuing to advertise, says the Philadelphia Bulletin, is like taking down one's sign, it is a sort of intimation of retirement from business, and the public treat it as such. Or they regard it as evidence that something has gone wrong which requires privacy for investigation. Whatever construction may be put upon it, the result is disastrous. Now, we advise all our readers who may have fallen into the common error of the season, to come out of their holes, to put up their signs once more, and to advertise in as many papers as they did in the best of times. While business creates advertising, it is equally true that advertising creats business circles, and reminds people that they have no right to be leading drones' lives even though the times be dull. And even in the worst of times advertising pays well, and the more there is, the greater will be the circulation of money, and the sooner will be restored a condition of prosperity.

"SOME GARMENTS LEFT THEM AWKWARDLY AND UNPLEASANTLY IN PUBLIC PLACES."—This remark does not apply to those who are fortunate enough to have their garments made with sewing machines, taking what is called the double lock stitch, as is the case with the Weed Sewing Machine, which makes the stitch alike on both sides of the material, leaving no underside ridges to wear out by washing and ironing. These machines are meeting a want long expressed by the public, in their adaptness to all kinds of sewing that it is possible or practicable to do. Wherever sewing can be done, in muslin or even leather, they will do an amount of work that is truly astonishing. Strong in construction, yet so simple in mechanism as to be easily understood, they fully merit the reputation they have obtained, of being the best Sewing Machine ever invented. We do our friends a favor by referring them to the advertisement in regard to those machines.—Philadelphia Enquirer.

ROBACK'S OLD CATAWBA BRANDY is made from the PURE JUICE OF CATAWBA GRAPES, which is grown in abundance in Ohio and from which this article is obtained—it has an agreeable flavor, fine clear color, and possesses all the qualities for medicinal purposes, and for a beverage of the best imported brandies. As a flavoring for mince pies and other cooking purposes it is the best economical artical that can be used, being one half a dollar cheaper by the bottle, and nearly two dollars per gallon cheaper than other Brandies sold for that purpose. Wherever it has been introduced it has found rapid sales, and is daily gaining in popularity, giving in all cases the utmost satisfaction. Call for "Roback's Catawba Brandy," which may be found for sale by Druggists, Grocers and dealers generally throughout the West.

Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong;
Cutters fine, And all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight,
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

U. S. 5-20'S !

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as General Subscription Agent, will continue to supply the public

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has simple and unfailing resources in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenues, and in the issue of the Interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes, it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come, to seek a market for any either long or permanent Loans. The Interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking Association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money in their Funds, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach and advance to a handsome premium as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin: these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than that required in the payment of the interest on all the 5-20's and other permanent Loans. So that it is hoped that the surplus Coin in the Treasury, at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called 5-20 from the fact that while the Bonds may run for 20 years yet the Government has a right to pay them off in Gold at par, at any time after 5 years.

The Interest is paid half-yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50, $100, $500 and $1000; or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10,000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These 5-20's cannot be taxed by States, cities towns or counties, and the Government exempts them to only one and a half per cent. on the amount of income, when the income of the holder exceeds Six Hundred dollars per annum; all other investments, such as income from Mortgages, Railroad Stock and Bonds, etc, must pay from three to five per cent tax on the income.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds; and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay

Chancery Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, COUNTY OF LENAWEE, First Judicial District, In Chancery. Suit pending in the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee. In Chancery.

Helen Maria Montgomery, Complainant,
vs.
Henry Montgomery, Defendant.

At a session of the Circuit Court for the County of Lenawee, In chancery, held at the Circuit Court Room in the City of Adrian, on the 18th day of November 1863.—Present Hon. E. H. C. Wilson, Circuit Judge

It appearing in this cause by the affidavit of P. Bills that Henry Montgomery the above named defendant is not a resident of this State but is a resident of Indiana one of the United States, and that a subpoena in this cause cannot be served on him by reason of his absence from this State.

On motion of Bills & Baxter, solicitors for complainant, it is ordered that said defendant cause his appearance to be entered in this cause, and notice thereof to be served on complainant's solicitors within three months from the date hereof, and in case of his appearance, he cause his answer to the complainants bill to be filed, and a copy thereof to be served on the complainants solicitors within twenty days after service of a copy of said bill on him, or that said bill be taken as confessed against him.

And it is further ordered that within twenty days from the date hereof, the complainant cause a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper published in the village of Tecumseh in Lenawee County, and that said publication be continued in said paper at least once in each week for six successive weeks, or that said complainant cause a copy thereof to be personally served on said defendant Henry Montgomery at least twenty days before the time prescribed for his appearance.

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,
EDWARD GWINELL,
MERCY GWINELL.

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Are Unequaled

for curing

Scrofula,	Syphilis,
Skin Diseases,	Old Sores,
Salt Rheum,	Rheumatism,
Dyspepsia,	Sick Headache,
Liver Complaint,	Fever and Ague,
Leucorrhœa,	Female Complaints
Erysipelas,	St. Anthony's Fire,
Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

hich, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

Ask your neighbors, who have used them and they will say they are

Good Medicines,

and you should try them before going for a physician.

Get a Pamphlet or Almanac of my local agent, and read the certificates, and if you have ever doubted you will

Doubt no more.

As a proof that the Blood Purifier and Pills are purely vegetable, I have the certificates of those eminent chemists, Professors Chilton of N. Y., and Locke of Cincinnati

Are the only known remedy that will successfully and invariably restore and regulate the female system, removing all irregularities, and producing health, vigor and strength.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are a fluid preparation, the only one of the kind ever discovered in this country, and acts directly on the parts affected, whilst pills and powders can only reach them as they work through sympathy, but not at all direct and positive.

Are you suffering from a constant anxiety for the regular return of nature's prescribed laws?

Give yourself no uneasiness, for Lyon's Periodical Drops, if taken a day or two before the expected period, will positively and invariably regulate its coming, as sure as effect follows cause, as certain as daylight follows darkness.

Are you sick, enfeebled by disease, or unable to bear the labor and danger of increase?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Come to you as a blessing, for is not prevention better than cure?

If regularly taken, it is a certain preventive, and will save you much peril and many hours of suffering.

Have you been afflicted for many years with complaints incident to the sex, that have baffled the skill of physicians, and are hurrying you on to an early grave?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are the most reliable regulator ever known, and cure, like magic, all those irregularities that have defied the doctor's skill.

Will you waste away with suffering from Leucorrhœa, Prolapsus, Dysmenorrhœa, and a thousand other difficulties, all summed up under the name of suppressed and obstructed nature, when an investment of one dollar in

will surely save you?

Do not use the drops when forbidden in the directions, for although a positive cure, and harmless at all other times, they are so powerful and finely calculated to adjust and govern the functions of the sexual organism, that, if taken at improper times, they would produce results contrary to nature, against which all, particularly those who would reproduce, should carefully guard.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Cannot harm the most delicate constitution at any time; yet the proprietors wish to guard against its misuse, hoping that a thousand bottles will be used for a good purpose where one is used for an illegitimate one.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS.

the never-failing Female Regulator, is for sale by every Druggist, in both city and country, and do not, if you value your health and wish for a reliable medicine, buy any other. Take no other; but if the Druggist to whom you apply has not got it, make him send and procure it for you.

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the absorbents into healthy action, by which the WATER OR CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITZ, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which Helmbold's extract buchu invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Shadows and Sunshine.

Out of the Sunlight, into the Shade,
Move without murmuring, unafraid;
He, who leads thee thither,
Knows what flowers would wither
Earliest underneath the ray
Of intensely glorious day.
Not from ridges hilly
Riseth Hope's white lilly:
Glades, where runnels wind and turn,
Oftenest shelter Faith's low fern;
And Love's moss hath greener tint
Where the Day-beams rarely glint.
Then, since gentle Christian graces
Blossom best in shadowy places,
Grieve not if thy course be laid
Out of the sunlight—into the shade.

Out of the Shadow—into the Sun,
Changes the call, when growth is won:
And no fear, lest blossoms' wither,
Clouds the Angel's host—'Come hither.'
Faith and Hope and Love blaze soon,
All unharmed in Heaven's broad noon.
God's own glory blending,
There his grace unending
Streams in radiance, soft as dew,
On souls that tribulation knew;
Those, in cave and dungeon's night,
Struggled ere they soared to light.
Yet a little space, and thou,
Shivering in the gloaming now,
Wilt behold their martyr faces,
Share their peace in heavenly places,
And pass forever—with Christ made one—
Out of the Shadow—into the Sun!

The New Year and the Old.

BY B. L. BAXTER, ESQ.

Another Year is dead.—
Gone to the unreturning past;
And leaves us, standing in its stead.
A New Year, like the last.
And yet, who knoweth that the year to be,
Shall liken that gone to eternity?

Nor you, nor I can tell.
What it may bring, or fall to bring,
If sorrow's gloom, or pleasure's spell,
Shall gild, or cloud, its wing;
Yet this we know, and this can surely tell,
His ruleth it "who doeth all things well."

The past year hath its wail,
(Muffled, indeed, with hope and trust in God)
As on the mountain top, or in the vale,
Where'er we turn, we see the burial sod
Of those who, in their country's hour of need,
Failed not, in her defence to bleed,
And die—and dust to dust,
Is all that now remaineth here on earth.
To them the year, and died for, all the earth
That future years should vindicate their worth,
Nor shall they fail it, that appeal sublime
To the sure verdict of undying Time.

Like those old heroes of Thermopylæ,
And Marathon—like Wallace, Bruce and Tell,
The domigods of ages shall they be;
And consecrate the ground whereon they fell:—
And the proud pages of our country's fame,
Shall brighten, as their children speak their name.

But to the traitor—woe!
Or north or south—for it is all the same,
A traitor still, and still his country's foe,
Whate'er his lineage, or whate'er his name.
It matters not to freedom's sacred cause,—
A rebel still in soul, and base at heart;
A craven foe—who loves, yet dare not stand
Among his country's foes, and take a foeman's part.

Leave, him, to Time,
That fearful Nemesis of human life,
The record of their infamy and crime,
Their devious part in that unholy strife
Which, causeless, gaunt Rebellion's gory hands
Have raised and waged against the very throne
And altar stones of freedom, in all lands,
And for all time—and not for ours alone.

Their memory shall rot,—
And the foul heritage shall still descend
Unto their children's children, unforgot,
But loathed, abhorred, despised, and hated to the end.
Of better far to meet a felon's doom,
Than bury all your love, in such a tomb!

But for the year to come.—
We hail its hopes, and heritage, and trust
To shout its soldiers, as its harvests, home:
And that our brethren, (soiled with toil and dust,
War's fearful work and carnage, waste and wear,
And labors o'er, its glorious victories won,
Shall come again our homes and hearts to share,
And all the land rejoice that freedom's work is done.

"God and the Right," they said,
These stern old heroes, in our fathers day,
And He of old, who led
His chosen people on their devious way,
Through wilderness and waste, hath led us too,
Through a Red-Sea of carnage, though it be,
And he will lead us, if we prove but true
To Him, and His, to Peace and Victory.

The world moves on—
Tyrants and thrones may plot
Against God's lowly and rejected one,
And strive his memory from the earth to blot;
But they shall crumble, ere His word shall fail,
And perish, ere the least of all His care
Shall lack what He bestoweth—when the wail
Of the oppressed, goes up to Him—beware,
God is His own Avenger, everywhere.

Tecumseh, Jan. 1st. 1864.

Paul Cleve's Captivity.

The September sun being low in the West, along the Virginia pine thickets, blue shadows were beginning to tremble and the level rays tipped with gold the tall chimneys of the "old place," shining full on the China roses, whose scarlet blossoms hung over the porch like clusters of jewels, seeming actually to light up the blue, green gloom of the solemn cedars on the lawn.

Within, the twilight was already contesting the domain of that wide stone-floored hall, with the orange glow of sunset. An old mahogany arm-chair, carved quaintly, and cushioned with dark-green leather, stood beside the chimney-piece, and directly in front of the window lay a spotted tiger-skin, full of strange Eastern associations; for old Harvey Milner had been a traveler in his younger days—and this bizarre rug suited his taste.

Now, however, its velvet softness bore the unwonted burden of a human body stretched motionless, with a white, blood streaked face, with the tarnished uniform of a Federal officer. The features were straight and regular, the brows arched with delicate precision, and the jet black hair that fell over the forehead was matted together with congealed blood from some hidden wound, and amid those dark curls the crimson stream made its slow way, drop by drop There he lay, the near presence of death investing his face with marvelous, still beauty, amid strangers in a strange land.

Close behind him, knelt on one knee, the young confederate Lieutenant, his finger on the almost motionless pulse, while old Harvey Milner stood before the group with a Brutus sternness in his cold, blue eyes, and Mrs. Milner and her daughter were busying themselves with trembling haste among the linen bandages and rolls of lint.

"Albert," said the old man gravely, "was this well?" Have you forgotten the watchword—"Death to the invaders?"

"I could not help it, sir," said the young man, raising to his feet. "I know that I deserve your blame. I know I've been a soft-hearted fool, and yet—there is no use of denying it—I should do the same thing over again under the same circumstances. Hang it! a man isn't made of iron, to see a fellow creature in such a sore strait, and never lift a finger to his aid."

"I suspect he would have no scruples in making way with you, had 'circumstances,' as you call them, been reversed."

"Faith, sir! he came pretty near it in his desperate struggle to escape. If it hadn't been that, the right moment, I should have been down among the pines with his pistol ball through my brain!"

Harvey Milner's brow grew black.

"Why did you not dispatch him then and there?"

"Father, I could not! When he fell from his horse and lay there among the bushes, his face was so like our Harold's, as I saw it on the field of Antietam. He looked at me with Harold's eyes, and then swooned away. Father, I could not have harmed him was it to save my own life!"

"Wrong, wrong, Albert!" said the old man, shaking his head gravely. "However, it is over and done, and now our duty remains to deliver him over to justice."

The tears were dropping fast upon the dark hair from which the Southern matron was sponging away the coagulated clots of gore. She looked through their dim sparkles into her husband's face.

"Harvey, the poor boy is dying! He will soon be beyond the reach of any earthly tribunals—let him die in peace!"

"Was it not such as he that murdered Harold?" asked the old man, sternly. "Is it not such as he that comes to rob us of our hearts and homes?"

"I know it—I know it," sobbed the wife, but, father, if my boy had been carried to a Northern hearthstone—"

Even as she spoke the eyelashes quivered, the eyes were opened, and the word—"Mother!"

"He, too, has a mother!" sobbed Mrs. Milner. "Should I wish her heart to break as mine has been broken! Oh, Harvey, do nothing rashly!"

"For Harold's sake, father!" whispered the girl in black, whose hand lay on his shoulder.

And then it was that the ebbing torrent of Paul Cleve's being was turned back into the channel of life once again.

"How is he now, Becky?" asked Mr. Milner, as an old black woman, whose wrinkled face contrasted odly with the brilliant colors of her madras turban, passed through the hall carrying a bowl of cooling drink.

"Reckon he's better, mars; dat's a drefful cut on his head though. Laws mars!" she added with a chuckle, "nebber s'posed I should be nussin' up a rale abolitioner."

"Nonsense!" said Milner, shortly. "Is he delirious?"

"Talks a heap of nonsense 'bout Hampshire—'deed he does mars?" Sometimes I can't hardly hold him when he thinks he is fighting rebels. Miss Milly's sponging his head now—don't seem to hurt him so bad when she does it. Miss Milly's dreffully soft-fingered!"

And Aunt Beckey waded complacently up stairs to resume her charge.

The sun was sitting its golden vain through a net work of jassamine leaves into Paul Cleve's room, two or three weeks afterward, when Harvey Milner came up stairs to pay the invalid a visit.

"Better, eh?" said he, good humoredly.

"Very much better," said the young man, with a smile. "Indeed, I think I shall try to get up to-morrow."

"Eh? What?" And the next thing you'll be deserting!"

Paul Cleve smiled again. "I give you fair warning, sir, that I shall escape the first chance I get, since you will not consent to let me go on other terms. My country needs me now more than she ever did before."

"The duce she does! On my word you are a cool hand, young sir. If this is the state of affairs, I may as well tell you that I shall send you on to Richmond as a prisoner, the very first day you are able to travel."

"You shall sir?"

"Yes, most certainly. And let me assure you, young man, that you are engaged in a cause, which will never prosper—an unrighteous cause, sir—a cause of iniquity, Mr. Cleve. And I think myself fully justified in using any means to overthrow that cause. I don't wish to be inhospitable, but my roof shall not shelter a federal officer any longer than is absolutely necessary. The air you breathe is a pollution to a Southern home." Paul Cleve was silent, and Harvey Milner after vainly waiting for an answer, banged the door to, and went down stairs in a towering passion.

"Griffiths!" he shouted, to a gray haired old negro, who was basking in the mellow sunshine that flooded the piazza steps.

"Sah!"

"Your duty to watch the door, let no one pass through without my knowledge—least of all this Yankee up stairs. I was a fool ever to let him cross the threshold."

"Yes sah," grunted Griffiths, slowly gathering himself up; does I begin now?"

"Now this minute! I shall order Sam to take the night watch; the young rascal threatens me with escape. I'll see about that."

It was late in the evening as he sat before the door somewhat calmed in temper, that his thoughts began to take a new direction; was not persuasion more efficacious than force? At that instant his daughter's light step crossed the hall.

"Is that you, Milured?"

"Yes, papa."

"Didn't I hear you reading the Enquirer to that—that young Cleve, a while ago?"

"Yes, papa."

"That's right my dear. Does he seem inclined to talk politics?"

"Yes, papa, I think he does."

"And—ahem! does he take a sensible view of matters?"

"Very sensible, papa."

"Milly, it would be a very fine thing if we would convert him to our way of thinking. He has a very excellent idea of military strategies, and would be a great acquisition to our cause. Suppose you try, my love? I am told he is a person of consequence in the federal army; it would be quite a triumph, eh? Now run up strairs, puss and do your best. I regard it as a duty to avail ourselves of every possible advantage in this matter, I've observed that you have a good deal of influence over him—use it as a Southern maiden should, in behalf of our cause!"

The color had mounted to Mildred's cheek in crimson waves; but Harvey Milner was not quick to observe such things, and when he looked up for an answer she was gone.

"It would be a capital thing—capital—if we could make a Southerner of him," repeated the old man. "Better than sending him to Richmond. I'll think the matter over before I take any immediate steps.

* * * * * * *

"Wonder what mars does s'pose a nigger's made of?" growled Sam, as he sat bowed up under the huge pine tree that waved like a sentinel over the "Old Palace gate." Setin yere in the dew, sneezin like all creation, a watchin' arter nobody. Who's gwine to 'scape, eh?"—And Sam sniffled scornfully. "Dis moon light is drefful sleepfyin', and if I'se asleep I don't see no gosstesses! Dar—de stones serve mighty well for a pillar; I s'pose I'll have the rheumatis and serve old mars right!"

"Hist! what was that light footstep on the lawn? Sam started up, his wool standing fairly erect with terror.

"Laws, Miss Milly, is it only you! what a skeer you give me."

"Only me, Sam. Have you really got to stay here all night? What a pity, and you so weakly, too. It's a shame I declare."

"'Deed it is, Miss," whined Sam, fully appreciating the sense of his sufferings.

"I've brought you a bowl of nice hot coffee, Sam. Coffee is excellent to keep off the rheumatism."

"Thank you, Miss—mighty kind. I will swallow it afore it gets cold, if you say so. I'se so powerful 'bleeged to you, Miss."

"You see, Sam, laughed Mildred, "Katy was so anxious about you, and she didn't like to come herself, lest you should get conceited. Girls are fanciful, you know, so I came instead, just to ease her mind."

Sam broke into a broad grin as his young mistress tripped away with the empty bowl.

"Law! I didn't s'pose Katy cared a straw for me," he muttered. "Won't Jake be roarin mad when he hears on't."

And Sam coiled himself up to resume his night watch.

Slowly the song of the whip-poor-will lulled into a sort of a monotone—slowly the dark outline of the trees against the starry sky blurred into dimness. Sam knew he was going to sleep—he felt the dimness enwrapping him a la Sancho Panza, in a blanket, yet sense and volition were alike powerless against the sominolent influence. Before the midnight constellations had taken their places in the meridian, Sam was drifting hopelessly through the mazes of dreamland. * *

"Safe, dearest, safe at last.

Pale and weak, Paul Cleve sat in the woods, exult against the breeze, yet jubilant.

"My own love, how shall I ever reward you for leaving home and friends to share my fate? If a life's devotion and tenderness can avail, believe me it shall not be wanting!"

And Mildred's heart answered, "It is well!"

* * * * * * *

"Gone!" shrieked Harvey Milner.—"Woman you lie!"

"I'm tellin' de trufe, mars, sure's I live and breath," ejaculated terrified Becky. "He's clean gone, and der's nuffin on his table but dis here bit 'ob paper."

Harvey Milner torn open the note with hands that trembled almost beyond control, and read these few words:

"I gave you warning that I should embrace the first opportunity to escape, and I have done so. Moreover, as I have succeeded in convincing your daughter of the truth and justice of our cause, she has consented to adopt my nation, and share my fortunes as my wife. P. C."

The note dropped from Harvey Milner's paralyzed fingers, and he felt that he had been out-generaled.

"To think of my son-in-law leading a Yankee regiment," he groaned. "But there is the right metal about the fellow. He'd have been a credit to our side, if I could have made a good Southerner of him?"

"If." Alas! how many ifs there are in this world.

And thus it was that Paul Cleve's captivity began and ended.

COLT'S ARMORY.—It has been decided by the Colt Patent Arms Company to rebuild the factory as soon as possible.—They have a million dollars of the capital still unimpaired, and will go at the work at once. Mrs. Colt, who owns a large share of the stock, expresses her determination to have the factory rebuilt just as her husband left it. In this view she is sustained by Mr. Samuel Colt, and indeed by all the holders of the stock. It is stated that as soon as the news by telegraph reached New York that Colt's pistol factory was in flames, dealers generally started off on a speculating tour. One merchant would walk into a rival establishment, and innocently propose to purchase his stock of Colt's revolvers, as he wanted them immediately to fill an order! If the holder had got the news of the disaster, he of course was sharp enough to hold on to his pistols and await the advance sure to follow. Some of the early birds secured large lots of these goods before the building was thoroughly destroyed.

☞ Horce Mann very beautifully remarked that a brother's tender relation to a sister was designed by Heaven as a preparation and a prophecy of that holier relation for which one shall forsake father and mother, and brother and sister.

Success in Business.

It has been said that competition is the life of business. It could be said, with far more truth, that Advertising is the life of business. In this age of steam and telegraphs, which has been aptly called the golden age of the world's history, he who does not advertise is behind the times. Advertising has assumed the dignity of a science, and it has become almost an axiomatic fact that the business man who advertises most succeeds the best, and makes the largest number of customers. In no other way can the buyer or seller be brought together so easily or so quickly as by advertising. The old-fashioned way of doing business is going out of vogue. Competition is springing up on every side, and sharp, shrewd, practical business men see their way to independence and fortune sooner by a judicious and liberal system of advertising than by any other route. Many are availing themselves of its benefits. The mercantile business has in this respect undergone an entire revolution during the past quarter of a century. Trade in former times was only built up by years of plodding effort. Daily papers were few and far between, and a man became known to his customers, and increased their circle only by a long period of steady, persistent application. Now, as it were, fortunes are made in a day. In order to be successful in this fast age, the business man must advertise. If he has wares to sell, he must get the fact before the people, for they are his customers.

We are a reading people—athirst for lessly as the hart—increasing. The citizen as he sits by his fireside and sips his morning coffee, reads what transpired on the previous day in San Francisco or the great seaboard cities. He can look out from beyond his local sphere, and even feel the great throb of the world's pulse as it beats in its onward course. Side by side with the telegraphic news of the movements of contending armies, he can read the announcements in the advertisements of this firm or of that one, in relation to the goods and wares they have to sell, the inducements they offer to customers, and it is not without its influence—oftentimes it may be unseen and unfelt—yet it carries with it a power, a potency that in the end is irresistible.—The name of the advertiser soon becomes as familiar as a household word. As day after day his goods and his name go before the public, customers flock to his counters until he absorbs the trade of his slow-coach neighbores, and his fortune is made.

Very many of the largest fortunes in the country were made by advertising—Everybody has heard of Spaulding's prepared glue, a simple mixture of glue and acid, yet by exclusive advertising, its proprietor, in two or three years, made a princely fortune, and now lives in a splendid country seat on the Hudson. He advertised this article to the extent of over $200,000 in a single year. A few years ago Dr. Ayer, then a druggist in Lowell, compounded and commenced the sale of Ayer's cherry pectoral and cathartic pills. Now, as the result of advertising, he is a millionaire, and his preparations have a reputation that is world-wide. The same may be said of Dr. Brandreth, who is a gentleman of vast wealth and resides in a palatial mansion at Sing-Sing. It is within the memory of his neighbors when he manufactured his own pills, without assistance, and peddled them about the country. His vast wealth and extensive business, were only acquired by advertising. Benner, of the New York Ledger, owes his large fortune and the extensive circulation of his paper to liberal and systematic advertising. Some years he spent $40,000 to $50,000 on advertising and it paid a two-fold return. Less than 20 years ago Dr. Herrick of patent kid plaster and sugar-coated pill noteriety, was an obscure country physician near Albany, N. Y. The moment he began to scatter his advertisements broadcast in all the newspapers in the land he became rich, and is to-day one of the most successful business men of the city where he resides. We might cite example after example of this character, but suffice it to say, the surest road to business success is by the aid of the newspapers. Our citizens may learn something from the above. In this day of sharp business competition when every man is striving to be foremost in the race for success, for wealth, the most expeditious way for the business man to obtain it, is, we repeat, by advertising. The newspaper is the touchstone, the talisman that insures it. If you have a house or a farm to sell, advertise. If you have merchandise to sell, advertise; in fact, if you want customers, let the people know it through the medium of your home Journals and you will have them.

Drifting Away.

It is deeply interesting to any one given to reflection upon the causes and tendencies of passing event, to see how the two great parties that have so long controlled and pretty evenly divided this great people, are slowly drifting away out of all sight of their ancient land marks.

Propositions, that before Sumter was fired upon would have startled and alarmed even the most ultra of the most ultra party, (if any body can tell which that is,) are now calmly accepted by all as fixed and irreversible facts. It is not a party conclusion, brought about by party violence and special pleading; but that certain conviction brought about by the stern logic of events.

It may be a conviction in conflict with old party prejudices, and old party interests; but there it stands in bold relief, a fixed fact, challenging assault, and crushing all opposition; and all we can do is, as gracefully as possible to yield to it.

And the extent to which this is all the time being done, is no where more marked than in the present tone of the opposition to the government in Congress. At the first rampant and more than half treasonable, it is a matter of congratulation to the whole country to see that it has of late toned itself down to that simple expression of its preference for men and measures, which it is the undoubted right of every one to both entertain and express.

The old factious opposition to the government, and that simply because it had been placed by the people, under the control of an oposing political party to the extent of attempting to withhold from it means, and embarrass its military movements, in time of a rebellion of such proportion as to threaten every northern home, was of a most dangerous character, and if successful must have resulted in just as certain pecuniary ruin to those supporting, as to those opposing it.

This kind of opposition there has been from the beginning a consciousness that it had no definite positive principle which was consistent with genuine loyalty. Sophisticate as we may it is, and has all along been, perfectly certain that this rebellioncan be overcome by war only, and that war, to be successful, must have the use of all the war powers, war means and war resources of the government, and that to attempt really to withhold these from the Administration in power, in time of war, could not only be regarded as little short or as large as treason, but as certainly ruinous to the people as any set of men who should attempt to carry it out.

And in consistency with this conviction, as well as from the impulses of a pure and lofty patriotism, overlooking all merely party considerations in such a time as this, the war democrats of the whole North have from the first utterly refused to have anything to do with such a programme at one time sought by some of the more unscrupulous to be imposed upon them. The people honor them for this; nor have they been slow, whenever the opportunity has occurred, to show by their suffrages their true appreciation of it.

The extent to which men's minds have been led along without, and almost against, their will may be seen in the fact that one week ago last Monday the following Resolutions offered by Mr. Schenk, of Ohio, were unanimously adopted by the House of Representatives at Washington:

"Resolved, That the present war against the armed insurgents, banded under the name of the Southern Confederacy, was brought on by a wicked and wholly inexcusable rebellion, and all those engaged in, or aiding and abetting it, have incurred the name of public enemies, and should be treated as such.

"Resolved, That in the struggle now going on for the safety of the country and free government, there is no middle ground upon which any good citizen or true patriot can stand; neutrality, or indifference, or anything short of a hearty support of the Government being a crime, when the question is between loyalty and treason."

Whereas similar Resolutions offerred by Mr. Green Clay Smith, of Kentucky, in the beginning of the session, was met and opposed by some sixty four votes.

There is, therefore, a consolation in knowing and feeling that, while all our partisans, both democratic and republican, are thus slowly drifting away from their former land marks and issues, they are all alike drifting in a safe direction, towards an uncompromising common support of our noble government, which has heretofore made us, and if properly valued and sustained, shall yet continue to make us the freest and happiest people upon the globe.

The Michigan State Insurance Company.

This company has been in successful operation in the city nearly five years, during which time its business has been large and prosperous.

The well known character of its officers and directors for prompt and honorable dealing, as well as for financial ability, has everywhere inspired confidence in the company; and the manner in which it has adjusted and paid nearly thirty losses has earned for it a reputation of which its friends and patrons may feel justly proud.

We are assured that on all these losses, the average time from the date of loss to the date of payment is less than one week; that during the last month it sustained four losses, two of which were more than 200 miles from this city and all of which were paid within three days after notice of the loss was received.

But in order to secure a still stronger hold on the public confidence, the directors have recently procured an amendment to their charter making it purely a stock company, with a paid up, cash capital of $100,000. Preparatory to the accomplishment of this object, and pursuant to the Statute, the Secretary appointed our well known citizens, W. L. Greenly, T. D. Ramsdell, and E. P. Andrews, commissioners, to examine the capital and securities of the company, and report to him, on oath, the result of each examination.

We subjoin a copy of that report as an evidence, conclusive, that the company is what it purports to be—a stock company with a full paid up cash capital, and being the only one that pretends to have a cash capital, and having already earned a reputation not surpassed, if equaled, by any other company, it has, in our opinion, strong claims on the people of this State for their patronage and support.

State pride, if nothing else, should induce our people to patronize a Home Company and security and idemnity against loss will certainly prompt all business men to patronize one they know to be responsible and able to fulfil its obligations, in preference to one which has no capital, and no means whatever for reliance except the tedious, uncertain and vexatious collection of assessments from unwilling members.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, COUNTY OF LENAWEE, SS:—The undersigned, William L. Greenly, Thomas D. Ramsdell and Edwin P. Andrews, specially appointed by the Hon., the Secretary of the State of Michigan aforesaid to make an examination, of the capital and securities of the Michigan State Insurance Company, and to certify on oath the result of such examination pursuant to section nine of the act entitled "an act for the incorporation of insurance companies, and defining their powers and duties" approved Feb. 15, 1859—respectfully report:

That, on the 19th day of Febuary A. D. 1864, we attended at the office of said company at the city of Adrian in said county, and made an examination of the capital and securities of said company, and we do certify, as the result of such examination, that the sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars capital has been paid into said company, and that said company is possessed of the said sum of One Hundred Thousand Dollars in money and stocks as required by the sixth section of said act. All of which is respectfully submitted.

THE ATTACK ON THE CHICAGO TIMES OFFICE.—About 9 o'clock on Saturday evening, two soldiers and a cavalier youth entered the business office of the secesh Times. The youth asked for a copy of the paper, which was given him, when one of the soldiers snatched it from his hand and commenced to tear it up, using language the reverse of complimentary to the editor of the Times. Mr. Storey came along at this juncture, and the soldier threw the paper at him, striking his hat. Mr. Storey asked who had done it, and was answered to the effect that the soldiers intended to clean out the office. A grapple ensued, in the course of which the soldier found himself on the sidewalk, his two companions not interfering. Two of the large panes of glass were broken in the struggle. A police officer was sent for, but the soldier had departed before his arrival. This is believed to be a plain statement of the facts in the case. It is not probable that any special significance is to be attached to the jracas, as the soldier was stated to have been partially intoxicated. This being the case, it calls for no comment.

MEXICAN AFFAIRS.—Advices from Mexico to the 15th, and from Vera Cruz to the 20th, state that no military movements of importance had taken place. A Zacatecas, which the previous news stated was on the point of being occupied by the French, was still in possession of the Juaristas. Lnarez was at Saltillo on the 9th ult., where he was honored with a public reception. On the night of the 19th a large fire occurred at Vera Cruz, and a large quantity of French quartermaster and commissary supplies were destroyed. The people of Vera Cruz had celebrated a second time the acceptance by Maximillian of the Mexican empire.

The News

Monday, March, 7th.

Kilpatrick has reached the lines of Gen. Butler, having penetrated to the outer fortifications of Richmond, where he had a spirited engagement with the enemy, but found him too strong. He destroyed the canal and mills on James River, and much other property. His loss did not exceed 150 men. He destroyed on the route miles of the two lines of railroad over which Lee has been receiving the supplies for his army. He captured 300 prisoners, and took many horses. A large number of negroes availed themselves of the opportunity to come within our lines. Kilpatrick camped within three miles of Richmond, and both Generals Lee and Wise had a narrow escape from capture.

Advices from New Orleans to the Feb. 27th are received. Port Powell is still being bombarded by our fleet. A large number of troops are being sent from New Orleans to co opered with Farragus. A rebel gunboat, said to be more formidable than the Merrimac, is expected to attack Farragut's fleet. It was thought Fort Powell could not hold out much longer.

Intelligence from Knoxville states that Longstreet is shipping all his wagon trains to Richmond and mounting his men upon the horses thus released.

Fears are entertained of a raid py Morgan on our railroad communicotions between Nashville and Chattanooga.

McPherson's corps arrived at Jackson on the 9th of February. Sherman is still in the interior.

There are rumors afloat in Washington to the effect teat Gen. Meade will be compelled to resign the command of the Army of the Potomac. Generals Hooker and Smith are named as his successor.

An extensive fire occured in Boston on Saturday, destroyed property to the amount of $270,000.

A Washington telegram states that the movement of Farragut on Wobile was only a feint to make a diversion in favor of Sherman.

On Friday, the noted guerrilla chief, Col. Richardson, recently captured in Kentucky, was shot dead in attempting to escape.

Gen. Grant has arrived at Louisville, en route for Washington.

Gen. Meade has been called to Washington, before the Congressional Committee on the Conduct of the War, to answer to the charges of Gens. Sickles and Doubleday concerning his conduct of the battle of Gettysburg.

Secretary Chase recommends a tax of $1 per gallon on spirits, and 50 cents per pound on leaf and manufactured tobacco.

By information received at Washington from Gen. Sherman's expedition, it appears that the movements toward Mobile were only feints to cover other designs.

Tuesday, March, 8th.

Later advices from Florida state that Gen. Seymou's position is now favorable, and that he is receiving reinforcements. Gen. Gilmore had arrived at Jacksonville. The Committee on the Conduct of the War are soon to investigate the causes of the recent disaster. Gen. Seymour has been sent for, and Mr. Hay will also be examined.

A rumor is prevalent at Memphis—and is said to be credited in military circles—that General Sherman has returned to Vicksburg.

A gang of guerrillas broke up an election in Hickman county, Tennessee, on Saturday last, destroying boxes, ballots etc.

By the steamer City of New York we have European news to the 24th and 25th. In the House of Commons the British Government has been denounced for its action in detaining the rebel rams, but a motion for the correspondence that had taken place on the subject was voted down by a handsone majority, which gratifying endorsement of the action of the authorities was received with cheers.—The absurd rumors come again of the contemplated recognition of the Southern Confederacy by England and France.—Another conference on the Danish question had been suggested by England, and is said to have been responded to favorably.

NEW YORK, 6.—Richmond papers of the 1st and 2d, are received. They admit that Kilpatrick penetrated within three miles of the city, and relate how narrowly Gen. Lee escaped capture.—Gen. Wise, also had a narrow escape, being at the residence of the rebel Secretary of War, from whence he reached the city.

Four hundred more of our prisoners were shipped Feb. 29th, for Americus, Georgia; nearly 3,000 have thus far been sent. There are accommodation for 6,000.

Forty-six miles of the Mobile and Ohio Roilroad were destroyed by Gen. Sherman. The Southern road was also destroyed from Meridian and Jackson, and 800 negroes were carried off.

Rebel accounts of the battle at Oulestee, Florida, show that their force consisted of 11 regiments of infantry, four battallions of cavalry, and three battallions of artillery. Their loss was 300 killed and wounded.

Scraps of News.

—Oil continues to flow from Mr. Cady's oil spring at Albion. An agent of eastern company, who has recently purchased a tract of one hundred and twenty-seven acres of land at Albion, while making investigations at Mr. Cady's cellar, dipped all the oil and water from the well, leaving it perfectly dry. It was then left undisturbed for an hour, when, on dipping again, he procured a gallon of nearly pure oil.

—The Sturgis murder trial commenced on Tuesday last at Centreville, St Joseph county. Great difficulty was experienced in securing a jury, and the Sheriff was obliged to scour the country to find men who had not formed an opinion on the case. The case was still in progress on Saturday.

—The people of Paw Paw are becoming excited over the petroleum question. One well has been opened to a depth of six feet, which developed a flow of water strongly impregnated with a Kerosene oder. The opinion is expressed that the valley of the Paw Paw is the point where the bitumen of our best coal fields exudes.

—The town of Buchanan, located on the Michigan Cental Railroad, 200 miles west of Detroit, contains 1,500 inhabitants, and according to the Voice of the West, has five chapels, in which Presbyterians, United Brethren, Disciples, Methodists and Adventists respectively worship. It is one of the orderly and moral vilages in the west. The location is healthy. The schools are good. The inhabitants are enterprising and industrious, and altogether it is one of the most inviting towns in this part of the west.

—A new "wrinkle" in the gas business is an attachment of a small marine clock to street lamps, whereby the gas is turned off at precisely the moment desired. An arrangements, of this kind is being tried in Springfield Mass.

—The receipts of the Buffallo Sanitary Fair, just closed, amounted to $30,000.—The receipts of the Cleveland (Ohio) Sanitary Fair, for the first week, were $60,000. The latter fair is to be continued through the present week.

—Stoves made of soapstone have been introduced at Quebec. They are said to throw out a mellower and more uniform heat than iron. The material of which they are made is very abundant in the mineral region south of the St. Lawrence.

—A few days since an Irishmen went to see the gorilla in the cabinet of Amherst College. Not knowing the diference between that animal and the guerrilla, he remarked on seeing it, "Good God! if they have got such soldiers as that off South, I ain't going to war."

—A movement is on foot in Boston to establish a line of screw steamers between that port and Liverpool.

—The leading hotels in New York have advanced their prices for board to $3 50 per day.

—Large contributions have been made in Philadelphia for the relief of the suffering loyalists of East Tennessee.

—The Northern Ohio Sanitary Fair, which opened on the 2d instant, promised to add at least seventy-five thousand dollars to the treasure of the commission.

—The number of Poles who havh died on the field of battle, or been executed during the present insurrection, amounts to twelve thousand, and of those who have been banished, eight thousand.

—The rebel Congress have passed a law which have been approved by the rebel President, prohibiting, under heavy penalties, the exporting of cotton, tobacco naval and military stores.

—The Minnesota Senate has passed a bill increasing the salaty of the Governor of that state from $1,400 to $2,000.—The sum of $500 has been appropriated for the person who killed Little Crow, the Sioux chief.

—General Wild, commanding at Norfolk Va., has directed the churches of that city to be opened and the pulpits filled by loyal preachers. Colored soldiers must be admitted to the churches the same as others, and any insults or indignity will be punished.

—The Chamber of Commerce of St. Paul, Minn., have addressed a memorial to President Lincoln, representing that a line of millicary posts from the western boundary of Minn to the gold fields of Idaho is imperatively necessary, and should be at once established.

—The fire at Gloucester, Mass., destroyed one hundred and three buildings. It is thought that full one half of the aggregate loss, estimated at $350,000, is coveren by insurance. The timely generosity extended to the sufferers will probably obviate the necessity of a general subscription. Many contributions have already been made.

—Austin B. Willians, born at Exeter, N. H., and for tde last 12 years employed as a printer upon the New York Times, died at New York, on Sunday, at the age of 31. Mr. Williams weighed 420 pounds, required 17 yards of broadcloth for a suit of clothes, never wore an overcoat, never used tobacco or ardent spirits, and was a stranger to many vices tnat men, since Adam's fall, have been adicted to.

—A woman at Johnstown, N. Y., foretold the time of her decease, made all her preparations for that event, did a days's work at washing and baking, took her clothes and hung them away, saying she should never need them again, and next morning was found dead in her bed.

—All children born in Ireland after January 1, 1864, are to be vaccinated within six months of their birthe. For non-compliance with this regulation parents and guardians are liable to a fine of ten shilings.

The Wine Plant.

The cultivation of this plant, and the manufacture of Wine from it, has engaged the attention of the citizens of some counties to a great extent, within the past year. The great profit to be derived from the investment of the capital and labor required, and the pleasantness and medicinal qualities of the beverage itself, have induced many to embark in the enterprise, and none, so far as we know, have yet been disappointed in their expectations. Read the following testimonials:

KINGSVILLE, March, 2, 1864.

To G S. HULBERT:—I hereby express my confidence in the Rhubarb Wine,—having made a quantity of the same, which I deem superior to any manufactured of American grapes. It is now six months old only, and I have sold $160 00 worth already, at from $2.00 to $3.00 per gallon. I heartily recommend it as a wine of great medical efficiency, and a money making business.

ROBERT SMITH.

I have been afflicted with Liver Complaint, the Liver, for more than a year and a half, to such an extent that it sorely troubled me to work, eat, or wear my clothes. In this condition I naturally sought medical aid, and expended much without benefit. My last resort was to try the "American Sherry," abd, to my great surprise, found relief within two weeks. I am now entirely rid of this affliction.

S. K. CARTER.

KINGSVILLE, March 2, '64.

From the Binghampton Daily Times.

Dr. Marsh, Inspector of the U. S. Sanitary Commission for the Department of the South, says: "Rhubarb Wine is the best remedy for Dysentary and Diarrhœa yet known.

"This wine we should suppose would be in general use in our camps, for the benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers." Important, from one who has been five years in the business.

DOES IT PAY?—For an experiment I made, in Fall of 1858, about 100 gallons of wine from the "Strawberry Variety." Since that time I have made from 3500 to 4000 gallons per annum,—making (exclusive of the 100 gallons for experiment) five crops of wine, in all, over 13,000 gallons. Nearly all of the above named amount of wine, of sufficient age, I have sold at $2.00 and $1.75 per gallon, according to quantity.

Profits per gallon.—I report my nett profits to the Government Assessor, at One Dollar per gallon, above all taxes, interest, or other expenses. But in stating my profits, the present prices of everything are fully taken into account. * * * * The thousands of gallons I am selling of the "American Sherry" I have never sold at a less price, by the largest quantity, than $1 75 per gallon.

Merits and Popularity of the Wine.—For taste and flavor this wine is universally admitted, by competent judges, to be a very superior article; and some can scarcely be persuaded that it is not an extra quality of grape wine. No physician fails to count it an extraordinary medicinal wine, who has had the good fortune to become acquainted with it, and many are even very enthusiastic over its medicinal properties.

I. R. MUDGE.

BELVIDERE, ILL., Dec. 15, '64.

To Whom it May Concern.

This may certify that I have used successfully, as a stimulant alterative and medicinal diffusive agent, an article of wine manufactured from a particular species of rheum, well known, and extensively cultivated in this vicinity. I regard it as preferable to most stimulants, from its great purity and from its containing at the same time medicinal properties safe and reliable.

E. H. BARNES, M. D.

MARATHON, CORTLAND CO., N. Y.

I fully concur with Dr. Barnes, in the above statement.

KINGSVILLE, Oct. 2d, 1863.

Having grown this plant extensively, we are prepared to furnish the Roots in such quantities as may suit purchasers, also the wine.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, ss. At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office in the City of Adrian, on Thursday the tenth day of March in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty four,

Present, ROBERT R. BEECHER, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Samuel Rundell deceased. On reading and filing the petition duly verified, of Almeida R Rtndell, widow of said deceased praying that she may be appointed administratrix on said estate.

Thereupon it is ordered, That Monday, the fourth day of April next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said county of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ROBERT R. BEECHER,
Judge of Probate.

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever."
Shall be every freeman's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong;
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your dizen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bys. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Beecher's and Kingsley's Warehouse's on railroad street.

All kinds of Job Printing neatly executed at this office.

☞ Drop in and see those new things that Hood & Co. have just received.

☞ A son of W. B. Hall, of Adrian, aged five years, was accidentally drowned at that place on Friday last.

☞ The people of Adrian are considerably disappointed at being unable to get Miss Anna Dickson to lecture at that place this season.

Useful Receipt

To make a Kitchen or Dining Room look like a Parlor: Go to J. D. Robbins' and buy a few Rolls of Wall Paper—spread it on thick—butter side to the wall—and dry by a slow fire.

☞ Brown's Bronchial Troches, for Coughs, Colds, Pulmonary and Asthmatic Disorders, have proved their efficacy by a test of many years, and have received testimonials from eminent men who have used them.

☞ Those who are suffering from Coughs, Colds, Hoarseness, Sore Throat &c., should try "Brown's Bronchial Troches," a simple remedy which has relieved thousands, and which is in almost every case effectual.

☞ New at Ketcham's Ballou & Leslie's Ten Cent Monthly for April. Army Portfolios, a large stock of Stilson's celebrated Black Ink, and and all the current Papers and Cheap Publications of the day.

☞ See the advertisement in another column, of the Gift Enterprise which is to be given at Gleason's Hall, Manchester, on the 31st inst. It is a rare chance to invest. So try your luck. S. R. Fuller, of this place, will supply you with tickets.

☞ We don't receive the Chicago Banner any more. What, ye the reason Messrs. Editors? We are entitled to an exchange. Note v. ; ren.

The Banner is probably like a great many people in this world who make use of their friends to assist them in some scheme of profit or aggrandizement, and having attained their object disclaim any further connection with them.

☞ We would call the attention of our readers to G. T. Ketcham's new advertisement.

Mr. K. is one of our thorough-going business men, who appreciate the benefit arising from advertising, and as such, is entitled to the patronage of the public. We would advise all who are in want of any thing in his line, to give him a call, as you will always find the best assortment [illegible] he is receiving [illegible] every day, his stock is always [illegible]

We are pleased to chronicle this week a change in the hotel arrangements of this village. Mr. Geo. H. Wells has leased the Exchange Hotel, and is now thoroughly refitting and refurnishing the same. He is really making a new thing of it. We predict that George will make a good landlord, as we all know him to be a capital, whole-souled fellow. No more coming to Tecumseh to do business and being obliged to go to Adrian or Clinton for accommodations. When [illegible] stated give him a call and [illegible] any is not so.

On Monday last was held one of the most closely contested Corporation Elections ever held in this village.

The issue was not a political one, but simply one of Temperance or Anti-Temperance.

The real issue was made upon the Marshal, as most of the Corporation Ticket was voted for by both parties, being the ticket nominated at public caucus on Saturday before. As this was an open caucus the attempt was then made by the anti-temperance men to out vote it and secure thereby the nomination of their candidate for Marshal, who was a man well fitted for the duties of the office, and in many respects a favorite with the people for that place, or rather would have been but for the platform to favor which he was being used, but failing in this they bent all their energies to securing his election at the polls.

But it was no go. The people have decided for themselves, and upon fair warning and trial.

Only one name supported by the opposition was elected, to wit, our friend Thos. W. Cummins, Esq., elected by two majority, who it seems was the former Treasurer, whereas the caucus nominated A. B. Ward, Esq., supposing him to have been the incumbent. Both men are equally unexceptionable, and no one is better pleased with Mr. Cummins' election than Mr. Ward himself, who did not desire it. The average majority is 14.

The following are the Corporation Officers as elected for the ensuing year:

For President,
Horace Brewer,
For Trustees,
Sirrell C. LeBaron,
Albert Anderson,
Robert Culbertson.
George Curtis,
George Train.
William Hayden.
For Recorder,
Edwin B. Wood,
For Treasurer,
Thomas Cummins.
For Marshal,
Jairus P. Slayton.
For Assessors,
Alonzo Murray,
Moses Wright.

ROBACK'S CATAWBA BRANDY is made from the PURE JUICE OF CATAWBA GRAPE, which is grown in abundance in Ohio and from which this article is obtained—it has an agreeable flavor, fine clear color, and possesses all the qualities for medicinal purposes, and for a beverage of the best imported brandies. As a flavoring for mince pies and other cooking purposes it is the best economical article that can be used, being one half a dollar cheaper by the bottle, and nearly two dollars per gallon cheaper than other Brandies sold for that purpose. Wherever it has been introduced it has found rapid sales, and is daily gaining in popularity, giving in all cases the utmost satisfaction. Call for "Roback's Catawba Brandy," which may be found for sale by Druggists, Grocers and dealers generally throughout the West.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court for the County of Lenawee, at the Probate Office, in the city of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 16th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Garrett N. Hunt deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Jacob Snyder a creditor of said deceased, praying that said petitioner may be appointed administrator of said estate.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 1st, day of February next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ROBERT R. BEECHER,
Judge of Probate.

U. S. 5-20'S!

The Secretary of the Treasury has not yet given notice of any intention to withdraw this popular Loan from Sale at Par, and until ten days notice is given, the undersigned, as "General Subscription Agent" will continue to supply the public.

The whole amount of the Loan authorized is Five Hundred Millions of Dollars. Nearly Four Hundred Millions have been already subscribed for and paid into the Treasury mostly within the last seven months. The large demand from abroad, and the rapidly increasing home demand for use as the basis for circulation by National Banking associations now organizing in all parts of the country, will in a very short period, absorb the balance. Sales have lately ranged from ten to fifteen millions weekly frequently exceeding three millions daily, and as it is well known that the Secretary of the Treasury has simple and unfailing resources, in the Duties on Imports and Internal Revenue, and to be free of the interest bearing Legal Tender Treasury Notes it is almost a certainty that he will not find it necessary for a long time to come, to seek a market for any other long or permanent Loans. The interest and Principal of which are payable in GOLD.

Prudence and self interest must force the minds of those contemplating the formation of National Banking association, as well as the minds of all who have idle money on their hands, to the prompt conclusion that they should lose no time in subscribing to this most popular Loan. It will soon be beyond their reach, and advance to a handsome premium as was the result with the "Seven Thirty" Loan, when it was all sold and could no longer be subscribed for at par.

It is a Six per cent Loan, the Interest and Principal payable in Coin, thus yielding over Nine per cent. per annum at the present rate of premium on coin.

The Government requires all duties on imports to be paid in Coin; these duties have for a long time past amounted to over a Quarter of a Million of Dollars daily, a sum nearly three greater than the interest required in the payment of the Interest on the 6 20's and other permanent Loans. It is believed that the surplus Coin in the Treasury at no distant day, will enable the United States to resume specie payments upon all liabilities.

The Loan is called a Gold Bond, from the fact that while the Bonds may be paid in Coin, the Government has a right to pay the Interest in Gold at par, at any time for 20 years.

The Interest is paid half yearly, viz:—on the first days of November and May.

Subscribers can have Coupon Bonds, which are payable to bearer, and are $50, $100, $500 and $1,000 or Registered Bonds of same denominations, and in addition $5000 and $10,000. For Banking purposes and for investments of Trust monies the Registered Bonds are preferable.

These Bonds in cases, can be taken by Banks, Bankers, or counties, and the Government pays the Tax, namely one and a half per cent. [illegible] income, when the income of the owner, the property, hundred dollars per annum; all other taxes, such as income, legacy, succession, Railroad, Stock, Bonds, etc. must pay from three to five per cent.

Banks and Bankers throughout the Country will continue to dispose of the Bonds, and all orders by mail or otherwise promptly attended to.

The inconvenience of a few days' delay in the delivery of the Bonds is unavoidable, the demand being so great; but as interest commences from the day of subscription, no loss is occasioned, and every effort is being made to diminish the delay.

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so.—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate receipt of a Circular giving full information in the Art and the requisite instructions to possess it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and thing ever introduced which persons can make money at. NO LETTERS RECEIVED except those containing the Dollar, or an amount for instructions.

ANNUAL TAXES FOR 1864.

The attention of tax payers is hereby called to the provisions of the United States excise law relative to the assessment of Annual Taxes.

By the sixth section of the act of July 1st, 1862, it is made the duty of all persons, Partnerships, Firms, Associations, or Corporations, made liable to any annual duty, license or tax, on or before the first Monday of May in each year, to make a list or return to the Assistant Assessor of the district where located, of the amount of annual income, the articles or objects charged with a special tax and the business or occupation liable to pay any license.

Every person who shall fail to make such return by the day specified will be liable to be assessed by the Assessor according to the best information which he can obtain. And in such case the assessor is required to add fifty per centum to the amount of the items of such list.

Every person who shall deliver to an Assessor any false or fraudulent list or statement with intent to evade the valuation or enumeration required by law, is subject to a fine of Five Hundred Dollars; and in such case the list will be made out by the Assessor or Assistant Assessor, and from the valuation and enumeration so made there can be no appeal.

Payment of the annual taxes except those for License will not be demanded until the thirtieth day of June, 1864.

The appropriate Blanks on which to make return, and all necessary information will be furnished by Jonathan H. Green, Assistant Assessor for the eighth Division, to whom the returns should be delivered on or before the first Monday of May, at his office, in Tecumseh

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemen's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.

The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages.
Put on your fixen's boxes, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or oats or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, between Hayden's and Tindall's Warehouses on railroad street.

SEWING MACHINES

—o—

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stitch alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important for even light work will soon cause a flail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a lifetime and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the Stock Thread equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

ROUP

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11. 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no refuedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption,	etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore [illegible] years.

[illegible] of Rheumatism of eight years. [illegible] Dyspepsia and Liver [illegible] could be mentioned in which the [illegible] Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

which, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

Headache,	Costiveness,
Colic Pains,	Cholera Morbus,
Indigestion,	Pain in the Bowels,
	Dizziness, etc.

Try these medicines, and you will never regret it.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 180 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 150 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above, 70 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two brick lots in Milan, Monroe county, Mississippi.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store.

Probate Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, s. s.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian on Monday the 7th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Calvin Wood, deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Peter S. Knight praying that the administrator on said estate may be directed by a decree of said court to deed certain lands of said deceased to said petitioner, described in said petition and for reasons in said petition stated.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday the first day of February next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for six successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

ROBERT R. BEECHER,
At true copy.] 680 Judge of Probate

STATE OF MICHIGAN The Circuit Court for the county of Lenawee, in Chancery.

HENRY J. WOOD, Complainant,

DR. JOHN L. LYON'S

FRENCH PERIODICAL DROPS,

THE GREAT

FEMALE REGULATOR,

Are the only known remedy that will successfully and invariably restore and regulate the female system, removing all irregularities, and producing health, vigor and strength.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS.

Are a fluid preparation, the only one of the kind ever discovered in this country, and acts directly on the parts affected, whilst pills and powders can only reach them as they work through sympathy, but not at all direct and positive.

Are you suffering from a constant anxiety for the regular return of nature's prescribed laws?

Give yourself no uneasiness, for Lyon's Periodical Drops, if taken a day or two before the expected period, will positively and invariably regulate its coming, as sure as effect follows cause, as certain as daylight follows darkness.

Are you sick, enfeebled by disease, or unable to bear the labor and danger of increase?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Come to you as a blessing, for is not prevention better than cure?

If regularly taken, it is a certain preventive, and will save you much peril and many hours of suffering.

Have you been afflicted for many years with complaints incident to the sex, that have baffled the skill of physicians, and are hurrying you on to an early grave?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are the most reliable regulator ever known, and cure, like magic, all those irregularities that have defied the doctor's skill.

Will you waste away with suffering from Leucorrhœa, Prolapsus, Dysmenorrhœa, and a thousand other difficulties, all summed up under the name of suppressed and obstructed nature, when an investment of one dollar in

will surely save you?

Do not use the drops when forbidden in the directions, for although a positive cure, and harmless at all other times, they are so powerful and finely calculated to adjust and govern the functions of the sexual organism, that, if taken at improper times, they would produce results contrary to nature, against which all, particularly those who would reproduce, should carefully guard.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Cannot harm the most delicate constitution at any time; yet the proprietors wish to guard against its misuse, hoping that a thousand bottles will be used for a good purpose where one is used for an illegitimate one.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS.

the never failing Female Regulator, is for sale by every Druggist, in both city and country, and do not, if you value your health and wish for a reliable medicine, buy any other. Take no other; but if the Druggist to whom you apply has not got it, make him send and get one for you.

$100 REWARD.

For a Medicine that will cure Coughs, Influenza, Tickling the Throat, Whooping Cough, or relieve Consumptive Cough, as quick as

COES COUGH BALSAM.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in its native town, and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quantity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound.

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to children of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

No Family should be Without it.

It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you. It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures it has made.

HELMBOLD'S
GENUINE PREPERATION.
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the
BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion, and excites the assimilative functions to healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCEROUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflamation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, or CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEEKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse,

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power.
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance;

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which the medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITY, EPILEPTIC FITS,

in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases,"

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION,

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female,

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, IMMARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Chlorosis or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations Ulcerated or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility and for all complaints incident to the sex whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Friendship.

I feel that the more, the more I know,
That friendship is a thing apart,
A mute assurance of the heart,
A faith that little cares for show.

A sympathy of soul and soul,
Which feel themselves in spite of birth,
And all the petty cares of earth,
Two elves of an eternal whole.

That asks no change, if undeceived,
And shuns to court the vulgar eye,
Contented in obscurity,
If it believes and be believed;

A lamp that needs but little oil,
But is with its own burning fed;
A virgin stream, that will not wed
Or mix itself with earthly soil.

A beauty that no tongue can tell,
That underlies our common dust,
As bright beneath the rough-ribbed crust,
Glistens the glory of the shell.

Felt in the pressure of a hand,
Though face and voice be stern the while,
Sent in the message of a smile,
That only two can understand.

Address to the Rebel Soldiers!

From the Cincinnati Commercial.

EDS COM.—The following address was procured by me from some rebel soldiers in Calhoun county, Alabama, a few days past. I was on secret service for the Government, and was therefore in disguise, and the rebels gave me the address supposing me to be a rebel soldier. There is no mistake as to its genuineness; and I know that it has circulated to a considerable extent among the dissatisfied rebel soldiers. The following is the address:

"Fellow-Soldiers of the Army of Tennessee! Three years ago we were called upon to volunteer in the Confederate army for a term of three years; and we all nobly responded to the call, with the express understanding that we were to be discharged as soon as our term of service expired. Indeed, we were faithfully assured by all of our officials that such a course would be pursued. The Secretary of war proclaimed that those who volunteered for "three years or during the war," would have to be discharged from the army at the end of three years. But to our utter surprise, we are now told that we must be conscripted and forced to enter the army for another term of three years! Our feelings are not to be consulted; we must be conscripted!

"Was such a thing ever heard of before? Do the annals of war furnish a single instance of volunteer soldiers being forced to continued in the service after the expiration of their term of service?—Surely not! If we search the history of the world, from the days of Adam, down to the present we will find that in every instance, a volunteer soldier was discharged as soon as his term of service expired, unless he, of his own accord re-enlisted as a volunteer, and are we, Americans, once the boast and pride of the world—are we to be treated worse than the heathen of the dark ages of the world treated their soldiers? Are we to be made the worst slaves ever known to the world? And are we to become the laughing-stock of the world.

"Fellow Soldiers! Is it not clear to every rational mind, that our pompous and merciless rulers are daily stealing away our rights and liberties, and reducing us to the most abject slavery ever known to the world? And shall we cowardly submit to this palpable infringement upon our most sacred rights? We were told that we must come out to fight for our rights; yet our inhuman leaders are gradually robbing us of every right inherited by nature transmitted to us by our predecessors! The Federals did not hesitate to discharge all their nine months troops whose term of service expired last summer—they were promptly discharged, and their places filled up by new levies; and shall we suffer ourselves to be treated worse than our enemies are treated? No, brave comrades, let's assert our rights, and unflinchingly maintain them! Let's show our beastly rulers that they cannot thus enslave us because we are private soldiers! They have already cunningly led us to the very threshold of destruction; they have practiced one deception after another upon us; they have told us lies—horrible lies—to induce us to become their abject slaves.

"Among the innumerable lies promulgated by these unmitigated scamps, we call your attention to the following. They told us that the war would not last three months; that foreign nations would recognize us as an independent people, and held up sight that one of us could whip ten Yankees; that Vicksburg could never be taken; that the peace party of the North would force Lincoln to make peace with the South; that we soldiers should be discharged as soon as our time expired, and that we would not be heavily taxed. These are but a few of the many hypocritical lies proclaimed by those conspirators who have precipitated us into irretrievable revolution. Shall we submit to be beguiled by these unpardonable usurpers, and permit our families to starve to death, through want of our labor at home? Are we not aware that if our absence from our families be protracted another term of three years many of them will suffer wretchedly for the necessaries of life, if they do not starve entirely to death? And are we not bound by the most sacred laws known to man to provide for our families? And should we permit a set of usurping profligates to prevent us from complying with this Divine law? By the late laws of Congress, our families are to be taxed to an almost unlimited extend; and if we become conscripts, the last ray of hopes will have to be expelled from our hearts, for we can then hope for nothing but an untimely state of abjected slavery, not only of ourselves, but also our families!

"Now is the time to assert our rights, for if we wait longer our doom will be forever sealed! We who write this address are determined to demand our rights, and if necessary, we will demand them at the point of the bayonet! We are not enemies to the South; but we are lovers of our rights, liberties and families; and if we must lose all our sacred rights, and permit our families to starve, in order to sustain our wicked leaders in their deceptive course, we prefer to return to our allegiance to the old Government, accept of Lincoln's pardon, and let the leaders and their Confederacy go to hell together! This may be hard language for men who have fought in many a hard battle to use; but silent endurance ceases to be a virtue, and confident are we that the Government of the United States can treat us no worse than we are being treated by our heartless officials in the field as well as at Richmond.

"But we are told that if we will let the authorities conscript us the war will soon close, favorable to our side. Can any rational man credit such a perfidious lie?—Does not this conscripting business plainly say to the world that we are fast playing out? that out weakness is rapidly manifesting itself even to our own deluded minds? Fellow soldiers, we have been too often deceived by these wily liars to place the slightest confidence in anything they tell us. They are but invented lies to enable them to tie the cord of despotism tighter around our wrists. Every intelligent soldier among us knows that we are already whipped; and why not acknowledge it at one? Why not show our leaders that we know we are whipped as well as they do? President Davis virtually acknowledges the fact; so does the Secretary of War and the Secretary of the Treasury! What use is there for us to contend against a dead currency and an empty commissary in the face of the best army ever marshaled for combat?—Think of these things, fellow soldiers, and decide what shall be your course. We have made up our minds to go home as soon as our time is out!

MANY SOLDIERS."

☞ At a festival a pretty miss waited upon an editor with a pie plate of antique manufacture, in the centre of which he espied the following interesting couplet:—

"One sweet kiss.
Is the price of this."

This excited his feelings, and as soon as an opportunity presented itself, he motioned the young lady to his side, and pointing with his knife to the line, said: "Your pet is ready whenever you present your bill."

☞ An exchange paper says that a horse and wagon were recently drowned in the Ohio. Now, isn't that awful?—What a tale the tongue of that wagon could have told had it been rescued?—And what "spokes" the wheels would have uttered! Poor "fellies," they are gone!

☞ It may be interesting to lady readers to know that the Empress of Austria has the smallest waist in Christendom. It measures 15 1-4 inches—about the circumference of her husband's neck. And yet, would you believe it girls?—the circumference of her body at the shoulders is 33 1-2 inches.

☞ One swallow doesn't make a summer, but young men should remember that too many swallows are sure to make a fall.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

Belle Island.

Belle Island is situated in the James River, just above Richmond; its extreme lower end being opposite the famous Tredagar Iron Works. It is said to be about a mile in length, and half a mile in width. Some parts of it are quite elevated. The main channel of the James runs on the north or Richmond side of it, and is quite rapid. This Island furnishes a fine water power, the water being brought down from its upper end in an acqueduct, and running an extensive nail factory. The Island is connected with the main land on the south or Manchester side by a railroad bridge, which runs to the nail works. Considerable other business is also carried on on the Island.

At the lower end of the Island is a level piece of ground of about six or seven acres, and of a loose sandy soil, and about ten feet above the level of the river. On this piece of ground is where the prisoners are kept. There are about three acres of ground enclosed by a ditch and bank, the ditch being about three feet deep and four wide; the bank is four feet high. The ditch was formerly on the outside, but has recently been changed to the inside. There are two entrances or gates: the main gate is on the north side, which leads out to head quarters, cook house, hospital, etc.; the gate on the east side leads down to the river.

Every day, about 10 o'clck A. M., the new guard of 112 men come over from the city; sometimes coming over in boats, and sometimes on the railroad bridge,—there are three bridges crossing the river at Richmond, two R. R. and one wagon road bridge, all below the Island. These guards are divided into three reliefs—the same as in our army—and stand two hours out of four. Each relief consits of 36 men, and are posted about 35 feet apart, just outside of the bank, so as to be readily seen by any one who may attempt to run the guard.

A great trafic is carried on with these guards, who smuggle over every conceivable thing to sell to the prisoners. Formerly very severe restrictions were placed upon this trafic, but of late it has been carried on quite extensively and with much more boldness.

For five or six weeks previous to my leaving the Island, we had a Sutler. This at once brought Confederate money into circulation, which previous to this had been worth almost nothing. His shop was just outside the main entrance, and only four or five were allowed to go out and trade at one time; consequently at times there would be a tremendous rush to get out to the Sutler's.

First, on the east side of the entrance is the bakery, just completed. Formerly our bread had been baked in Richmond, and was brought over in boats. Next is the bread house (where they issue nothing (twice a day), Sutler shop, Lieut. Bossieux tent, the Commander of the Camp Sergt. tent, Drummer and Fife tent, Sucker tent, and Hospital tent. By Suckers I mean what some would call hospital nurses; but who in reality are a set of fellows who pretend to take care of the sick. They only hang around that they may steal every thing they can get their hands on and bring it into Camp to sell. Considerable of the rations that Uncle Sam sent us was disposed of in this way. These men are detached from our own men on the Island, and a more rascally set of men never lived. Besides these there is about 100 men detailed for various purposes, such as bakers, cooks, camp cleaners, carpenters, shoemakers, and some work in the nail factory. All of these men come into camp to stay at night except those who go over in the city to work. It is considered a great privilege to get a chance to work outside, for those who work outside get extra rations. They draw double rations outside, and the same rations that we draw in camp, which they generally sell. They could get five dollars a day (confed) for the ration that they drew in camp; besides that they could carry on quite a trade in tobacco and stolen rations.

The prisoners are generally counted once every week; sometimes we would be counted twice in a week, and once or twice we went three or four weeks without being counted at all. It is usually done the first thing in the morning. The guard is stationed out far enough to let us get outside the bank, then the gates are thrown open and we are ordered to leave camp, or, in other words—"Get out, God damn you." At these times every single thing we have has to be carried out or it will be stolen by the first ones who enter the camp. Most of the men had but very little to carry out. Some of the speculators, however, at times, have a pretty big load, especially if they have been buying during the night; and if they have more than they can carry they load down their friends,—any way to get them out. It takes about an hour to clear the camp. At last the rebel sergeant takes a club and goes around among the tents to see if they are all out; and if he catches a poor devil in any of the tents he just gives him particular fits with his club, and sends him out with a sore head. Then we commence to re-enter camp at each gate, in single file, and are counted as we pass in. Some are cold, others are tired of standing, and for some reason or other all are anxious to get into camp first. The Lieutenant has considerable patience, and keeps talking; but still they crowd; and the first thing you know he springs up to the guard, snatches his gun, and dives at the prisoners as if he would kill them all; whacks two or three over the head with the butt of the gun,—and by that time the crowd will be scattered, and no one within reach of him. Then he will laugh, and say: "God damn you; I will kill some of you as sure as hell, if you don't mind what I tell you." This causes great laughter among those in the rear, who push up on purpose to get the Lieutenant to whack somebody. At the other gate the Sergeant is counting, and he, unlike the Lieut., never laughs, but brings down his club with a vengeance on their cranium. These scenes are quite frequent and create great merriment for those in the rear who don't get a sore head.

The camp was in the first place very neatly laid out, having a spacious street running through the centre, with sixteen small streets running at right angles with the main street, eight on a side. These side streets are now filled with a mass of the whole camp, worn out, rotten, and weather beaten tents. Some are wedge, some bell, and some are Sibly tents; in fact, any thing that the Confederacy happens to have. Some are of their own manufacturing, and others were captured from us; most of these are so poor that in order to get out of the rain we generally have to go outside.

Very seldom during my stay on the Island that all could get into tents. At many hundred had to sleep in the times [illegible] without a blanket streets and in the ditch, [illegible] or an overcoat. They were half naked, and would lay down, eight or ten together like pigs, as close as they could get to each other, and in this way they would shiver out part of the night, the remainder of which they would walk the streets. The silent hours of midnight are always broken by the dismal tread of a hundred shivering forms as they pass to and fro.

I suppose every one is aware that in this clime, especially in the low lands along the James, in the fall of the year, we have very chilly nights and hot days. Some sleep in the day time and travel nights. When I left, I think there were tents enough for all; yet there were about 50 who still occupied the ditch. This was their own fault; they were so lousy and nasty that no one would have them in the tents with them. I have seen the lice so thick on the outside of their clothes that they could brush them off with their hands. What the inside contained I know not; (lice, I guess.) Some of these men were nothing but skin, bone, and lice. Quite often they would be suddenly relieved of all earthly cares, being found dead in the ditch in the morning. We would take them out in a blanket, and by order of the Confederacy a pine board coffin would be made, the body placed therein, taken up the Island a short distance and buried, with a pine board placed at his head. One day, while we were out to count, some of the Yanks got into the bone yard and stole a large number of the head boards and carried them into camp to burn.

The sick are much better taken care of now than when we first came here. Then it was almost impossible to get a sick man out to the hospital. You might hear men at all hours of the day calling out—"Steward, Steward; I want to get a sick man out to the hospital; don't expect he can live but a short time." "Can't help it; have no room for him." Nine times out of ten this would be the answer. And the poor fellow would be left to die, without ever seeing a physician or having the first identical thing done to relieve him of his sufferings, until at last death relieves him of all his miseries; then he is taken up the Island as above described.

The hospital is a large tent, and will accommodate about twenty-five patients. When this is full they are taken over to Richmond. Sometimes this is not done for weeks; consequently no sick are taken out of camp. At one time the deaths in camp would average from three to five daily.

About two o'clock in the morning the meat chopper's ax is heard. The next sign of grub is about half past eight, when they commence to weigh out the meat in the buckets and set it out in front of the cook house. Each bucket is said to contain 17 pounds. This occupies about an hour and a half. Then if the bread has been got over from the city all is ready. The next sign is two or three taps on the drum, by the drummer, to see if it is in whistling order. He now comes forth with two little boys, fifers, and the breakfast call is beat. The Quartermaster makes for the bread house, with his book under his arm. By this time the Sergt. of the first hundred is on hand at the gate, with three men and one blanket to carry the bread in. The Quarter master then calls for Sergt. Jewell, first hundred, who comes out with his three men, one for a bucket of meat, and the other two get 25 loaves of corn bread in the blanket. Then the Sergeant of the second hundred is called, and so on. The first hundred is divided into five messes of 20 men each. The Sergeant now proceeds to divide the bread and meat. The bread is easily divided, there being five loaves to each twenty men. But the meat has to be divided according to the best judgment of the Sergeant. After he gets it divided into five piles, some one turns his back, and another says—"Who has this?" pointing to a certain pile, No. 2, No. 3, or such number as may be called by the person who has his back turned. Each mess is turned, and has a ration, on hand, five of bread, and one third of 17 pounds of meat. After they all get their rations each one is off for his mess, muttering as he goes, "I knew I would get that pile—it is all bone, the whole of it; just my cussed luck."

Now it's the Captain's turn to divide for the mess of 20. Each loaf is divided into four equal parts, and the meat into twenty. Then a ration of meat is placed on a ration of bread, with a little salt upon each. We drew about a gill of salt to the hundred men; so you can judge how much each man would get. When all is ready, one man turns his back, and the Corporal says, pointing to a certain ration, "Who has this?" Some one gets it and [illegible] at the forthwith proceeds to devour it, same time muttering—"I knew I would get the smallest ration."

Usually it would be about ten o'clock when we would get breakfast. About 4 P. M. we would get supper. The ration is about the same, except we would get six buckets of soup instead of meat. Sometimes it is rice soup, sometimes bean soup, and once in a while we would get mush. The beans are a very inferior kind. They are very small, and of a dark color. It is said they grow wild in many parts of the South, and are commonly called peas. The quality of the rice would be very good, if the cooks would only pick it over; but the quantity, Lord! The mush would be very good if it were not for the absence of meal. I have seen many a pail of soup, say ten or twelve quarts, with less than a pint of beans or rice in it. Sometimes for supper we would get a few miserable, half-decayed, sweet potatoes; a few times we got potatoes and soup both at the same time. Occasionally, in the place of bread, we would get three hard tacks and a little salt pork, in the place of soup,—which came from our lines. Very little of the provisions sent by our government ever reached us, and when they did were sparingly dealt out to us in place of Confederate rations. We expected to get a little extra when they should arrive, but in this we were sadly disappointed.

I have not mentioned the irregularity in our rations. This was a serious and shameful annoyance, and I believe at many times inexcusable on the part of those in charge. It was not a rare occurrence that no bread would be brought over from Richmond, and we would have to go without a particle supper. The Lieutenant would say it was not his fault, he could not help it; and the Quartermaster would tell us that we should have double rations in the morning; but he was a liar; we never got them, and not only that but the soup that we ought to have had the night before would stand in the kettles over night and sour, and then be dealt out to us in the morning in the place of meat. At other times something would happen to the kettles and then we would get nothing but bread. I think when we failed to get meat or soup it was never made up to us in a single instance. A few times when we only got one meal a day we got a third of a loaf of bread. Our bread and meat was always very good, that is, when we got wheat bread. For the last two months that I was on the Island we got the worst stuff to be called bread that I ever saw. It was made of corn meal, without being sifted. It was almost enough to kill a man to swallow it. The meat, however, was very good; but was mostly fore quarters. This I suppose is owing to the beeves all having four legs; yet we would not have found fault at that if they had only been a little more liberal of the quantity. When we got wheat bread I think it was as good as I ever saw. I think a majority of the prisoners preferred corn bread; but as for me, give me wheat bread.

Trading with the guard is a business carried on quite extensively, yet secretly; always keeping a sharp lookout for the officers. Generally the Sergeants and Corporals take a lively part in the trading. Then they only had to watch the commissioned officers. The great majority of the guards trade more or less; consequently, instead of exposing each other, they do all they can to help each other sell whatever they happen to have. On the distant approach of an officer a slight whistle is given, which is passed along from post to post in quick succession; this is understood by both prisoner and sentinel. The goods are quickly concealed; the prisoner disappears back among the tents, and all is quiet until the officer has passed, when they again return to their illegal business. A little out the guard is at once alarmed that the Lieutenant is in camp, and all trade is dispensed with until he leaves camp. Considerable trading is done in the day time; yet most of it has to be done in the night, especially if the goods are bulky; and also it is much more safe on account of the rallies.

There are hundreds of men that speculate. But let me give you the history of one, for one day. As soon as the first relief of the new guard are posted, which is about ten A. M., the trader goes out to the "Bank" to see how trade is and to see if there is any good bargain to be had. Here he finds considerable of a crowd; some are buying, and some are pricing the goods; others are here out of curiosity, and still others to find something to rally on. Passing along he soon notices some guard who he thinks has more than [illegible] rations in his haversack. He one day [illegible] says "Have you any thing to sell this morning?" "Yes; got two pounds butter, two pounds sausage, one pound coffee (rye), and a dozen apples." "What will you take for the lot?" "Five dollars—greenbacks." "Oh!" he says, "you are crazy," and passes on, pricing all that any had got to sell. They all have their favorite to trade with. He finally comes to an old trader. "Ah, ha!" he says—"you still live; how is your health?" "Good; how is yours?" "Oh, nicely; I tell you, Belle Island is a healthy place. But what have you got to squander?" "Well, I have got five pounds butter, five pounds sausage, two dozen eggs, and a pound of coffee." "About four pounds of butter, I suppose." "No, sir,—everything is just as I tell you." "What's the price?" "Five dollars—greenbacks." "Will fifty dollars Confed do?" "I little rather have greenbacks, but suit yourself." "Where are the articles?" "Up to the house. I will get them as soon as I come off post." When he is relieved he gets them according to agreement, and takes his fifty dollars. "Now what can you get me to-night?" "I have arrangements made to run a boat across the river at midnight; just say what you want, and you can have it." "You may bring me sixty loaves of bread, one bushel potatoes, one peck onions, one quart molasses, one quart whiskey,—all for how much?" "Let's see,—bread five dollars, potatoes four, onions two, molasses one, whiskey six,—all for eighteen dollars." "Call it seventeen." "No; can't do it." "Well, I will tell you what I will do; I will give you ten dollars in greenbacks, and seventy-five in Confed." "That's seventeen and a half; all right." As he is on from ten to twelve o'clock in the forenoon, of course he comes on from ten to twelve at night. About 11:30 the trader cautiously approaches the bank, and, calling the guard by name, inquires if his goods are coming. "Yes, they are already over and are hid in the bushes," he says, in a whisper. "Come out at 12:30, and I will be ready to pass them over." He returns to his tent, gets three of his tent mates, each armed with a stick or club, and at the appointed time, starts out. After reconnoitering around among the tents, and finding all quiet, he informs the guard that he is ready. [illegible] Times thirty loaves of bread in a bag. Placing it upon his shoulders he toddles for his tent,—one of his friends ahead as a preventative of his running upon some hidden foe; the other keeping close in the rear, so that no rascal can pounce upon his bread bag. The bread having been left in the tent they all return to the bank, and the same scene is enacted until all the things are stored in the tent and paid for. Thus you see how trading is done on the Island. But this is varied in a thousand different ways. At times the officers keep such a close watch that the guard dare not try to get any thing in. At other times the rallies would be out in such force that the trader would not run the risk of taking them. These rallies are a set of rowdies that have been taken prisoners on purpose to get rid of fighting. They have no money, and a lot of them will collect together, and if they see a man with anything they want they will take it away from him if they can. I have known quite a number of boats to be discovered by the officers, and everything taken out, and the guards arrested and taken to Castle Thunder. Again, yes, time and time again, I have known the rallies to make a furious attack on a few loaves of bread. Then there would go up a hideous yell, and clubs would fly, and bread too. In an instant there would come forth a crowd of rallies and "regulators." Regulators are an organized band to put down the rallies. Some are armed with clubs and knives, and some are without either. One would be sought out as a rallyer and get a crack on the cranium. Another would seize a loaf of bread. No sooner would he get it than three or four would rally on him. Thus they scramble for bread. The fight would become general. The bread would be torn into a thousand atoms, most of which would be found in the sand the next morning. After the disappearing of the bread quiet would again reign,—some going away to walk the streets, others to their tents; some to see if there was not more bread to rally on—some with marks of the dirk—some with sore heads, declaring if they knew who did it they would kill him—and some laughing that they had got a paw in and made a good grab. A number of these rallies lose their lives in these meeles. It is no crime on Belle Island to kill a rally. In the Wolverine State if a man has plenty of money and puts it out freely he is a good fellow. On Belle Island, if a man kills a rallyer he is a good fellow. And the man that steals his grave stone is no sinner.

Part of the goods are sold from the tents,—many of the tents becoming little groceries. They are accordingly rallied on many times. The tent will be torn down or upset. Then the bread and pies will fly in all directions, and a fight ensues. In this case, after quiet is again restored, you find yourself minus your blankets and overcoat; or, if it happens in the night, perhaps all the earthly goods you have.

There is no law. You must catch a thief in the act, or he is safe. There is no chance to investigate cases of supposition or suspicion.

Of all curiosities the market is perhaps the most peculiar. Scenes both shameful and laughable may here be witnessed. I have often been surprised, myself, at the great variety of things always for sale on the main streets of Belle Island. Almost everything that could be bought in the city of Richmond would be found for sale at the market. The reason of this was that boxes were sent from the North, some of which found their way on to the Island, with many delicacies therein, which were [illegible] on the street. This at first [illegible] thought [illegible] ungrateful indeed. I think [illegible] that a starving man having a loaf of cake which he can sell for ten dollars, which will buy him twelve loaves of bread, is justified in so doing, notwithstanding it may be the gift of the dearest friend on earth.

From early dawn till long after the sun ceases to shine, the cry of a hundred venders may be heard,—from four to six hundred men may be found on the streets at almost any time of the day,—about one hundred of these are pedlers, each one, if possible, raising his voice a little above the other. So long as I live, the peculiar cry of the Belle Island pedler will be fresh in my memory. And when I am in dream land I imagine I hear the vender shout at the top of his voice—"Here is where you have your nice bread for the small sum of ten cents, or a dollar in Confed." "Here is where you get your splendid sausage for ten cents, or a dollar in Confed." This would be a piece about an inch in diameter and two inches long. "Here is where you get your hot coffee and toasted bread for the small sum of ten cents in money, or a dollar in Confed." This would be a pint of rye coffee and a small slice of bread, smoked more than toasted. "Here is where you have your bread, butter and molasses for only ten cents in greenbacks, or a dollar in trash." This would be a small slice of bread with butter and molasses very scanty. "Who will have the next hot boiled egg for five cents, or fifty cents in Confed." "Here is the last ration of bread and meat, for only ten cents, or a dollar in Confed." This is a ration as above described. Hundreds of these are always for sale. "Who wants to swap tobacco for rations," etc., etc.

But I will suppose it to be a little past noon, and no breakfast yet. The rallies, ten or fifteen in number, make a descent upon the market. Cracky! If things don't fly then I am no judge. In about a minute the streets are all cleared, and the shout of the vender is no longer heard. Some of those have lost their goods; while others have run to their tents. Now the tents are attacked, one after another, until crowds collect around with clubs, which are freely used on both sides, and generally the rowdies are soon dispersed. Sometimes the leader is arrested and taken out to the Lieutenant, who has him tied up for an hour or so. It is only recently that he would take any notice of these fellows. Formerly he encouraged them, in hopes of stopping the trafic with the guards. Quite a number have been killed in these fights. After a short time the pedlers are out the same as before.

[illegible] of prisoners Usually have to sleep in the street; come the morning they find themselves relieved of what few things they had. Why, it's almost an every night occurrence for a man, although rolled up in it, to have his blanket stolen. The first thing he knows he finds himself buzzing like a top in the dirt, and just catches a glimpse of his blanket as it goes around the corner of some tent,—being so suddenly awoke, before he could gather himself from his surprise, the thief has disappeared and his blanket is forever beyond his reach.

About 10 o'clock one night in the month of August, I saw an old Dutchman standing by the side of the street. A young man stepped up to him and placed his hand on the old man's shoulder, as if he was going to have some friendly talk with him; with the other hand he cut the old man's blouse collar and gave it a jerk, which tore one edge completely off down in front, and with the quickness of lightning he disappeared among the tents. The old man stood like a statue for a seckond, and then began to take on bitterly. On inquiry I learned that the old man had one hundred and eighty dollars in greenbacks hid in his blouse buttons, every cent of which was gone,—the buttons being on the strip which the thief tore off. He must have known the location of the money.

In consequence of the long accumulating filth, the water got to be very disagreeable. Formerly we had about twenty small wells or holes dug from four to eight feet deep, with a barrel or barrels placed therein. These failed to furnish the necessary supply, as the prisoners increased. Then three or four wells were dug in various parts of the camp, and were boarded up inside; and these barely do their duty. The last month I was on the Island we got our water from the river, many of us drinking but very little water from the wells. The river water in cold weather is splendid.

The Confederacy never furnished us with any soap or any accommodations for cleanliness whatever. It is a shame that prisoners, though they have no change of clothing, should not be allowed to wash those they wear, once in a while, especially in hot weather; but this privilege was never granted.

Lice are a great pestilence on Belle Island. No one that has never been a prisoner can really appreciate the blessings of a change of clothing, with a chance to wash the same. We used to have to pick lice from two to three hours every day, and then it was with the utmost difficulty that we could keep them in subjection. On the ground they could be seen crawling in all directions. In the loose sandy soil of Belle Island there lives a small ant. They are very small indeed, being about half the size of a louse. But on espying a louse they will walk up to him, seize him by the head,—and all entreaties, distortions, wringing, twisting and kicking is of no account; the little ant is hard hearted and hath great faith in his own strength; he tugs away in earnest, and they soon disappear in the loose sand. I have cursed the ants when they got into the sugar box before now, but in their good work on Belle Island I could only say, "Good! go in, my sweet little cuss, and take that little louse down and taunt him till he dies."

Wood was dealt out to us very sparingly. It seemed more like a mockery than anything else,—sometimes being without for days. Finally a couple of sticks was given to each twenty men every other day. And last of all, five men were detailed from each hundred once a day [illegible] a mile, over on the Rich[illegible] to go bring [illegible] Richmond side, and [illegible] what they could carry on their shoulders; so every twenty men would have what one man could carry a mile on his shoulders at once. Judge for yourself how much it was. With this we could have a little fire night and morning. Many would roll themselves up in their blankets, and lay the whole day to keep warm.

The sink was down by the river side. Formerly we were allowed to go down to it during the night. But some took advantage of this, and, swimming the river, escaped; after which the gate was closed at dark, and no one was allowed to get out till sunrise the next morning. As there was six thousand prisoners on three acres of ground, you must know that the condition of the camp in the morning must be filthy beyond description. They had men detailed to clean the camp every morning, but it was not half done, most of the offal being covered up instead of being carried out; and I think I may safely say that one fourth of the filth is never touched at all. Again the cleaning is neglected entirely for days at a time. Should the prisoners be kept on Belle Island until the return of hot weather, the health of the camp will be in a terrible condition, and the mortality fabulous.

Such is a faint glimpse of life on Belle Island. You can form a small idea of it by reading this sketch; but in order to know it thoroughly you would have to live there about a month, and God forbid that you ever should. There is a great deal more that I could write, but I will leave that for another time.

WM. W. HENDERSHOT.

WHAT BECOMES OF ALL THE NICKELS?—By the report of the Directors of the Mint, it is stated that during the year, 54,350,000 nickels have been coined and issued. Notwithstanding this fact they are very scarce even in Philadelphia, and ten per cent premium is offered by the dealers in such articles. Where they all go to is a mystery yet unsolved, for they are not constituted currency, therefore, not legal tender. Large quantities are taken to New York and other cities where change is scarce.

A CELEBRATED Female shop-lifter made a desperate raid among the dry-good stores of Buffalo on Saturday. She had looped up the skirts of her dress, thus forming capacious receptacles for stolen articles, and was carrying on her operations with great apparent success; but, being recognized, she was followed, watched, and finally caught in the act of stealing

The Pleasures of Grumbling.

We have had, long since, "The Pleasures of Hope," "The Pleasures of Memory," etc.; but did it ever occur to our readers that there should be written also, "The Pleasures of Grumbling."

We think there should be; and, further, that a faithful history of this Rebellion, and of those who took part in it, and of those who took no part in it, would furnish abundant illustrations wherewith to expound and embellish it.

From the beginning of the war there have been those who have sat down in blank despair, and whose only resource for comfort, amid it all, has been in recounting from day to day all the things that had gone wrong, and the certainty of ultimate failure in those that seemed for the time to be going right.

By far the best generals that we have had, are those that have never been in the field, nor had any thoughts of going there, and who have therefore never lost a fight. They can tell you every time how it ought to be done, or rather, how it ought to have been done; for they are a little cautious of speaking very definitely about the future, but confine the most of their efforts at strategy to the past.

The fact is, they are really opposed to the war on the part of the North. It is to their minds all well enough for the South to rebel, and try to overthrow and rule the North; but it is a wicked and wasteful attempt on the part of the North, to seek, in any way, to resist and avert it. They secretly wish the rebels to succeed; and as they have not done so to any considerable extent, and are not very likely to do so, they feel not a little sore over it. But it will not do to say so. That would not be tolerated, any where in the North, and might get them into trouble with this arbitrary and unreasonable government. (All governments will at times become so unreasonable and arbitrary as to refuse to allow treason at home in time of war.) So they confine their opposition to finding fault with every thing that is, or is not done, and from day to day, as each new phase presents itself, entertain us with some very brilliant prophecies of success on the part of the rebels, or very doleful ones of failure on our part.

But, after all, this is a somewhat harmless kind of amusement, and we are rather inclined to encourage than [illegible] it, for it really [illegible] seek to repress [illegible] strengthens the government,—while its very absurdity and transparency call more plainly into view whatever success and merit it has in the mean time secured; and, besides, as the man said said who allowed his wife to whip him occasionally, it seems to do them lots of good, and don't do any body else any harm.

There is an old axiom, which we would all do well at times to remember, and that is, "That saying a thing is so, does not make it so;" and yet about half the world seem to suppose that it will, if they only persist in saying it often enough. To be sure, the experiment has not unfrequently failed in the past; but they still have great faith in the future, and are disposed to try it on any how. Let the trial be made by all means; it will not of course work, but it nevertheless will be a relief to some, and will not do any hurt.

—"Private advices from Port Royal say that many of the females who went to Port Royal to teach the little niggers how to read and pray, have been obliged within the past few months to abandon their black charges and open nurseries on their own private account. An officer informed us recently that no less than sixty-four spinsters had contributed to the population in and about Port Royal harbor. The climate seems to favor population even more than the production of Sea Island cotton by paid negro labor.

"The information furnished us by the officer concerning the sixty-four little mulattoes has been confirmed.

Pure Patriotism.

"It is the existence and cultivation of a pure and lofty patriotism like this, rising above all selfish, and even above all "mere partisan considerations, that is carrying, and will carry our country safely through that terrible ordeal into which an opposite course and spirit has hurled us.

It is no time now for narrow minded party bickering, and that selfish scrambling after office, which has too long accompanied success in this country."

The article from which the above is an extract, and which appeared in the HERALD of last week—having reference to a letter from Secretary Chase to his friends in Ohio, asking them that "no further consideration be given to his name" as a candidate for the succession—proves at least one thing, if it does nothing else, namely, that its author is an eminently "Loyal" man, that is, according to the modern, or rather the partisan acceptation of that term; for no one who is not completely saturated with that peculiar kind of "Loyalty" that is current at the present time, could have the hardihood to stand up and vouch for the purity of that set of men who are now bearing rule at Washington and elsewhere, in this nation.

But perhaps I misunderstand the meaning of the article in question. Perhaps the gentleman anticipates that that set of men, of whom Senator Hale said, that they were "turning the temple of our liberties into a den of thieves," intend following the example of Mr. Chase by all of them declining nominations for offices under the government. If this be his true meaning; and if it be true that these men have actually become so disgusted with their own official conduct, that they are now willing, voluntarily to yield up the places they have so shamefully disgraced, and hand them over to other men more honest and more capable than themselves; then indeed could we all heartily join with that writer in applauding that act as the best proof they could give, of a "pure and lofty patriotism."

But if these are the gentleman's views, —if he imagines that these public plunderers, who have been for three years revelling in the wealth of a nation, are now become penitent and are voluntarily going to yield their grasp of power and of gold, I fear that he will be much disappointed. I fear that this class of men [illegible] were, and are now, engaged in sucking the life blood of the nation. Hell-born rebellion is holding it by the throat, are beyond the reach of repentance. Look at some of their acts. Look at the shoddy contracts, at the railroad contracts, and at the cattle contracts, where tens of millions were stolen from the public Treasury, and all under the management of Secretary Cameron. Look at the frauds practiced in the purchase of ships, where Secretary Wells pays his brother-in-law, Morgan, nearly a thousand dollars a day for months together. Look at Secretary Chase's missionaries to Port Royal, where millions of the people's money has been squandered upon lazy, vicious, and unprincipled scamps. And look at Simon Stevens and hundreds of others—some idea of the enormity of their crimes may be had by referring to the speeches of Hale, Dawes, Van Wyck and Washburn, the last of which, was chairman, I believe, of the investigating committee. And then look at the speeches of Conkling, Stevens, Sumner, Chandler and others, making an effort to cover up these frauds, and then tell us how much "pure and lofty patriotism" can be found at the capital of the nation. But I have not time now to follow up this subject, which indeed is inexhaustible. I may refer to it again, and in the meantime will close with a quotation from the Albany Evening Journal, a good Republican paper. It says:

"We have seen * * an exhibition of dishonesty and recklessness the most appalling and the most sickening in the annals of human crime. We have seen a government trembling on the verge of dissolution, preyed upon by an army of insatiate cormorants, plucked and plundered without stint and without remorse by confidence men and sharpers, and delivered over to the tender mercies of a class of wretches more cruel and more remorseless than Southern traitors. We have seen hordes of contractors, bankrupt in fortune and still more bankrupt in fame, invading the national capital like an army of locusts, doging the footsteps of Secretaries, boasting of their intimacy with chiefs of bureaus and thrusting themselves even within the precincts of the Executive Mansion. We have seen, in the midst of a crisis that threatened our national existence, a saturnalia of thieves and plunderers. We have seen men of the most infamous lives worming their way into the confidence of high officials and retiring from the disgraceful scramble for pelf and place, gorged with spoils.

"This is certain; if the cause of the Union fails—which God forbid!—the blame and the guilt must rest, not so much with the army of Jeff. Davis at the South, as with the army of plunderers at the North."

The News.

Saturday, March, 19th.

The House Committee on Commerce have ordered to be reported a resolution authorizing the President to give notice to Great Britain of the abrogation and termination of the Reciprocity Treaty, as soon as it can be done under the provisions thereof.

An Army of the Potomac dispatch states that all officers now absent must return before Gen. Grant commences its reorganization. This is a movement in the proper direction.

We have partial returns from the Arkansas elections, indicating beyond a doubt the election of Gov. Murry and the whole State ticket. The new State Constitution is almost unanimously ratified.—Thus Arkansas wheels into the Union a free State.

Last evening a fire broke out in the New Presbyterian Church at Elmira, New York, during the progress of the Sanitary Fair at that place, which was soon entirely consumed with its contents. We are without the details of the catastrophe, but is is feared that some of the visitors perished in the flames.

Advices from Vicksburg state that three brigades of troops had left that city, and that the 16th Army Corps had also gone south. These forces are supposed to have gone to co-operate with Gen. Banks. There is every indication of important movements in Lousiana, the result of which the country will learn in due time. The single fact that Gen. Banks heads the expedition in person, is a sure guaranty that it is an affair of no ordinary magnitude. Preparations for this movement have been in progress for some weeks, and now that the 16th Army Corps have left Vicksburg to join in the enterprise. it will have a tendency to increase public interest in its success.

Gens. Burnside and Hancock in company with Gov. Curtin reviewed several regiments at Harrisburg on Thursday.—Burnside's corps is concentrating at Annapolis, preparatory, it is intimated, to a return to North Carolina. Hancock is to return to the Army of the Potomac.

Stuart, with a body of rebel cavalry, has crossed the Rappahannock, near Fredericksburg, and is threatening a raid on the Baltimore & Railroad.

An extensive conspiracy has been discovered in Kentucky, said to have for its object the annexation of Kentucky to the Southern Confederacy.

Minister Dayton has notified the Emperor Napoleon that in case the rebel pirate Rappahannock is permitted to leave Calais and put to sea, that government will be held responsible for all incursions made by the said vessel upon American commerce.

Gens. Grant and Sherman arrived at Cincinnati on Sunday morning, the former en route for Washington.

The excitement about Stuart's raid has subsided, although he is reported to be massing his forces at Charlottsville.

The 1st Michigan Cavalry arrived at the front of the Army of the Potomac on Saturday.

The 6th Michigan heavy Artillery, veteran volunteers, arrived at Cairo on Saturday en route for home.

The rumor that a rebel force was moving on Barboursville, in Western Virginia, is contradicted. It is said that the enemy are preparing for an unknown movement in the neighborhood of New River.

Advices from New Orleans state that an extensive raid had just been made by Col. Texas in the Pearl River country.—The sentiment of the people was found to be unmistakeably Union.

The new Governor of Montana is reported to be Ex-Representative Kellogg, of Illinois.

The notorious guerrilla chief Col. Hamilton has been captured in Tennessee.

The Red River expedition of Gen. Banks is beginning to assume form and shape. The objective point is probably Alexandria, as a fleet of Admiral Porter's gunboats has already left New Orleans for that place. It is believed that an understanding has been entered into between Gen. Banks and Gen. Steele by which the latter will co-operate in driving out the rebel troops from southern Arkansas and northern Louisiana.

Our dispatches indicate that the rebel army in Virginia are beginning to swarm again, threatening our communications at several points. One force is said to be moving down the Shenandoah Valley, and there are signs of movements on every hand. The spring is so far advanced that a serious movement of the rebel army is probable at any moment. Already skirmishing has commenced at the front and everything betokens the early renewal of active hostillities.

A Washington dispatch contains an improbable account of a plot to take the President prisoner and convey him within the rebel lines. The plot probably had its origin in the fertile brain of some sensation paragraphist.

Gen. Custer is recovering from the injuries received by being thrown from a carriage.

Scraps of News.

—An accident occurred to Maj. Gen. Hartsuff on Saturday last, at Fort Gratiot by which he received a severe injury to his leg.

—A young man named Augustus Hines was accidentally drowned on Saturday last in Tittabawasse River, a few miles below Midlan city.

—The Idaho fever has broken out at Charlotte, and a number of enterprising individuals at that place are making arraugements to start for that Eldorado early in April.

—A large quantity of real estate is changing hands this spring at Ann Arbor and vicinity. One farm of 300 acres, called the Lowry farm, was recently sold for $60 per acre, or for $18,000.

—It is stated that the wheat in Lexington county has suffered much from the severity of the winter. Many fields have the appearance of being entirely winter-killed, while but few retain their wonted thrift and greenness.

—On Sunday last a young man named Clarkins was shot in the streets of Ann Arbor. He was standing on the corner of one of the public streets, when he accosted four men who were passing. One of them turned, drew a revolver and wantonly shot him, the ball passing through both thighs, rendering the amputation of one of them necessary. The Miscreant who fired the weapon is still at large.

—One George Lumberg, of Port Huron, was arrested the other day on a charge of keeping a disorderly house, convicted and fined $100.

—Lieut, Goodwin, 16th U. S. Infantry, mustering and disbursing officer, was at Kalamazoo a few days since paying the new recruits of the 3d Michigan Battery.

—Dr. Ed. Chaphan, of Kalamazoo, holds a Professorship in the Medical College at Keokuck, Iowa, and gave the address at the opening of the term on the 1st inst.

—A considerable quantity of maple sugar is being manufactured at Hastings. It is selling there at a shilling a pound.—The Gratiot News thinks a great deal will be made in that county this season.

—A company recently starting at St. Johns to go to Idaho have concluded to look before they leap, and to send two or three delegates to that Territory on a tour of observation and exploration. If these pioneers report favorably, the balance of the company will "emigrate."

—The rebel prisoners at Camp Douglas, at Chicago, have recently adopted a novel way to correspond with the outside world. They suddenly took to kite flying extensively, but by a curious coincidence all the strings seemed to break and let the kites fly away. The commandant of the post suspecting something in the wind ordered a pursuit of one of the escaping kites and a couple of letters disclosing a plot to escape were directed to a Chicago Copperhead, with the direction to be forwarded to the Hon. Mr.——, at Louisville, Ky. The letters will probably not reach their destination and kite flying has ceased to be a popular amusement at Camp Douglas.

—A party of burglars recently entered the union depot, at Troy, N. Y., and after blowing up the large safe, succeeded in robbing the Central Railroad Company of $500, and the receiver, Mr. H. F. Coggswell, of $80. The lock of the safe was filled with powder which was ignited with a slow fuse. The watchman was absent at the time attending to the switches.—No clue was obtained to the burglars.—The whole affair is considered one of the boldest burglaries that has occurred in that city for a long time.

The Wine Plant.

The cultivation of this plant, and the manufacture of Wine from it, has engaged the attention of the citizens of some counties to a great extent within the past year. The great profit to be derived from the investment of the capital and labor required, and the pleasantness and medicinal qualities of the beverage itself, have induced many to embark in the enterprise, and none, so far as we know, have yet been disappointed in their expectations. Read the following testimonials:

KINGSVILLE, March, 2, 1864.

To G. S. HULBERT:—I hereby express my confidence in the Rhubarb Wine,—having made a quantity of the same, which I deem superior to any manufactured of American grapes. It is now six months old only, and I have sold $160 00 worth already, at from $2.00 to $3.00 per gallon. I heartily recommend it as a wine of great medical efficiency, and a money-making business.

ROBERT SMITH.

I have been afflicted with bloating of the Liver, for more than a year and a half, to such an extent that it sorely troubled me to work, eat, or wear my clothes. In this condition I naturally sought medical aid, and expended much without benefit. My last resort was to try the "American Sherry," and, to my great surprise, found relief within two weeks. I am now entirely rid of this affliction.

S. K. CARTER.

KINGSVILLE, March 2, '64.

From the Binghampton Daily Times.

Dr. Marsh, Inspector of the U. S. Sanitary Commission for the [illegible] the South, says: "Rhubarb Wine is the best remedy for Dysentary and Diarrhoea yet known.

"This wine we should suppose would be in general use in our camps, for the benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers." Important, from one who has been five years in the business.

DOES IT PAY?—For an experiment I made, in Fall of 1858, about 100 gallons of wine from the "Strawberry Variety." Since that time I have made from 1500 to 4000 gallons per annum.—making (exclusive of the 100 gallons for experiment) five crops of wine, is all over 13,000 gallons. Nearly all of the above named amount of wine, of sufficient age, I have sold at $2.00 and $1.75 per gallon, according to quantity.

Profits per gallon.—I report my nett profits, to the Government Assessor, at One Dollar per gallon, above all taxes, interest, or other expenses. But in stating my profits, the present prices of everything are fully taken into account. * * * The thousands of gallons I am selling of the "American Sherry" I have never sold at a less price, by the largest quantity, than $1 75 per gallon.

Merits and Popularity of the Wine.—For taste and flavor this wine is universally admitted, by competent judges, to be a very superior article; and some can scarcely be persuaded that it is not an extra quality of grape wine. No physician fails to count it an extraordinary medicinal wine, who has had the good fortune to become acquainted with it, and many are even very enthusiastic over its medicinal properties.

I. R. MUDGE.

BELVIDERE, ILL., Dec. 15, '64.

To Whom it May Concern.

This may certify that I have used successfully, as a stimulant alterative and medicinal diffusive agent, an article of wine manufactured from a particular species of rheum, well known, and extensively cultivated in this vicinity. I regard it as preferable to most stimulants, from its great purity and from its containing at the same time medicinal properties safe and reliable.

E. H. BARNES, M. D.

MARATHON, CORTLAND CO., N. Y.

I fully concur with Dr. Barnes, in the above statement.

E. M. WEBSTER, M. D.

KINGSVILLE, Oct. 2d, 1863.

Having grown this plant extensively we are prepared to furnish the Roots in such quantities as may suit purchasers, also the wine.

☞ Wood usually expected at this office. Charges responsible.

All kinds of Job Printing neatly executed at this office.

☞ The printer wants some wood on subscription.

☞ Maple sugar is legal tender for subscription to the Herald.

☞ Extra copies of the Herald can be procured at Ketcham's News Depot.

☞ Be sure and read the interesting description of Belle Island, which we publish on the first page.

☞ Two men, named Smith and Grizzle, had each three fingers sawn off by a huge saw at Hudson, on Monday.

☞ At a meeting of the new Village Board held last Monday evening M. Hyde was appointed Street Commissioner.

☞ Most all of our merchants are now, in the eastern cities buying new Goods. When they return be sure and call on those, that advertise for they sell much the cheapest.

☞ James Brackett, Esq., the builder, and for some years the owner of the Brackett House at Adrian, has been elected Mayor of Rochester, N. Y.

☞ We are having a perfect rush of job printing. Everybody appears to understand the fact that the Herald office is the place to get job work done in good style, and cheap.

☞ Mr. James Gedder, an esteemed citizen of Adrian, died suddenly at that place on Saturday evening, of disease of the heart. The deceased was an unmarried man, 56 years of age. He had filled the office of County Treasurer for six consecutive years.

☞ The following boys who went from this village have lately been promoted for meritorious conduct.

First Lieut. Weatherhead, of Co. K, to be Captain of Co. A

Second Lieut. Samuel M. Kneeland, of Co. I, to be 1st Lieutenant of Co. E

Second Lieut. Chas. Hewett, of Co. E, to be 1st Lieutenant of Co A.

☞ One of those rare occurrences which fall to the lot of but few, took place at Adrian on Monday afternoon and evening—a golden wedding. After 50 years of married life, Mr. Herman N. Hart and Mrs. Miriam Leonard Hart were permitted to celebrate the golden anniversary of their wedding, at their home in that city.

☞ Music Morning at Sherman.

☞ Valuable for the Soldier. Brown's Bronchial Troches will be found invaluable to the soldier in camp, exposed to sudden changes,—affording prompt relief in cases of cough, colds, etc. For officers and those who over-tax the voice, they are useful in relieving Irritated Throats, and will render articulation easy. As there are imitations, be sure to Obtain the genuine.

☞ Bread, Biscuit, Cakes and Puddings, going through the process of baking, change all the substance of Herrick Allen's Gold Medal Saleratus into carbonic acid Gas, which then passes away, so that there is not a particle of it remaining in the food in which it is used, thereby making it perfectly wholesome and healthy, and peculiarly adapted to weak stomachs and dyspetic persons.—Grocers and druggists sell it.

☞ We again call attention to the fact that we now have a first class hotel in Tecumseh—the Exchange. A thing long needed. The "old folks" had a social hop there on Thursday eve of last week and all seemed satisfied with the arrangements of the house. G. H. Wells, the gentlemanly proprietor has secured the services of A. J. Ream as clerk of the house; and, our word for it, Jack will do all in his power to make the stay of the travelers pleasant. Their tables are always loaded with the best the market affords, and their charges are reasonable. If you ever stop at Tecumseh be sure and "fall up" at the Exchange.

Our Quotas and Credits.

The Detroit Advertiser and Tribune, of the 10th inst., gives a list of the quota and credits of this Congressional District up to March 1, 1864, as they appear upon the official list. All the towns but Rome in this County have more than made up their repective quotas:

TERMS:—One dollar and fifty cents per year if paid in advance; one dollar and seventy-five cents if paid within three months, and two dollars invariably after that time.

ANNUAL TAXES FOR 1864.

The attention of tax payers is hereby called to the provisions of the United States excise law relative to the assessment of Annual Taxes.

By the sixth section of the act of July 1st, 1862, it is made the duty of all persons, Partnerships, Firms, Associations, or Corporations, made liable to any annual duty, license or tax, on or before the first Monday of May in each year, to make a list or return to the Assistant Assessor of the district where located, of the amount of annual income, the articles or objects charged with a special tax and the business or occupation liable to pay any license.

Every person who shall fail to make such return by the day specified will be liable to be assessed by the Assessor according to the best information which he can obtain: And in such case the assessor is required to add fifty per centum to the amount of the items of such list.

Every person who shall deliver to an Assessor any false or fraudulent list or statement with intent to evade the valuation or enumeration required by law, is subject to a fine of Five Hundred dollars; and in such case the list will be made out by the Assessor or Assistant Assessor, and from the valuation and enumeration so made there can be no appeal.

Payment of the annual taxes, except those for License, will not be demanded until the thirtieth day of June, 1864.

Blanks will be ready to make returns, if success, information will be furnished by Jonathan H. Green, Assistant Assessor for the eighth division, to whom the returns should be delivered on or before the first Monday of May, at his office, in Tecumseh.

JOSEPH C. BENNET,
U. S. Assessor 1st Dist. of Mich

Tecumseh, February 27, 1864

In the matter of the estate of Sarah A. Cole late of Tecumseh, State of Michigan, deceased.

Notice is hereby given that by virtue of a license and authority to me granted by the Judge of Probate in and for the County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, I will sell to the highest bidder, at Public Auction, to be held at the office of Hills and Baxter in the village of Tecumseh, in said County of Lenawee and State of Michigan, on Saturday the 20th, day of February next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon of that day, all the right, title and interest of said Sarah A. Cole minor of, in or to the following described premises, lands or parcels of land lying, situated being in the township and village of Tecumseh, County of Lenawee and State of Michigan to wit:

All that piece or parcel of land, in the village of Tecumseh, county of Lenawee and State of State of Michigan bounded by a line commencing on the west line of Ottowa street in said village, eleven rods south of the south-west corner of Ottowa and Chicago streets in said village, and running thence west to lands of M. A. Patterson, thence south five rods, thence east to said Ottowa street, thence north on the west line of said Ottowa street to the place of beginning, containing about fifty-five roads of land more or less.

Also, a vacant lot of land in the east half of the north east quarter of section twenty-eight (28) in town five (5) south of range four (4) east and described as follows, commencing at a point ten roads north of the line between sections 28 and 33, in said town, and eighty-one rods and one link west of the line between section 27 and 28; thence north ten rods, thence east eight rods, thence south ten rods, thence west to the place of begining, and containing eighty rods of land, more or less.

Also, another piece of land situate in the said east half of the north east quarter of section twenty eight, commencing at a point twenty-four roads north of the line between said sections 28 and 33, eighty-one rods and one link west of the line between sections 27 and 28, thence north ten rods, thence east eight rods, thence south ten rods, thence west to the place of begining, and containing eighty rods of land more or less.

Also, another piece of land situate in the said east half of the north east quarter of section twenty eight, commencing at a point twenty-four roads north of the line between said sections 28 and 33, eighty-one rods and one link west of the line between sections 27 and 28, thence north ten rods, thence east eight rods, thence south ten rods, thence west to the place of begining, and containing eighty rods of land, more or less, excepting therefrom two rods of land in width on the west side of said premises for public use as a highway, and all of said lands being also subject to the right of dower in the widow of Stephen E. Cole deceased.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 16th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Garrett N. Hunt deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Jacob Snyder a creditor of said deceased praying that said petitioner may be appointed Administrator of said estate.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 1st day of February next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

—o—

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness on knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleaned or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will sew over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the "Slack Thread" equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent. more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,
EDWARD GWINELL,

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

Rapid Sale

and consequent profit to the Proprietor, thus enabling him to expend

Many Thousands

of dollars each year in advertising their merits, and publishing the

Numerous Certificates

which have been showered upon him from

All parts of the Country.

The peculiarity of the

Blood Purifier and Pills

is that they strike at the root of Disease, by eradicating every particle of impurity

In the Blood,

for the life and health of the body depends upon the purity of the blood.

If the blood is poisoned, the body drags out a miserable existence. These medicines

Tumors,	Eruptions,
Fits, Scrofulous Consumption, etc.

ONE person writes, her daughter was cured of fits of nine years' standing, and St Vitus' dance of two years.

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away. The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years. Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

Blood and Liver Pill,

with, in conjunction with the

Blood Purifier,

will cure all the aforementioned diseases, and, of themselves, will relieve and cure

MONEY EASILY MADE,

By Either Gentlemen or Ladies.

I am in possession of a BEAUTIFUL FRENCH ART which has been introduced in this country only to a limited extent, and that in New York City. It is something which every person stands in great need of, consequently will be extensively patronized. Persons can make money with it at home or abroad. Thousands in France have made small fortunes at it, and are still doing so—I would state what it is, but persons purchasing the knowledge of it do not desire it made public. One Dollar sent to the undersigned will ensure the immediate return of a Circular giving full information in the Art, and the requisite instructions to pursue it. It is strictly genteel, and the best and only thing ever introduced which every person can make money at. NO LETTERS NOTICED, except those containing the required amount for instructions.

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $40.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS Sewing Machine is the best and cheapest machine for Family Sewing,

Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances to survive the wash-tub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Traveller.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair.—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced Machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1858.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibb's Sewing Machine. We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others."—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have experience in our own family."—Boston Traveller.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine used by our fellow-citizens of Philadelphia."—The stitch is unexceptionable.

DR. JOHN L. LYON'S

FRENCH PERIODICAL DROPS.

THE GREAT

FEMALE REGULATOR,

Are the only known remedy that will successfully and invariably restore and regulate the female system, removing all irregularities, and producing health, vigor and strength.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are a fluid preparation, the only one of the kind ever discovered in this country, and acts directly on the parts affected, whilst pills and powders can only reach them as they work through sympathy, but not at all direct and positive.

Are you suffering from a constant anxiety for the regular return of nature's prescribed laws?

Give yourself no uneasiness, for Lyon's Periodical Drops, if taken a day or two before the expected period, will positively and invariably regulate its coming, as sure as effect follows cause, as certain as daylight follows darkness.

Are you sick, enfeebled by disease, or unable to bear the labor and danger of increase?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Come to you as a blessing, for is not prevention better than cure?

If regularly taken, it is a certain preventive, and will save you much peril and many hours of suffering.

Have you been afflicted for many years with complaints incident to the sex, that have baffled the skill of physicians, and are hurrying you on to an early grave?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are the most reliable regulator ever known, and cure, like magic, all those irregularities that have defied the doctor's skill.

Will you waste away with suffering from Leucorrhœa, Prolapsus, Dysmenorrhœa, and a thousand other difficulties, all summed up under the name of suppressed and obstructed nature, when an investment of one dollar in

will surely save you?

Do not use the drops when forbidden in the directions, for although a positive cure, and harmless at all other times, they are so powerful and finely calculated to adjust and govern the functions of the sexual organism, that, if taken at improper times, they would produce results contrary to nature, against which all, particularly those who would reproduce, should carefully guard.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Cannot harm the most delicate constitution at any time; yet the proprietors wish to guard against its misuse, hoping that a thousand bottles will be used for a good purpose where one is used for an illegitimate one.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS.

the never failing Female Regulator, is for sale by every Druggist, in both city and country, and do not, if you value your health and wish for a reliable medicine, buy any other. Take no other, but if the Druggist to whom you apply has not got it, make him send and get it for you.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in its native town, and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quantity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound. It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to child, ren of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

☞ No Family should be Without it.

It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you. It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures it has made.

A Positive and Specific Remedy.

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the ABSOLUTE into healthy action, by which the WATER on CALCEOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENGORGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for MEN, WOMEN, and CHILDREN.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early Indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which the medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITE, EPILEPTIC FITS,

in one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION.

Many are aware of the causes of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of the assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

When This Cruel War is Over!

Dearest Sal, do you remember,
When I marched away,
With my gun upon my shoulder,
Looking neat and gay:
Now those shining regimentals,
All in rags appear,
Darns and patches all about them,
Awful times out here.

CHORUS.

Weeping and lonely,
Lord how bad I feel,
When this cruel war is over,
Praying for a good square meal.

I used to sport a diamond breastpin,
Patent leather boots,
Take my betters at the Carlton,
Coffee at Masbutts.
Now the case is slightly altered,
Here we've got to work,
On biscuits twice as hard as brickbats,
And gutta percha pork.

And of course you all remember
How I used to spree,
A dashing gay old fashioned lobster
Was only fun for me
Here in company with whisky,
Nary time I've been,
Pay a quarter to the sutler,
And only get camphene.

How I miss my plate of fishballs,
And my oyster stew;
Hoping that I'll soon have plenty,
Of beef and mutton too,
We will know no more of sorrow,
Married you and I.
Every thing will then be lovely,
And the goose hang high.
Chorus—Weeping, &c.

What came of a Valentine.

On the evening of the 13th of February 1850, two young men sat in a comfortably furnished room in a large New York boarding house. A bright fire glowing in the grate, well chosen engravings adorned the walls and a bright light was diffused about the room from an Argand burner.

Let me introduce the occupants of the apartment as Tom Stacy and John Wilbur, young men of twenty-five or thereabouts, who were known in business circles as C[illegible] Wilbur, retail dry-good dealers, No.—Broadway. They had not been [illegible] long, but were already doing unusually well. They had taken apartments together, one of which is now presented to the reader.

"Has it occurred to you Wilbur," asked his [illegible], removing his cigar and knocking away the ashes, 'to-morrow is St. Valentine's day?'

'Yes, I thought of it this afternoon, as I was walking up from the store.'

'So did I and to some purpose too, as I will show you.'

Tom Stacy went to a drawer and drew out a gorgeous valentine, an elaborate combination of hearts, doves &c.

'What do you think I gave for that?' he asked.

'I don't know I'm sure. It appears to be very elegant.'

'It cost me ten dollars.'

'Whew!' whistled Wilbur. 'It strikes me you are very extravagant or very devoted. May I know what fair damsel is to be made glad by the receipt of this elegant missive.

'That's my secret,' said Tom, laughing, 'I don't mind telling you, however. It's to go to Edith Castleton.'

'I presume you feel particularly interested in the young lady?'

'Not at all, but I told her I would send her a valentine, et la voila! Shan't you conform to the custom of the day?'

'I had not thought of it,' said John, thoughtfully, 'but I believe I will.'

'And what fair lady will you select as the recipient?'

'You remember the poor seamstress who occupies an attic in the house.'

'Yes, I have met her on the stairs two or three times.'

'She looks as if times were hard with her. I think I'll sent her a valentine.'

'And what good do you think it will do her?' asked Stacy, in surprise.

'Wait till you see the kind of valentine I will send.'

Wilbur went to his desk, and taking out a sheet of note paper, drew from his portmonnie a ten dollar bill, wrapped it in a paper, on which he had previously written, 'From Saint Valentine,' and placed the whole in an envelope.

'There,' said he,' my valentine has cost as much as yours, and I venture to say it will be as welcome.'

'You are right. I wish now I had not bought this costly trifle. However, as it is purchased I will send it.'

The morrow dawned clear and frosty. It was lively enough for those who sat by comfortable fires and dined at luxurious tables, but for the poor who shared none of these advantages it was indeed a bitter day.

In an attic room, meanly furnished, sat a young girl, pale and thin. She was cowering over a scanty wood fire, the best she could afford, which heated the room very insufficiently. She was sewing steadily, shievering from time to time as the cold blast shook the windows and found its way through the crevices.

Poor child! Life had a very black aspect for her on that winter day. She was alone in the world. There was absolutely no one on whom she could call for assistance though she need it sorely enough. The thought came to her more than once in her discomfort. 'Is it worth while living any longer?' But she recoiled from the sin of suicide. She might starve to death, but she would not take the life God had given her.

Plunged in gloomy thought she continued to work. All at once a step was heard ascending the staircase which led to her room. Then there was a knock at the door. She arose in some surprise and opened it, thinking it must be the landlady or one of the servants.

She was right. It was a servant.

'Here's a letter for you that the postboy brought, Miss Morris.'

'A letter for me!' repeated Helen Morris, in surprise, taken it from the servant's hand. Who can have written to m-?

'Maybe it's a valentine, Miss,' said the girl, laughing. 'You know this is Valentine's day. More by token, I've got two myself this morning. One's a karaker (caricature i) so mistress calls it. Just look at it.'

Bridget displayed a highly embellished pictorial representation of a female hard at work at the washtub, the cast of beauty being decidedly Hibernian.

Helm Morris laughed absently, but did not open her letter while Bridget remained—a little to the disappointment of the curious damsel.

Helen slowly opened the envelope. A bank note of ten dollars dropped from it to the floor. She eagerly read the few words on the paper.

'From St. Valentine.'

'Heaven be praised!' she said, folding her hands gratefully. 'This sum will enable me to carry out the plan which I had in view.'

Eight years passed away. Eight years with their lights and shadows, their joys and sorrows. They brought with them the merry voices of children—they brought with them new made graves—happiness to some and grief to others.

Towards the last they brought the great commercial crisis of '57, when houses that seemed built upon a rock tottered at once to their fall. Do not many remember that time all too well, when merchants, with anxious faces, ran from one to another to solicit help and met only averted faces and distrustful looks?

And how was it in that time of universal famine with our friends—Stacy & Wilbur?

Up to 1857 they had been doing an excellent business. They had gradually enlarged the sphere of their operations, and were rapidly growing rich, when this crash came.

They immediately took in sail. Both were prudent, and both felt that this was the time when this quality was urgently needed.

By great efforts they had succeeded in keeping up till the 14th of February, 1858. On that morning a note of two thousand dollars came due. This was their last peril. That surmounted, they would be able to go on with assured confidence. But alas! this was the rock of which they had the most apprehension.—They had taxed their resources to the utmost. They had called upon their friends, but their friends were employed in taking care of themselves, and the selfish policy was the one required then.

'Look out for number one' superseded the golden rule for the time being.

As I have said, two thousand dollars were due on the 14th of February.

'How much have you got towards it' asked Wilbur, as Stacy came in at eleven o'clock.

'Three hundred and seventy-five,' was the dispirited reply.

'Was that all you could raise?' inquired his partner, turning pale.

'All!'

'Are you sure you thought of everybody?'

'I have been everywhere. I'm fagged to death,' was the weary reply of Stacy, as he sank exhausted into a chair.

'Then the crash must come,' and Wilbur, with a gloomy resignation.

'I suppose it must.'

There was silence. Neither felt inclined to say anything. For six months they had been struggling with the tide.—They could see shore, but in sight of it they must go down.

At this moment a note was brought in by a boy. There was no postmark.—Evidently he was a special messenger.

It was opened at once by Mr. Wilbur, to whom it was directed. It contained these few words.

If Mr. John Wilbur will call immediately at No.—Fifth Avenue, he will learn something to his great advantage.'

'There was no signature.'

John Wilber read it with surprise and passed it to his partner. 'What does it mean do you think?'

'I don't know,' was the reply; 'but I advise you to go at once.'

'It seems to be in a femenine handwriting,' said Wilber.

'Yes. Don't you know any lady on Fifth Avenue?'

'None.'

'Well, it is worth noticing. We have met with so little to our advantage lately that it will be a refreshing variety.'

In five minutes John Wilbur jumped into a horse car, and was on his way to No. — Fifth Avenue. He walked up to the door of a magnificent brown stone house and rang the bell. He was instantly admitted, and shown into the drawing room superbly furnished.

He did not wait long An elegantly dressed lady, scarcely thirty, entered and, bowing, said, "You do not remember me Mr. Wilbur."

We will waive that, then, and proceed to business. How has your house borne the crisis in which so many of our large firms have gone down?"

John Wilbur smiled bitterly.—

'We have struggled successfully till to-day,' he answered. 'But the end has come. Unless we can raise a certain sum by two, we are ruined.'

'What sum will save you?' was the lady's question.'

"The note due is two thousand dollars. Towards which we have but three hundred and seventy-five.'

'Excuse me a moment,' said his hostess. She left the room but quickly returned.

"There,' said she, handing a small strip of paper to John Wilbur, 'is my check for two thousand dollars. You can repay it at your convenience. If you should require more, come to me again.'

"Madame, you have saved us,' exclaimed Wilbur, springing to his feet in delight, 'What can have inspired in you such a benevolent interest in our prosperity?'

'Do you remember, Mr. Wilbur,' said the lady, 'a certain valentine, containing a ten dollar note, which you sent to a young girl occupying an attic room in your lodging house, eight years since?'

'I do most distinctly. I have wondered what became of that young girl. I think her name was Helen Morris.'

'She stands before you,' was the quiet response.

'You, Helen Morris!' exclaimed Wilbur, starting back in amazement. 'You surrounded with luxury!'

'No wonder you are surprised. Life has strange contrasts. The money which you sent me seemed to come from God. I was on the brink of despair. With it I put my wardrobe in repair, and made application for the post companion to a wealthy lady. I had been with her but two years when a gentleman in her circle, immensely wealthy, offered me his hand in marriage. I esteemed him. He was satisfied with that. A year since he died, leaving me this house and an immense fortune. I have never forgotten you, having accidently learned that my timely succor came from you. I resolved, if fortune ever put it in my power, I would befriend you as you befriended me. That time has come. I have paid the first installment of my debt. Helen Eustance remembers the obligations of Helen Morris.'

John Wilbur advanced, and respectfully took her hand. 'You have nobly repaid me, said he. "Will you also award me the privilege of occasionally calling upon you?'

'I shall be most happy,' said Mrs. Eustance cordially.

John took a hurried leave and returned to his store as the clock struck one. He showed his delighted partner the check which he had just received. 'I haven't time to explain,' he said, "this must be cashed at once."

Two o'clock came and the firm was saved—save from their last peril. Henceforth, they met nothing but prosperous gales.

What more?

Helen Eustance has again changed her name, She is now Helen Wilbur, and her husband now lives at No. —, Fifth Avenue.

And all this came of a valentine.

A Mormon Elder's Story.

A Mormon Elder thus relates the story of his career: "I was a lawyer in Waterloo, Illinois, when I first heard of the 'Latter Day Saints' at Nauvoo, and I never had an hour's peace until I had joined them, and now see how well I am fixed! I have no servants—my wives do all that, and everything goes on smoothly and easily, just like the wheels in a clock. I was married to Margaret, my first, 20 years before I become a Saint. When I went to Nauvoo she began to get weak, and I took Lizzie to wife, in order to assist in the household. She was young, it is true, but then that was all the better, because she could work. I had offspring by her. She and Margaret began to quarrel; so when we came to Utah a few years ago, I met with Nina, a German lass, and I took her to wife. She has proved a capital work girl, and assisted matters wonderfully in a hotel and boarding house which I then started. (Some one suggesting that he should have been contented with this number of wives, and stopped at Nina, the Elder continued:) Going out with some brethren to meet a long train, and to get a few things cheap, I saw Rachel, and like Jacob of old, saw her but to love her. But in all these and such like transactions, I consulted the Lord, and in a vision was commanded to take Rachel to wife. She refused for a long time, and treated me unkindly; but brethren advised and told her how wicked it was in woman to oppose the commands of God directly given in a vision. She consented, and I was happy—supremely happy. This continued; all my wives worked hard for the common good, and we prospered in the Lord, until one day a party of Gentiles on their way to the States stopped at my house, since which time Rachel has never been the same. I groaned and complained to the Lord in prayer, and in a vision was caught up to the first heaven, where I learned from one of our departed saints that the vile image of some young Gentile and sinner had filled her mind and corrupted her heart. I did not wish to report her to the church, but informed her that God was displeased with her frowning face, and that if she did not return to meekness and duty, he would turn the heart of his elder against her, and that his affection would be given to another. The Lord commanded me to go and meet the train. I did so. I saw Emily seated under a tent—her hair all loose; my heart was smitten, and I heard a voice which said, "Elder Henry, that is she of whom I spoke; take her to thy home, love and cherish her."

Egyptian Legends.

While walking along the banks of the river, we shot a small, beautiful bird called silk-sak by the Arabs, concerning which the Egyptian peasants have a curious legend, pretending that when the crocodile in fine, calm, sunny days ascends out of the river to sleep upon some sandy islet, this bird always keeps near, and, if danger approaches, takes care to awaken him by his sharp note. They add another particular, which, however fabulous it may be, has prevailed from the age of Herodotus down to the present day, and seems to be founded on the physical structure of the bird. The silk-sak, which is undoubtedly the trochilus of Herodotus, is armed at the point of each shoulder of the wing with a small, sharp horn, like the talons of an eagle, the use of which the Arabs, with their habitual ingenuity, explain as follows: The crocodile, they say, being at times tormented by a noxious kind of vermin which creep into his throat and suck his blood, lies down on the sand and instinctively opens his mouth. The crocodile, forgetting the presence of his friend, sometimes closes his mouth and imprisons him, upon which the silk sak, which is purposely armed for the occasion, lifts up its wings, and picking the tender sides of his throat with his sharp horns, quickly procures itself a safe return to upper air. Whatever may be thought of this legend, it is very certain that the crocodile is rarely seen unattended by one or more of these birds, which seem to approach him fearlessly, and to stand quite within his reach upon the sand.

Write your name by kindness, love and mercy, on the hearts of the people you come in contact with every day, and you will never be forgotten.

The Miseries of Wealth.

It is to have a subscription paper handed you every hour in the day, and be called a niggard if you refuse your name. It is to eat turkey, and drink wine, at a dearer rate than your neighbors. It is to have every college, infirmary, and asylum, make a run upon the bank of your benevolence, and then wonder at the smallness of the dividend. It is to have sectarians contend for the keeping of your conscience, and lawyers struggle for the keeping of your purse. It is to be taxed for more than you are worth, and never be believed when you say so. It is to have addition of dollars, substraction of comforts, and multiplication of anxieties, and in division among spendthrift heirs. It is to have the interest of every one about you exceed their principle. It is to make up to the merchant all the profits he loses by knavery, or frugality. It is never to be allowed to be upon easy terms, even with a coat, or a shoe. It is to be married for your money, or have a wife always casting up the sum total of the dollars she brought. It is to have your son's steps surrounded by "man-traps," and your daughter made a target for the speculating and selfish to aim at. It is to measure friendship by the length of your purse, to buy flattery and sell happiness. It is to have debtors smile upon you, and knaves shake you by the hand. Is is to have a dyspeptic wife, and pale children. It is to have sons go to college to buy themes of wiser heads, and daughters' brains turned by the flattery of fools. It is to be invited to drink poor wine, that you may give better in return. It is to have your lady's peace disturbed by a higher feather, or a brighter diamond. It is to buy green peas at nine shillings, and relish them not, because your neighbor gives two dollars. It is to have relations wish you a short life and a long will. It is to have your widow mourn bitterly, provided her fortune depends on perpetual widowhood. It is to have more temptations in this world than other men; and lastly, to find the entrance to a better, more difficult than the rest of mankind.

The Culture of Onions.

The extraordinary rise in the price of onions, caused by the great demand in our camps and army hospitals for this valuable most valuable of all common vegetables, anti scorbuticts, has doubtless sufficiently indicated to intelligent farmers, that the onion crop will be one of the most profitable which they can cultivate this season. In order to assist them in this most promising work, we copy the following hint from the communication of a farmer to a Western paper:

"The prevailing opinion is that to grow good onions, the sets grown the previous year should be planted. This is an error. Better onions and larger crops can be grown from seed than from sets. The seed should be first sown in a hot-bed as thick as they can stand. As soon as the seed is up, open the beds to the air, and water freely. In April prepare your ground and plant the sets from the hot-bed, singly, one by one, three inches asunder, in rows ten inches apart. If the ground is very good and they are well cultivated, you may have eight hundred bushels from an acre."

A Story with a Moral.

A goat in Webster, which was noted for its combativeness, was walking on a pond in that town, says the Times, when he came to a hole in the ice made by some fishermen, and espied his face in the water. Thinking that he saw one of his fellows, he concluded that this was an opportunity not to be lost, and at once prepared for his usual attack. Drawing back a few feet, he lowered his head, shook his caudle appendage spasmodically, and at a tremendous pace rushed upon his shadow. But the old fellow went into the hole out of sight, under the ice in a twinkling, nor has he since been seen.

The Tecumseh Herald

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAR. 31, 1864.

The Spring Campaign.

The spring campaign of the fourth, and we would fain hope, last year of the Rebellion, has now fairly opened. On every side are heard the well known notes of preparation, and soon we may look for the clash of arms.

The success upon Red River, in the far South-west, was a brilliant and almost unexpected one; but, after all, it was only a skirmish upon the outposts, compared with the great, and it may be almost decisive, conflict that is soon to be joined for the defence or capture of Richmond.

There is now little doubt that Grant means to take it, and thinks that he has men enough to do so; and we confess to an abiding faith that, if he undertakes it, it will be done.

We are learning something about war every month it lasts; and the government are learning, too, to trust its armies to those Generals who know how to use them in such a way as to make them tell upon the rebellion—instead of keeping them inactive, month after month, dying out behind intreachments, and preying only upon the financial resources of the Nation.

Success has at length become an essential to promotion, instead of that old fogy rule of seniority and nepotism which has so cursed and almost destroyed the efficiency of the British army, and for a while so greatly paralyzed our own.

Congress and the government, too, are beginning to learn that there is something better than superannuation to entitle a man to command armies, and navies, and fight the battles of the Union.

War is of course a calamity, but when so wickedly forced upon us, and by so causeless a rebellion as this has been, there is but one thing left to a people who are not themselves fit to be slaves, and that is to crush it out by the force of arms, and cease fighting only upon the surrender of the last arm raised in rebellion against the best and freest Government ever yet given to men to possess or enjoy.

It is an ungenerous slander to say that this great people are fighting for the extermination of slavery, and those who say [illegible] that it is not true. It will no doubt result in the extinction of slavery, but that is only an incident of the war. Every one who has at all considered President Lincoln's uniform position in this matter, and a position too in which he has been sustained by both Congress and the [illegible] people, knows that he has utterly refused to make or accept any such issue as this.

He would not allow negro slavery nor any thing else to stand in the way of crushing out the rebellion; nor would he turn away from the great purpose of the war, to interfere with slavery, one way or the other. Slavery will, no doubt, be exterminated; but it will be done by the rebels, and not by us—or rather it has already been done by them.

We are glad that it is so; for we believe that this scourge of war has been brought upon us by a Just God, as a fit punishment for our complicity in this great sin against humanity and human rights; and that it will not be permitted to cease until this festering evil is forever put away from our midst. And yet, tied up as we are, and have been, by the obligations of that Constitution which our fathers adopted for us, this could scarcely have been done, except by the rebels themselves, and the exigencies of war.

It is, therefore, because we can begin to see, or think we see, this dark veil lifting itself from off our land; because we see success, not seniority, in command of our armies; and because we see a great government evidently acting from a pure patriotism, calling in to its aid its ablest men, without regard to party, and punishing fraud wherever it can be fairly detected, without regard to either men or partisans; and, still more, because among the men in the army, and especially the officers commanding those men, there is an increasing confidence in that direction, that we, too, are induced to believe that, ere another twelve month shall have passed away, we shall see the back bone of this Rebellion substantially broken, and the occupation of these Cassandras of our nation, ("prophesying evil, and only evil, and that continually,") clean gone forever.

☞ The Dean Line steamer Alice Dean, hence to Memphis, ran into the bank 10 miles below Cincinnati about 9 o'clock last night, and sunk. Her bow lies upon the shore, and her stern is in about 12 feet of water. Her cargo is being taken off in a damaged condition by the Lady Pike, and will probably all be off by Saturday evening. It is thought that the boat can be raised. No lives lost.

The Confederate Pirates.

The public were much disappointed, some time ago, to learn that the report of the blockade of the Alabama at Amoy, China, was untrue. It was not only not true, but it appears that the Alabama never was further eastward than Singapore, in the Straits of Malacca. From there she sailed on the 24th of December, having taken on board 300 tons of coal, and the same day fell in with the bark Texan Star, otherwise called Martaban, from Moulmein, Burmah, for Singapore, with a cargo of rice. The particulars of the destruction of this vessel are well known. The pirate kept on her course up the Straits, and two days later burned the American ships Sonora and Highlander, both at anchor off North Sands (Sumatra) light-ship. The next heard of her was, that she was in the Gulf of Martaban, about 50 miles south of Rangoon, Burmah. She then seems to have crossed over the Bay of Bengal, swept around Cape Comorin, the southern extremity of India, and sailed up the western coast of that country; for we next hear of the capture of the bark Emma Jane, on the 14th of January, off Ajenga, on the southwestern coast of India. This is the last positive information of her whereabouts, though it was generally supposed she would pursue her course up the coast and touch at Bombay, as the Times of India, (Bombay,) of January 23d, speaks of it as not at all unlikely. That journal urged the people to show no favor to the pirates. From these movements it would seem that Semmes has given up for the present any intention he may have had of visiting the Chinese seas and Pacific Ocean, and we may possibly hear of him next in the vicinity of Cape Town again, as he is probably aware of the absence of the Vanderbilt. The other pirates are the Tuscaloosa, now seized by British authority at Cape Town; the Florida, just escaped from Brest; the Georgia, lately escaped from Cherbourg; the Rappahannock, under surveillance at Calais; and the Pampero, lately seized in the Clyde. The Georgia and Florida will doubtless soon be heard from in their work of destruction

Fort De Russey.

The fort that has been so brilliantly captured by Gen. A. J. Smith, is situated at Gordon's Landing, about 70 miles above the mouth of Red River. The work consisted of a water battery and a bastioned fort commanding it. At the beginning of 1863 the water battery consisted of four heavy guns, situated at the water's edge, and at a bend which gave them a sweep of half a mile either up or down the river. The bastioned fort was erected on the rising ground, about a quarter of a mile in the rear of the water battery, and was at that time intended to resist a land attack, as well as to cover the water defences. [illegible] The armament of this upper work consisted of ordinary field pieces, so placed as to enable the garrison to operate with them, either upon troops advancing from the shore or by a flank movement. In January, 1863, the Queen of the West having been grounded within range of this fort, had to be surrendered in consequence of the heavy fire that was concentrated upon the vessel. The garison of the fort even at that time was able to send a complete shower of plunging shot into that ill-fated vessel, and all others attempting to pass up the river. Since that time two 32 pounder Parrotts taken from the Queen of the West, one 11 inch gun captured with the Indianola, and two long 32 pounders taken at Galveston from on board the Harriet Lane, have been mounted on the works. With such an arrangement it would have been impossible for Admiral Porter's fleet to have passed up the Red River, whereas its capture and occupation by our forces has enabled our gunboats to proceed to Alexandria and other points of the Red River without opposition.

☞ The Idaho humbug is fast exploding, and the truth concerning the "untold riches" of that barren waste will became pretty generally known, before many unfortunate adventurers are caught by the land sharks, who are starting all the big stories concerning the "newly discovered fields of gold." Several bankers, hearing that there was fifteen millions of gold dust at Denver City, awaiting transportation, went there for the purpose of purchasing it, but learned that the "big pile" existed only in the imagination of interested speculators. The discoveries as yet are quite limited.

☞ Gen. Burnside passed through Detroit on Monday last, on his way to the Front. He arrived there towards evening, and left at ten o'clock. His reception though, impromptu was deeply enthusiastic—every one wishing to see him and if posible take his hand. At the depot he was addressed by E. C. Walker Esq., on behalf of the citizens to which he replied, expressing his appreciation of, and gratitude for the reception given him, and also extolling the bravery and efficiency of Michigan troops.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

"Treason at Home."

The author of the leader in your issue of last week, gives us a very interesting specimen of sarcasm, under the title of "The Pleasures of Grumbling." This would probably have been all well enough if, instead of concentrating its bitterness on a few poor, erring, political sinners, he had made its application as general as the practice, and then suggested a specific for the cure of a disease, with which, as we have some reason to believe, the race is universally afflicted.

But it sometimes will happen, that men in their overwrought zeal to serve some darling object of their desires, will so far forget their own consistency, as to charge upon others the very sins they themselves are then engaged in committing. It seems never to have occurred to the gentleman while he was writing his chapter on "the pleasures of grumbling" that he was then furnishing, at least some, "illustrations wherewith to expound and embellish" the book he proposes should be written. But perhaps he and his party claim the exclusive right to indulge in the "pleasures" of which he speaks. Some parties and even some individual men, do claim the exclusive political right to grumble. Charles the first of England claimed that right, and when any of his subjects undertook to indulge in that "kind of amusement" he had only "to refuse to allow treason at home," and the doors of the Bastile were very soon thrown open to receive these fault-finders, and there they were kept where they could not "do any body else any harm." The people however did finally come to the conclusion that they had some rights as well as their masters, and preparations were made to defend them, when a conflict ensued which terminated in their favor, and Charles' grumbling propensities were most effectually cured, by the loss of his head on the scaffold.

But while these diverse interests—the exclusive rights and the prerogative claimed by the crown, and the privilege of criticising the acts of rulers, which sometimes the people had the audacity to insist upon, has ever agitated the nations of Europe—we on this side of the Atlantic have long cherished the hope that that matter was finally and forever settled here; although it must be confessed that late indications furnish some reason to fear that that class of men who claim a "Divine Right" to rule, have not yet all become extinct, even in this land, either North or South.

The arbitrary and insolent tone of the administration press and leaders of that party, is sufficient to arouse our worst fears on this point. The article from which I will presently quote an extract manifests a spirit of bitterness towards one half of the American people at the North [illegible] to be the [illegible] which bodes them no good, for if they be really guilty of the crime charged against them by this gentleman, he should see to it, that this whole race of traitors be exterminated from the face of the earth. In speaking of those who criticise or are "finding fault" (as he terms it) with the policy of the administration, he says:

"The fact is, they are really opposed to the war, on the part of the North. It is to their minds all well enough for the South to rebel, and try to overthrow and rule the North; but it is a wicked and wasteful attempt on the part of the North, to seek, in any way, to resist and avert it. They secretly wish the rebels to succeed; and as they have not done so to any considerable extent, and are not very likely to do so, they feel not a little sore over it."

Now I would, in all earnestness, ask the gentleman whether, when he penned the above, he actually expected that any sober minded or sensible man would believe the statement, that the conservative men of the North are traitors to the government, or that they seek to overthrow it. Why should they seek to overthrow the best government on earth? Have they any less interest in it than Abraham Lincoln and his party? Are they any less patriotic? Why sir, the idea is too ridiculous to merit a sober thought.

"They secretly wish the rebels to succeed," says the gentleman. Who, let me ask, wishes to see the rebels succeed? Does he know of any one in our goodly community who is secretly wishing to see our glorious government, as founded on the "Constitution as our Fathers made it," destroyed? If he does let him point him out, and I imagine the offender will soon have occasion to go and dwell in some "Land of Nod," beyond the reach of the contempt his treasonable sentiments so justly merits.

Again; let me ask the gentleman whether he can tell how it happens, that Mr. Lincoln, his contractors, his officer and expectants, and the balance of the party, are all so eminently "Loyal," and that all the other party are traitors and "disloyal?" These are questions which claim our earnest attention; can the gentleman enlighten us.

But seriously, I do indeed, most truly regret that the author of the article in question, should so far descend from his honorable position in society, as to be found indulging in such partisan slang as that I have noticed. Such absurdities, such misrepresentation, he must know, can never accomplish any good, but on the other hand, hardly ever fails to do injury to the cause sought to be advanced.

The News

Saturday, March, 26.

Gen. Grant has promulgated his first general order as Commander-in-Chief, which positively forbids the use of intoxicating liquors by any person while on duty on the military railway, or carrying it with them on any military road. A more general extension of this order would doubtless be a great benefit in the army.

A number of important military changes are announced this morning. Gen. Pleasanton has been relieved from his cavalry command of the Army of the Potomac, and ordered to report for duty to Gen. Rosecrans at St. Louis. Other changes will bring into active service in the field, several of our best Generals, for sometime past unemployed.

Lieut. Gen. Grant has arrived at the front, and taken possession of the headquarters selected for him at Culpepper.—He was received with loud cheers at all the stations. Major Gen. Mead met him at Brandy Station, and at Culpepper he was welcomed by a great array of officers, the Station being also crowded with soldiers, each anxious to get a glimpse of the distinguished chieftain.

A World correspondent gives what he claims to be the exact present strength of the rebel army, viz: In Virginia, 130,000; in the South-west, 75,000; in East Tennessee, 20,000; at Charleston and Savannah, 30,000; West of the Mississippi, 15,000; at Mobile, 50,000 making a grand total of 275,000 troops, said to be effective.

Monday, March, 28th.

By the arrival of the steamship America we have news up to the 16th inst.—No further intelligence is received in reference to the Danish war. A proposition has been made by Russia and England for an armistice, to await the action of the proposed conference.

The rebel Gen. Forrest, with a force estimated at 5,000, has started on his anticipated raid, and on Friday last at 2 o'clock captured Paducah, Ky., on the Ohio River, after a most desperate resistance by our forces stationed there, having been repulsed four different times. The inhabitants escaped across the river upon learning that the rebels were approaching, and the place was mostly burned by our gunboats after Forrest had gained possession of the city. During the night he left the city, and continued his raid South-west, marching towards Clinton, and an attack on Columbus was anticipated. It is probable that a heavy fight ensued between our forces under Faulkner and the enemy, resulting in a heavy loss. From 1000 to 1500 wounded are reported arriving [illegible] crippled condition.

A Washington letter states that Gen. Grant will have all general officers immediately assigned to duty.

By the arrival of the steamer McClellan from New Orleans, we have further news from that place, but not of great importance. Deserters and refugees are reported as arriving within our lines daily, and over 2,000 in all have arrived at Brownsville. Three hundred of the rebels sent in pursuit of 150 deserters, likewise took advantage of the opportunity to escape and part of them succeeded in arriving safely at Brownsville.

A rumor comes from Washington that the Secretary of State is in favor of an immediate demonstration against the evident designs of the Mexican Empire and French. A French fleet of nine or ten frigates, is also announced off the mouth of the Rio Grande, in the Gulf of Mexico.

We are pained to announce this morning the death of Hon. Owen Lovejoy, Representative to Congress from Illinois, which occurred at Brooklyn Friday night, Mr. Lovejoy has been confined to his bed for many weeks past, and his death was not altogether unexpected, though some hopes were entertained of his recovery.

The President has issued another Proclamation, specifying those persons in arms against the United States who are debarred the privilege of accepting the oath of allegiance proffered in the Amnesty Proclamation of Dec. 8th 1863. It excludes all rebel prisoners now held, from the benefits of the Proclamation, except by a special application to the President.

The Fenian Fair opens at Chicago on Monday, March 28th.

We have a large batch of news by the steamer Evening Star, just arrived at New York, from New Orleans the 19th inst. Alexandria, La., surrendered to a portion of Admiral Porter's fleet without a fight. The forces in Western Louisiana were moving, the advance having occupied New Iberia. Two gunboats went up the Grand River and destroyed a rebel camp, capturing the arms and ammunition. Guerrillas have had several skirmishes with the 4th Wisconsin in the vicinity of Baton Rouge, our troops repelling them in each instance. Gen. Banks, it is stated, was to have left New Orleans for the field on Saturday, the 19th, or the following Monday. Prisoners taken at Port De Russe, on the Red River, had arrived; also, a gunboat which took part in an attack on Fort Powell, at Mobile.

Scraps of News.

—Rev. J. Orego, announced yesterday as having removed from South Jackson to Brooklyn, should have read Richard J. Orego. Mr. C. is not exactly a clergyman, but is one of the Representatives of Jackson county in the State Legislature.

—The Port Huron jail was emptied of its contents on Sunday night last. The occupants were only three in number, a deserter, a man arrested for robbery, and a negro who found a pocket-book with $60 in it. The two former escaped to Canada, the negro being recaught.

—The plaster trade of Grand Rapids has come to be no unimportant item.—The Grand Rapids Plaster Company sold and shipped, from June last to the 1st inst., 9,716 tons, amounting to $45,900. F. Godfrey sold about 7,000 tons, amounting to $81,500. The total plaster sales have thus brought to the city an aggregate of $77,400.

—A furore of a considerable extent exists at Houghton over a discovery that gold really exists in the iron pyrites of the quartz veins of the granite range. The Mining Gazette of the 12th says: "Large amounts of land will be entered within the next week. Several parties have gone through to Marquette well supplied with greenbacks, for the purpose of locating."

—The commencement exercises of the State University at Ann Arbor will take place next week. The Junior Exhibition will be held on Tuesday evening, the Medical Commencement on Wednesday morning, the annual address by Dr. Haven, and the Law Commencement on Wednesday afternoon, the address to be given by Hon, O. M. Barnes, of Ingham county; the exercises to be held at the Presbyterian Church.

—The St. John Republican thinks there is a mistake in the statement that a gang of counterfeiters who are at work in Saginaw county have their headquarters at or near that place. The Republican is undoubtedly ignorant of the rendezvous, as those characters do no usually put up their "signs" conspicuously. Our information came through a credible channel from Saginaw county.

—One H. D. C. Wood borrowed a horse of his sister in-law, Mrs. Brindle, of Clinton county, in January last, for the purpose of visiting St. Johns, but sold the horse at Duplain in the same county, and departed to parts unknown, with the proceeds. He was traced to Chicago, arrested and brought to St. Johns. Upon the examination, he confessed the crime, and was thereupon commited to jail to await trial.

A scoundrel named Eli Sottles, of Oakland county, notorious for his recklessness and rascality, has been committed to jail at Pontiac for an attempt to kill one William Bard. He struck Bard on the head with a poker several times, felling him to the floor and fracturing his skull. It is feared that the man may not recover from his injuries. No offense appears to have been given. Sottles was somewhat intoxicated.

—The prospect for a large crop of [illegible] in the State is encouraging.

—Mrs. S. B. Stearns, of Detroit, is to address the Soldiers' Aid Society at [illegible] Three lectures some evening during the present week.

—The barn of Thos. Kelly, near Hillsdale, was burned on the night of the 21st inst., with its contents, including two horses and three cows. A wagon was removed in time to save it. Partly insured.

—Much complaint is being made at Hillsdale of the robbing of "hen roosts," a poor woman losing nine and a clergyman three of the useful fowls. Contemptible business, truly.

—A fire occurred at East Saginaw on Thursday morning, destroying a two-story wood building on Cass street, opposite the American House, occupied by Burfeld and Hess, wholesale liquor dealers; two Billiard saloons, and 3 family residences. Two small buildings in the rear were burned. The large building was owned by E. Thayer, of Buffalo, and insured for $2,000. Most of the liquors, furniture, etc., was got out, but was badly damaged.

—Much alarm has been created by the discovery of the existence of small pox at the tavern of Robert Bigham, a little east of Brighton, Livingston county. It seems that they have had the loathsome disease in the house for about five weeks past, and have concealed it from the public until the past week, continuing to entertain travelers as usual. Robert Bigham, Jr., has died, and two more of the family are sick. Those who have stopped at the house lately will make their arrangements accordingly.

—The name of the Invalid Corps is, by order of the War Department, changed to that of Veteran Reserve Corps, which sounds more pleasant to the officers and the commands.

—A charter has been applied for in the Pennsylvania Legislature for a "Subterranean Transportation Company," the object of which will be the conveying of oil through underground pipes from the oil regions of that State to Pittsburgh.

—A French company is about to establish a steamship line between New York and Havre. Two first class vessels have been built on the Clyde for this line, named respectively the Washington and the Lafayette.

—From a report communicated by the Commissioner of Patents to Congress, on Wednesday, it appear that more business has been transacted than during any year in the history of the Government, excepting 1859 and 1860; 6,014 applicants have been received, and 4,170 patents have been granted.

—The following letter was received by a gentleman of Poughkeepsie through the Sanitary Fair Post Office in that place:

Escape of Rebels from Camp Doulas.

On the night of the 22d inst., 12 rebel prisoners made their escape from White Oak prison in Camp Douglas, and have not yet been re-taken. They were confined in the second story of the prison, in the next room to a guard, and made use of the same holes in the floor above and below that the rebels escaped through during Col. Deland's stay at the Camp. Their manner of concealing their work was most ingenious. While part of them were at work filing off nail heads so that the floor might be raised, the others sang loudly, rattled chains, and otherwise engaged the attention of the guard, in such a manner that not the slightest suspicion of their proceedings ever entered the minds of those over them. Reaching the ground they burrowed their way in a zig zag direction under the fence, depositing the dirt in an old sink, of the existence of which Col. Strong was ignorant. They commenced to prepare for their escape nearly six weeks ago. At the time of their leaving twenty five of the rebels were in prison, and why only twelve chose to escape is a mystery The day before the escape of these prisoners, two rebels were discovered digging a tunnel under the new barracks just erected in the south-east portion of the grounds.—Of course they were put into the prison. And a lucky change it was for them, as they were among the missing the next morning.—Chicago Tribune.

The Wine Plant.

The cultivation of this plant, and the manufacture of Wine from it, has engaged the attention of the citizens of some counties to a great extent, within the past year. The great profit to be derived from the investment of the capital and labor required, and the pleasantness and medicinal qualities of the beverage itself, have induced many to embark in the enterprise, and none, so far as we know, have yet been disappointed in their expectations. Read the following testimonials:

KINGSVILLE, March 2, 1864.

To G S. HULBERT:—I hereby express my confidence in the Rhubarb Wine,—having made a quantity of the same, which I deem superior to any manufactured of American grapes. It is now six months old only, and I have sold $160.00 worth already, at from $2.00 to $3.00 per gallon. I heartily recommend it as a wine of great medical efficiency, and a money-making business.

ROBERT SMITH.

I have been afflicted with bloating of the Liver, for more than a year and a half, to such an extent that it sorely troubled me to work, eat, or wear my clothes. In this condition I naturally sought medi[illegible] fit. My last resort was [illegible] ican Sherry," and it [illegible] found relief [illegible] entirely rid of this affliction.

S. K. CARTER.

KINGSVILLE, March 2, '64.

From the Binghampton Daily Times.

Dr. Marsh, Inspector of the U. S. Sanitary Commission for the Department of the South, says: "Rhubarb Wine is the best remedy for Dysentary and Diarrhœa yet known.

"The wine we should suppose would be in general use in our camps, for the benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers." Important, from one who has been five years in the business.

DOES IT PAY?—For an experiment I made, in Fall of 1858, about 100 gallons of wine from the "Strawberry Variety." Since that time I have made from 1500 to 4000 gallons per annum,—making (exclusive of the 100 gallons for experiment) five crops of wine, in all, over 13,000 gallons. Nearly all of the above named amount of wine, of sufficient age, I have sold at $2.00 and $1.75 per gallon, according to quantity.

Profits per gallon.—I report my nett profits, to the Government Assessor, at One Dollar per gallon, above all taxes, interest, or other expenses. But in stating my profits, the present prices of everything are fully taken into account.

* * * The thousands of gallons I am selling of the "American Sherry" I have never sold at a less price, by the largest quantity, than $1.75 per gallon.

Merits and Popularity of the Wine.—For taste and flavor this wine is universally admitted by competent judges to be a very superior article; and some can scarcely be persuaded that it is not an extra quality of grape wine. No physician fails to count it an extraordinary medicinal wine, who has had the good fortune to become acquainted with it, and many are even very enthusiastic over its medicinal properties.

I. R. MUDGE.

BELVIDERE, ILL., Dec. 16, '64.

To Whom it May Concern:

This may certify that I have used successfully, as a stimulant alterative and medicinal diffusive agent, an article of wine manufactured from a particular species of rheum, well known, and extensively cultivated in this vicinity. I regard it as preferable to most stimulants, from its great purity and from its containing at the same time medicinal properties, safe and reliable.

E. H. BARNES, M. D.

MARATHON, CORTLAND CO., N. Y.

I fully concur with Dr. Barnes, in the above statement.

E. M. WEBSTER, M. D.

KINGSVILLE, Oct. 2d, 1863.

Having grown this plant extensively, we are prepared to furnish the Roots in such quantities as may suit purchasers, also the wine.

☞ Few are aware of the importance of checking a cough or slight cold in its first stage; that which, in the beginning, would yield to a mild remedy, if neglected soon attacks the lungs. "Brown's Bronchial Troches" give sure and almost immediate relief. Military Officers and Soldiers should have them, as they can be carried in the pocket, and taken on occasion requires.

Godey's Lady's Book.

For April, makes its welcome appearance. This number presents unusual attractions. Keeping company, Steel Engraving, and an article by Mary Forman, will charm the eye, and touch the heart. The Fashion Plate embraces six figures of matchless beauty, unsurpassed in engraving or coloring. It contains the usual space devoted to fashions, needle work &c. and its usual amount of the choicest reading matter in our language. Its circulation is 150,000—monthly. The lady who does not read the Ladys' Book, can have little claim, to be fashionable. Now is a good time to subscribe; back numbers from January can be supplied.

The School Exhibition

If we accept the very large attendance at the School Exhibition on Wednesday and Friday evenings as an indication in the premises, we have good reason to rejoice over the interest that is felt in our community in the cause of Education. It is a cause worthy of the attention of every friend of human progress; and all such who were present on the occasion, must have been gratified with the evidences of advancement made up the "hill of science" by the pupils of the Tecumseh Union School. The exercises throughout were highly creditable to both, teachers and scholars. The selections and arrangement of pieces were in good taste, and the promptness, correctness, and good deportment of the pupils spoke more loudly in their praise than anything we can say. There were chances for criticism, of course, but where all essayed to perform well their parts, it would be out of place for us to point out imperfections, and would also seem invidious to mention the names of those who excelled. The patience of the audience, remaining as they did in a crowded hall, was a proof of the interest they took in the exhibition. The exercises were interspersed with music, which added much to the interest of the performances. The receipts of the two evenings amounted to about $100, we believe, which will be quite a help in the purchase of philosophical apparatus.

☞ We will be obliged to friends who will furnish us with notices of deaths and marriages.

ROBACK'S CATAWBA BRANDY

is made from the PURE JUICE OF CATAWBA GRAPE, which is grown in abundance in Ohio and from which this article is obtained—it has an agreeable flavor, fine clear color, and possesses all the qualities for medicinal purposes, and for a beverage of the best imported brandies. As a flavoring for mince pies and other cooking purposes it is the best economical article that can be used, being one half a dollar cheaper by the bottle, and nearly two dollars per gallon cheaper than other Brandies sold for that purpose. Wherever it has been introduced it has found rapid sales, and is daily gaining in popularity, giving in all cases the utmost satisfaction. Call for "Roback's Catawba Brandy," which may be found for sale by Druggists, Grocers and dealers generally throughout the West.

TERMS.—One dollar and fifty cents per year if paid in advance; one dollar and seventy-five cents if paid within three months and two dollars invariably after that time.

ANNUAL TAXES FOR 1864.

The attention of tax payers is hereby called to the provisions of the United States excise law relative to the assessment of Annual Taxes.

By the sixth section of the act of July 1st, 1862, it is made the duty of all persons, Partnerships, Firms, Associations, or Corporations, made liable to any annual duty, license or tax, on or before the first Monday of May in each year, to make a list or return to the Assistant Assessor of the district where located, of the amount of annual income, the articles or objects charged with a special tax and the business or occupation liable to pay any license.

Every person who shall fail to make such return by the day specified will be liable to be assessed by the Assessor according to the best information which he can obtain. And in such case the assessor is required to add fifty per centum to the amount of the items of such list.

Every person who shall deliver to an Assessor any false or fraudulent list or statement with intent to evade the valuation or enumeration required by law, is subject to a fine of Five Hundred dollars, and in such case the list will be made out by the Assessor or Assistant Assessor, and from the valuation and enumeration so made there can be no appeal.

Payment of the annual taxes, except those for License, will not be demanded until the thirtieth day of June, 1864.

The appropriate Blanks on which to make return, and all necessary information, will be furnished by Jonathan H. Green, Assistant Assessor for the eighth Division, to whom the returns should be delivered on or before the first Monday of May, at his office, in Tecumseh.

Probate Notice.

STATE OF MICHIGAN,—County of Lenawee, ss.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Wednesday, the 16th day of December in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty three.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Garrett N. Hunt deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of Jacob Snyder a creditor of said deceased praying that said petitioner may be appointed Administrator of said estate.

Thereupon it is ordered that Monday, the 1st, day of February next, at 10 o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said petition and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, and show cause if any there be, why the prayer of the petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, That said Petioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition and the hearing thereof by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald, a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

GREAT IMPROVEMENT.

TIGHT STITCH

SEWING MACHINES

—o—

WEED'S CELEBRATED PATENT

Never fail to satisfy those who give them a thorough trial, and wherever introduced are rapidly superceding all others.

They possess the merit of simplicity and ease of management, so that fifteen minutes instruction will enable any one to use them successfully. The following are some of their points of excellence:

They have a Straight Needle and Shuttle, which is acknowledged to be the only true principle for a perfect Sewing Machine.

They make a Lock or Shuttle Stich alike on both sides, and for economy in Thread, Strength, Durability, Elasticity and Beauty of Finish, is superior to any other Stitch used.

They are simple in construction, easily understood, readily adjusted and kept in order without taking apart or moving a screw.

The Tension is superior to any other in use. Unevenness or knots in the thread do not cause it to operate with irregularity.

The Feed is perfect, accurate in its operation, and warranted to run two years without requiring to be taken out, cleandd or repaired.

They are adapted to all kinds of Sewing, and are strong and durable in all their parts. This is important, for even light work will soon cause a frail machine to operate with uncertainty, and require frequent and expensive repairs. The Weed will last a life time and keep in order.

They Stitch, Hem, Braid, Fell, Cord, Bind and Gather without basting.

They do not break the thread, skip stiches nor form a chain ridge on the underside of cloth. They will saw over gathers and seams without breaking the thread, or requiring a change of tension.

They use Silk, Cotton and Linen Threads equally well.

They are the only machine using WEED'S PATENT THREAD CONTROLLER. There is no other apparatus for the control of the 'Slack Thread' equal to it.

Every Machine is Warranted.

Families and Manufacturers will find the Weed the most profitable machines for use, owing to their always keeping in repair and working order, and their great speed and ease of management.

Forty per cent more work can be done in a year's time on the "Weed" than on any other Sewing Machine.

We publicly challenge machines of any and all other manufacture, to do as large a range of work as can easily be done on these machines.

All orders or communications from Families, Tailors, Seamstresses, Clothiers, Harness Makers, &c., in the country, will receive prompt attention. A Descriptive Circular and Samples of Work will be sent on receipt of letter stamp. Collections made on Delivery of Machines, if desired, so that the purchaser need not pay for them until they are received.

ROUP

NEW HAVEN, Dec 11, 1862.

Having been taught that medicines, in order to be valuable, must originate with some particular faculty or school, we considered patent medicines, (so called,) a humbug, until after losing our beloved child with Croup, we were forced by the suffering of another, from the same disease, and the advice of friends, to try Coe's Cough Balsam. Little Eddie had gone, and, though we loved him, we would not call him from his quiet rest, to share the sorrows of this unfriendly world. But Willie, is there no remedy for thee? We found it in Coe's Cough Balsam. It relieved him in about twenty minutes, to our great joy, and the surprise of others. We cannot be hired to dispense with this priceless blessing, and we are glad to learn that Mr. Coe has made arrangements with parties, whereby it may become more extensively known. In view of this let me say to every parent, when your child is suffering with Croup, give this Balsam, give it freely. If we did not believe it to be the best remedy for you, we certainly would not say it.

Truly yours,

DR. ROBACK'S BLOOD PURIFIER and BLOOD PILLS

have been introduced to the public for more than six years, and have acquired an

Immense Popularity,

far exceeding any Family Medicines of a similar nature in the market.

An appreciating public was not long in discovering they possessed remarkable

Curative Properties,

and hence their

ANOTHER writes, his son was cured after his flesh had almost wasted away.

The doctors pronounced the case incurable.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever and Ague after trying every medicine in his reach.

ANOTHER was cured of Fever Sore which had existed fourteen years.

ANOTHER of Rheumatism of eight years.

Cases innumerable of Dyspepsia and Liver Complaint could be mentioned in which the Purifier and Pills

Work like a Charm.

The Blood Pills

are the most active and thorough pills that have ever been introduced.

They act so directly upon the Liver, exciting that organ to such an extent as that the system does not relapse into its former condition, which is too apt to be the case with simply a purgative pill.

They are really a

WILCOX & GIBBS,

SEWING MACHINE.

Price, with Hemmer and Feller, $60.

THE WILCOX & GIBBS Sewing Machine is the best, all things considered, regard to price, for Family Sewing.

Braiding,
Hemming,
Felling,
Tucking,
Cording,

It forms a flat, even, and elastic seam, which is warranted not to rip in wear, even if the seam is cut at intervals, and also under all circumstances "to survive the washtub."

A patented device of great utility to learners, prevents the possibility of the machine being run in the wrong direction, or the balance-wheel wearing a lady's dress.

Another feature which deserves particular attention is the Wilcox Patent Needle which cannot be set wrong.

"It is emphatically the good, low-priced Family Sewing Machine that the public have long been waiting for."—Boston Transcript.

"It is indeed a wonderful production, and, for family use especially, no other will bear any comparison with it."—Phila. Evening Journal.

"A mechanical wonder."—Scientific American.

"Among the best and most serviceable Sewing Machines. Light and elegantly finished and so simple in its construction, that it seems almost impossible for it to get out of repair."—Pittsburg Chronicle.

"Has combined with its own peculiar merits all the really valuable improvements of the higher priced Machines."—Pennsylvanian.

"This Machine, in the opinion of the committee, fills more nearly the requirements of a perfect family machine than any on exhibition."—Franklin Institute Exhibition Report of 1863.

"Taking into consideration simplicity, cheapness, durability, and doing all work, the committee were unanimously in favor of Wilcox & Gibbs', as a single thread machine."—Pennsylvania State Agricultural Society's Report.

"We must, in justice, express our confidence in the merits of the Wilcox & Gibbs Sewing Machine We consider that a great desideratum has been supplied by it, in proving, beyond doubt, that two threads are not, as was supposed necessary to a good machine.—Christian Advocate and Journal, June 21 1860.

"After much wear and many washings, the stitching is found to retain all the roundness, evenness, and firmness which are so much admired at first."—New York Sun.

"In principle it is perfect."—Engineer, London.

"Has evident points of superiority over all others"—Philadelphia Press.

"A serviceable machine. Of this we have one in our own family."—Sunday Transcript.

"The beauty and simplicity of its mechanism are admirable."—Express.

"No Sewing Machine heretofore introduced has, in so short a time, acquired such well-merited popularity."—Cincinnati Gazette.

"We esteem it the best machine we use hundred citizens of Philadelphia.

The stitch is unexceptionable."—

ASSIGNEE'S SALE.

OF

Valuable Real Estate.

THE SUBSCRIBER now offers at private sale the real estate lately owned by the individuals and firm of J. C. Satterthwaite & Co., assigned to me, consisting of the following property:

The beautiful farm formerly owned by the late Aaron Comfort, situated one mile from the village of Tecumseh, containing 180 acres, a very desirable and choice property. Also 150 acres mostly well timbered one mile west of the above 80 acres timbered 2 1-4 west of the Comfort farm.

The Raisin Mills property, situated one and a half miles south-east from Tecumseh, consisting of a good saw mill and a grist and flouring mill with four run of stones, and all the modern improvements with three houses and from 110 to 120 acres of land including mill pond, situated in an excellent wheat country. Also the large brick house and lot in the village of Tecumseh, occupied by J. C. Satterthwaite, and four or five other houses and lots in said village. 25 acres of farming land adjoining the village corporation on the north. Several vacant lots in said village. Also an improved farm and an excellent whitewood timbered lot and two other wild lots in Milan, Monroe county, and 10 or 12 wild lots in Ridgeway and Blissfield.

All of which I offer for sale cheap for cash. On some of the property a credit for a part would be given if desired. Perfect titles given. Enquire at my residence in Raisin, four miles south of Tecumseh, or at my office in Tecumseh, three doors east of the Post Office, at T. Deuel's store.

DR. JOHN L. LYON'S

FRENCH PERIODICAL DROPS.

THE GREAT

FEMALE REGULATOR,

Are the only known remedy that will successfully and invariably restore and regulate the female system, removing all irregularities, and producing health, vigor and strength.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are a fluid preparation, the only one of the kind ever discovered in this country, and acts directly on the parts affected, whilst pills and powders can only reach them as they work through sympathy, but not at all direct and positive.

Are you suffering from a constant anxiety for the regular return of nature's prescribed laws?

Give yourself no unpleasness, for Lyon's Periodical Drops, if taken a day or two before the expected period, will positively and invariably regulate its coming, as sure as effect follows cause, as certain as daylight follows darkness.

Are you sick, enfeebled by disease, or unable to bear the labor and danger of increase?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Come to you as a blessing, for is not prevention better than cure?

If regularly taken, it is a certain preventive, and will save you much peril and many hours of suffering.

Have you been afflicted for many years with complaints incident to the sex, that have baffled the skill of physicians, and are hurrying you on to an early grave?

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Are the most reliable regulator ever known, and cure, like magic, all those irregularities that have defied the doctor's skill.

Will you waste away with suffering from Leucorrhœa, Prolapsus, Dysmenorrhœa, and a thousand other difficulties, all summed up under the name of suppressed and obstructed nature, when an investment of one dollar in

will surely save you?

Do not use the drops when forbidden in the directions, for although a positive cure, and harmless at all other times, they are so powerful and finely calculated to adjust and govern the functions of the sexual organism, that, if taken at improper times, they would produce results contrary to nature, against which all, particularly those who would reproduce, should carefully guard.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS

Cannot harm the most delicate constitution at any time; yet the proprietors wish to guard against its misuse, hoping that a thousand bottles will be used for a good purpose where one is used for an illegitimate one.

LYON'S PERIODICAL DROPS.

the never-failing Female Regulator, is for sale by every Druggist, in both city and country, and do not, if you value your health and wish for a reliable medicine, buy any other. Take no other; but if the Druggist to whom you apply has not got it, make him send and get it for you.

Over Five thousand Bottles have been sold in this massive town, and not a single instance of its failure is known.

We have in our possession, any quantity of certificates, some of them from

EMINENT PHYSICIANS,

who have used it in their practice, and given it the preeminence over any other compound

It does not dry up a Cough, but loosens it, so as to enable the patient to expectorate freely.

Two or three doses will invariably cure tickling in the throat.

A Half Bottle has often completely cured the most

STUBBORN COUGH

and yet, though it is so sure and speedy in its operation, it is perfectly harmless, being purely vegetable. It is very agreeable to the taste, and may be administered to children of any age.

In cases of Croup we will guarantee a cure if taken in season.

☞ No Family should be Without it.

It is within the reach of all, the price being

ONLY 25 CENTS

And if an investment and thorough trial does not "back up" the above statement, the money will be refunded. We say this, knowing its merits, and feel confident that one trial will secure for it a home in every household.

Do not waste away with Coughing, when so small an investment will cure you. It may be had of any respectable Druggist in town, who will furnish you with a circular of genuine certificates of cures it has made.

HELMBOLD'S

GENUINE PREPERATION.
"HIGHLY CONCENTRATED"
COMPOUND

Fluid Extract Buchu

A Positive and Specific Remedy

For Diseases of the

BLADDER, KIDNEYS, GRAVEL, AND DROPSICAL SWELLINGS.

This Medicine increases the power of Digestion and excites the Absorbents into healthy action, by which the WATER or CALCAREOUS depositions, and all UNNATURAL ENLARGEMENTS are reduced, as well as pain and inflammation, and is good for man, woman, or children.

Helmbold's Extract Buchu

FOR WEAKNESS

Arising from Excesses, Habits of Dissipation, Early indiscretion, or Abuse.

ATTENDED WITH THE FOLLOWING SYMPTOMS:

Indisposition to Exertion,	Loss of Power,
Loss of Memory,	Difficulty of Breathing,
Weak Nerves,	Trembling,
Horror of Disease,	Wakefulness,
Dimness of Vision,	Pain in the Back,
Universal Lassitude of the Muscular System,	Flushing of the Body,
Hot Hands,	Eruptions on the Face,
Dryness of Skin,	Pallid Countenance,

These symptoms if allowed to go on, which this medicine invariably removes, soon follow

IMPOTENCY, FATUITE, EPILEPTIC FITS,

In one of which the patient may expire. Who can say that they are not frequently followed by those "direful diseases."

INSANITY AND CONSUMPTION.

Many are aware of the cause of their suffering but none will confess. The records of the Insane Asylums and the melancholy deaths by Consumption, bear ample witness to the truth of this assertion.

THE CONSTITUTION ONCE AFFECTED WITH ORGANIC WEAKNESS,

Requires the aid of medicine to strengthen and invigorate the system which HELMBOLD'S EXTRACT BUCHU invariably does. A trial will convince the most skeptical.

Females, Females, Female.

OLD OR YOUNG, SINGLE, MARRIED, OR CONTEMPLATING MARRIAGE.

In many affections peculiar to Females the Extract Buchu is unequalled by any other remedy, as in Suppression or Retention, Irregularity, Painfulness, or Suppression of the Customary Evacuations, Ulceration or Schirrous state of the Uterus, Leucorrhœa or Whites, Sterility, and for all complaints incident to the sex, whether arising from Indiscretion, Habits of Dissipation, or in the Advice to Wives.

Love is fickle; sages say
Beauty cannot hold him;
Love will steal himself away,
Maidens, if you scold him
Love, he will not live in strife,—
Even turns from beauty,
If the lady plagues his life
With her household duty.

You can have him in your power,
Ladies, if you try it;
Use him as you won him first,—
Love, he can't deny it.
Do not fret, and scold, and pout,—
Aggravating trouble;
Beauty kicking up a rout,
Makes misfortue double.

Private Wunenburg's Stockings.

BY FREDERICK H. MARION.

It rained. The rain was rushing from the hazy skies, and dripping from the trees. Yet there was a streak of shining light in the west, and the birds were calling hopefully to each other from sheltered nooks in the woods. The scent of the wet roses and storm-washed syringas came in at the open window. Hattie Hayden sat by the window, knitting.

It was a little red house, set away among mowing fields, with lilacs between the sitting-room windows, and a path, bordered with beds leading down to the road, and filled with pansies, larkspur, gilly-flowers, bachelor's buttons, old maid's pinks. A gate swung into the road—an old elm over it. Behind the house was a barn with a dove cot attached—and beyond that were slopes of green grass, waving woods, and blue hills. The heavy rain beat down on all this, and upon the rustling fields across the road.

From time to time Hattie Hayden glanced from the window, yet her white fingers never abated the speed of their movements for an instant. She had a charming face, fair and dimpled, intelligent and pure. The damp breezes had curled her brown hair into little tendril rings about her forehead, and her hazed eyes had a sweet serenity which was very charming to the single observer of this industrious little maiden.

Mr. Dan Hartley sat at the opposite side of the room, stroking his whiskers. His employment was a very usual one, but his position he would have changed to one nearer Miss Hattie if he had not been possessed of the idea that such a movement on his part would be unwelcome. So he sat where he was and stroked his whiskers and looked at his companion, while she steadily pursued her knitting, and the rain came down.

Mr. Hartley spoke at last.

'I wonder if it will stop raining,' said he, pulling at his moustache.

'I presume it will,' answered Hattie, drily.

'Ah, well, mean—in time for me to get home to supper. I can't go through the rain, you know.'

'Of course not,' said Hallie, glancing out at the July shower. 'It would be very dangerous.'

Mr. Hartley looked at her earnestly, but she went on with her knitting so gravely that he was dispossessed of the idea which always haunted him in her presence—that she was making fun of him.

Just then Mrs. Hayden entered the room.

'Is that you, Daniel?' said she; how is your mother and your sisters?'

'Very well, thank you.'

'I suppose Hallie is too industrious to talk to you much, isn't she? She's got a regular fever for knitting stockings for the soldiers.'

'I wish I was a soldier,' said Mr. Hartley, looking impressively at Hallie.

'Why aint you, then,?' asked Hallie, turning upon him suddenly.

'O,—ah—I am not able to endure the marches, Miss Hallie. I have been weak for a year past, you know.'

'Of heart. Indeed?'

'O, no; weak of body. Your mother knows. She recommended a tonic for me last spring. What was it, Mrs. Hayden? cherry brandy and—'

'You drank it from necessity, of course.'

'O, yes, and I found it very beneficial,' said Mr. Hartley, innocently, not being near enough to the dark eyes to see their flash under the long lashes.

'Is that the last pair of stockings, Hallie,' asked Mrs. Hayden.

'Yes; answered Hallie, knitting the last stitch, and drawing out and breaking off the yarn. 'The last of the last order, mother. I wonder what poor fellow will wear them.'

'When they wear out what will he do or another pair?' asked Mr. Hutley. He was unconscious that it was the most suggestive remark he had made during the long afternoon he had spent in borring Hallie by staring at her. She smoothed out the stocking in silence, rolled it up with the other one—then rose and carried them into her room.

It was a charming room, the bed as white as a snowdrift and the window drapery and cover of the toilet table just as pure. There was an evergreen wreath about the pretty oval mirror, and branches of roses and lilacs glowing from the shelf, the bureau, and bookstand.

Hallie sat down by the window, took her writing-desk upon her knee, and wrote a little note which she tucked in the toe of one of the new stockings. This is what she wrote:

DEAR SOLDIER:—I have tried to do my work faithfully in knitting these stockings, but the best of stockings will wear out in time; and when you need another pair write to me, and you shall have them. May your feet carry you straight to victory; and may they pause only on the platform of unconditional surrender. NELLIE HAYDEN.

Hartford, Mass.

'Now,' cried Hallie, 'I wonder if I shall ever hear from that.

Doing it, somehow, put her into good spirits, and she went out to supper and was so merry and witty that Dan Hartley was charmed beyond all control of his euthusiasm.

'I declare,' said he, 'you are the best company I ever knew!

'I know better,' answered Hallie.

'Who?'

'Company A., First Massachusetts Regiment.

'O, Hallie,' said her little sister, 'you ought to marry a soldier.'

'I intend to,'

Dan Hartley looked about him rather dubiously.

'Do you really mean it? said he.

'Certainly,' said Hallie.

When supper was through, she donned her hat and sacq and went with her little sister, to the rooms of the Sanitary Commission, at the village, and delivered the stockings. Then homeward she turned with a heart that throbbed lightly with the dancing of the elm leaves and the tinkle of the roadside brook.

Never idle, she had plenty to occupy mind and hands for the next six weeks, and during that time her stockings reached the hands and feet of a brave young Massachusetts volunteer, by the name of Carl Wunenburg.

A pleasant light came into his eyes as he read the little note. There was some of the dreamy German blood in his veins, as his name betokened, and no man into whose hands the dainty original note might have fallen would have regarded it with the shade of pleasure with which Carl Wunenburg viewed it. He had neither brother or sister. No woman that he knew thought or prayed for him; so he carried that little white note about with peculiar pleasure, his heart trobbing under its light weight with stronger bravery in the cause for which he had enlisted, his soul vitalized to new life by sympathetic words which it bore.

He wondered, sometimes, with a quiet smile, if those stockings would ever wear out. In six weeks they outwore two other pairs which he used to alternate with. They were certainly of good material, and wonderfully well knit. At last his boots were worn from his feet.—Contact with road ruts was more than any yarn could stand, and at the end of a long march, he flung himself exhausted, upon the ground, hungry, thirsty, mud-stained, and almost bare-footed, his boots mere refuse and his stockings worn to rags.

When he discovered it, he too pen and paper and wrote as follows:

DEAR FRIEND:—My stockings are worn out at last. They did good service but they were tried beyond their strength and have at last failed—worn out—in the good cause. Another pair, equally staunch will be gratefully accepted by

Yours Truly
Private CARL WUNENBURG.

Hallie read the note with sparkling eyes, and proclaimed the whole thing royal. She did more. She knit another pair of stockings and sent them to Carl Wunenburg. And woven in with every mesh were vaguest and most charming dreams Carl Wunenburg, who thought seriously of the gentle knitter, never guessed how many.

This pleasant episode occurred in summer. In the fall Hallie's attention was engaged by serious reality of reverses.—Her home was mortgaged in an unfortunate speculation of her father's, her father's foot cut off by the falling of a spire, and crippled, ill and unfortunate in his speculation, the house was lost, Mr. Hayden died, and the mother and children were turned homeless upon the world.

Mrs. Hayden seemed stunned into insensibility by the blow, little Alice was too young to more than partially understand it, and upon Hallie's heart and head the circumstances devolved painfully.

'What shall I do? she asked herself, walking the rooms which they must soon leave.

All the saucy brightness had faded from her face. Her eyes were full of painful pathos since since she had looked on the pale dead face of her father, and about her face were lines of sorrowed firmness instead of careless smiles. She was twenty that day. The cross of life came with the crown of womanhood.

She might teach school, or go out as a governess, or keep books, if she could obtain an opportunity to do either. But she had no friends of ability to serve her in getting a situation, and she turned at last, as so many do, to the advertising columns of the daily papers of Boston.—An advertisement for a governess immediately met her eye.

Her application by mail for the situation was made painfully. As well that as anything, but it was a strange, new painful feeling to Hallie—the responsibility of care and labor for herself and others—and she feared her strength might fail her in spite of resolve. Her mother and sister did not realize the intensity of her feelings. Before them she was calm and cheerful, brave and earnest.

The situation was offered her and accepted. They removed to the city, and Hallie commenced her duties.

For a while the novelty engrossed her. The house was on Beacon street—and was furnished beyond all her former imaginings. Carpets of velvet tapestry, drapery of damask and satin, tables of arabesque and rosewood, grand musical instruments, luxurious lounges and fauteuils, exceeding every necessity for comfort. And a new world was opened to Aallie in the pictures of Poussin and Scheffer, the marbles of Palmer and Powers, and the books of Schiller, Geothe, Bettine—Leigh Hunt, the Brownings, Jean Ingelow—Alice Carey, Longfellow and Emerson. She had never known lavishness of any kind, and body and soul were deligted for a time; but she soon found her position irksome. Her duties as governess for four children under twelve years of age were hard, the mistress of the house was supercilious, her health suffersd from the change from the country to the city, and poor Hallie Hayden found her young life very hard to live.

Yet she kept up bravely, month after month. Spring came; then there was a change in the family. The oldest girl was sent away to school, and Mrs. Desmond's brother came home on furlough from the war; he was introduced to Hallie as Captain Wunenburg.

There was something in the mild, clear gaze of the young man's blue eyes which gave her comfort. He seemed kind and sensible. She wished for his friendship, and obtained it. He was the son of a wealthy man, yet there was no parvanue pride about him; he was as simple in his habits as a Thoreau, and as thoughtful and kind as one could be. Yet he was not weak by natuae; the magnetism of strength vitalized Hallie to fresh life; the calm power of his character gave her faith in herself for having so deep a sympathy with him. Stronger, deeper, warmer, than she for a long time discovered, was that sympathy. Only four short weeks they had been togeter, yet a pain keener than a dagger shot through Hallie's heart when she heard that Captain Wunenburg was engaged to Hildreth Courtney, the most beautiful young lady in Mrs. Desmond's set.

She shut herself up in her room and locked the door to walk the floor, weeping.

"O, it is cruel! cruel!" she sobbed. "Life was so hard before he came! He helped me—comforted me so, and I never dreamed why I was so happy—happier far beyond mere relief from loneliness make me. I had rather have died than to feel this; it is worse than all. O, if I had never known him!"

She threw up the window and let the cool spring wind blow upon her pale face. It brought a sense of country freshness and a memory of her old home. She remembered how she sat at the widdow of the sitting room in the old house, and while the breezes brought her the scent roses and lilacs, she had knit a soldier's stockings and dreamed girlish dreams—all at once it flashed upon her that the name was the same as Captain Wunenburg's. It was a strange coincident. She resolved that the next day she would ask him if he knew a private of the name of Carl Wunenburg. His first name she had never heard. His sister with a pride of effect, called him Captain.

The next morning she was alone with Captain Wunenburg in the breakfastroom. The children had not yet breakfasted; she was an hour before school time.

"Captain Wunenburg," said she, "did you ever meet a private of your name—the surname Carl."

Captain Wunenburg turned around quickly.

"Yes," he answered, "and I remember a little incident connected with him. When the government furnished him with his outfit, he discovered in the foot of one of the nice knit stockings, assigned to him, a little note written by the knitter, and requesting him, pitibly, to send to her for another pair when those were worn out. When a long, weary march had cut them to pieces, he did so, and received the second pair. With them he received an interest in the gentle friend who had sent them—an interest which he cherished sacredly, and dreamed sweet fanciful dreams of beautiful eyes and a fair brow bending down earnestly as the stockings were woven by kind, little hands. He was a dreamy German, or perhaps he would not have had such faith in this ideal knitter of his stockings. A Yankee would have trusted his heart with no such unfounded plan as discovering this beautiful girl and marrying her. Soon he gained promotion, and not long after obtained a furlough and came home. There, in his home, he found a dark-eyed girl with sweet serious eyes and a heart free to be won."

Captain Wunenburg paused.

"Well?" said Hallie, earnestly.

"You are to tell the rest," he said, smiling. "Did he win her heart—the sweet heart of the little knitter of his stockings? Tell me, Hallie."

She flashed her eyes upon his face and read a revelation there—now love, pride, and tenderness for her. Those deep, serious eyes drew her heart to her lips.

"O, Captain Wunenburg, he did win her heart," she said, dropping her blushing face from his sight. It was raised to take tenderest kisses. All doubts and fears were explained; life's panorama shifted full of light for them. And ere he returned to his regiment, Hallie had a loving protector.

The Right Sort.

Some one whose head is unusually level has written out his ideas of religion as follows: It will do to read and think about:

We want a religion that goes into the family, and keeps the husband from being spiteful when the dinner is late; keeps the wife from being fretful when the husband has tracked the newly washed floor with his muddy boots, and makes the husband mindful of the scraper and door mat; amuses the children as well as instructs them; wins as well as governs them; projects the honey moon into the harvest moon, and makes the happy hours like the Eastern fig tree, bearing in its bosom at once the beauty of the tender blossom and the glory of the ripened fruit. We want a religion that bears not only on the sinfulness of sin, but on the rascality of lying and stealing; a religion that banishes all small measures from the counters, small baskets from the stalls, pebbles from the cotton bags, clay from paper, sand from sugar, chickory from coffee, beet root from vinegar, alum from bread, lard from butter, strichnine from wine and water from the milk cans.

The religion that is to advance the world will not put all the big strawberries and peaches at the top, and all the bad ones at the bottom. It will not offer more baskets of foreign wines than the vineyards ever produced bottles.

The religion that is to sanctify the world pays its debts. It does not consider forty cents returned for one hundred given, according to gospel though it is according to law. It looks on a man who has failed in trade, and who continues to live in luxury, as a thief.—It looks on a man who promises to pay it on demand, with or without interest, as a liar.

The Mother.

No farmer's wife who is a mother ought to be allowed to do the washing of the family; it is perilous to any woman who has not a vigorous constitution.—The farmer if too poor to afford help for that purpose, had better exchange a days work himself. There are several dangers to be avoiped while at the tub. It requires a person to stand for hours at a time; this is a strain upon the young wife or mother which is especially perilous; besides, the evaporation of heat from the arms, by being put in warm and then raised in the air alternately, so rapidly cools the system that inflammation of the lungs is a very possible result; then, the labor of washing excites perspiration and induces fatigue; in this condition the body is so susceptible to taking cold that a few mements rest in a chair, or exposure to a very slight draft of air, is quite enough to cause a chill, with results painful or even dangerous, according to the particular condition of the system at the time. No man has a right to risk his wife's health in this way, however poor, if he has vigorous health himself; and, if poor, he cannot afford for the small sum which would pay for a day's washing, to risk his wife's health, her time for two or three weeks, and the incurring of a doctor's bill which may require painful economies for months to liquidate.

SLEEPING ROOMS.—Special attention should be given to sleeping rooms; have them well ventilated; pure air is more necessary when we sleep then when we are awake. Never sleep in a close room with all the doors and windows closed; even in the coldest weather, one window should be partly raised, or (which is best) let down from the top, so as to admit fresh air, without a current on the sleeper. The window curtains may always be down, as the air strained through the muslin loses its dampness, and is more healthful.

A SOLEMN THOUGHT.—Richard Baxter once said, "I seldom hear the bell toll for one that is dead, but conscience asks me, 'What hast thou done for the saying of that soul before it left the body? There is one more gone into eternity!—What didst thou do to prepare him for it? And what testimony must he give to the Judge concerning thee?"

TECUMSEH, MICH., MAY 5, 1864.

Home Manufactures and Domestic Supplies.

We notice a move in the right direction to relieve the country from the effects of the exorbitant rates of foreign exchange. This is the formation of associations pledged to discard the use of imported manufactures and fabrics when it is practicable to secure the same from domestic products.

The ladies of New England have initiated the movement, and it is rapidly becoming popular over the entire North. Should it become largely extended, its effect as a measure of relief to the country can hardly be over estimated.

With our Treasury notes as legal tender, it would hardly be possible to really disturb and embarrass the currency, or make any foreign estimation of it of consequence to us, but for the excess of our foreign imports, and the heavy rates of exchange we are called upon to pay upon this excess.

Most countries in time of war find themselves seriously embarrassed, from the fact that their war debt is almost uniformly a foreign one; and foreign capitalists, having succeeded in involving a nation in debt, find it for their interest to decry their securities, in order that they may thereby compel them to the payment of still more exorbitant rates upon each successive advance.

But, thanks to the almost universally acknowledged foresight and ability of our Secretary of the Treasury, our war debt is owned at home, and instead of drugging foreign markets brings a premium here, and with an equal foresight on the part of the people, confining themselves to home supplies, and discarding the entire excess of foreign imports, all power will be taken away from foreign unfrienly governments, to embarrass or distress us in any way, as they have ever shown themselves but too ready to do, in case of any serious disturbance amongst us.

In that case, too, the gambling operations upon Exchange in Wall Street, would quietly subside, from the simple fact that but little foreign exchange would be called for, and what debt there was to be paid abroad would mostly paid in advance by balances in our favor from the exports of the country.

As we have said before, there was never a time in which a little economy could save more real capital, or save it faster than now, and the more general use of domestic manufactures and products, while giving us perhaps a plainer but more serviceable article, would also greatly tend to keep prices more moderate and more within the reach of every one.

It is all nonsense for us to talk of financial or domestic suffering, so long as every one knows that we should sacrifice nothing but a little pride, in reducing our daily expenditures for food, clothing, etc., one third if not one half; and even then we should be living in absolute luxury compared with the wants and deprivations which are still regarded as far from unenviable in the South.

Instead of grumbling generally at the inconveniencies of a war of rebellion forced upon us, we should congratulate ourselves that, while it has been out of our power to avoid it, we are still permitted to live so free from its actual hardships and ruin, and as we value all the blood-bought privileges, and free institutions of the government, which an accursed rebellion is seeking to destroy, lend all our best efforts and warmest sympathies, in every possible way, to aid and sustain it, in this hour of trial and malignant outbreaking treason.

☞ Lee's army is still reported as still on the Rapidan, prepared for a movement, but thinks he will wait until the developement of Grant's operations. Gen. Longstreet is not in the valley of the Shenanhoah. The head of rebeldom, at Richmond, cannot understand, for the first time, what is intended by Grant. Our troops are said to be concentrating.

☞ We have reports from North Carolina to the 23d ult., which stated that our flag then floated over the fortifications at Plymouth, and it is reported that Gen. Wessell had retired with his force into the fortificatione, with 15 day's rations. It is now thought that he can now hold out until reinforced.

☞ The Ohicago Journal says: We learn from a source at Washington that Gen. Grant expects to have an army of two hundred thousand men in the great movement for which he is now preparing in Virginia.

☞ Gen. Burnside has lately been reinforced by 5000 men from the Eartern States.

For the Tecumseh Herald.

Loyalty to the Constitution not Treason.

It must be confessed that the ingenuity of politicians and demagogues of the radical school, have been but too successful, at least for two years, in impressing the public mind with the idea that all those who refused to shut their eyes and blindly endorse all Mr. Lincoln's notions of a political "Higher Law," and his negro equality doctrines, were traitors to the government of the United States.

But the approach of the Presidential election has caused a new era to dawn upon us. The followers of Mr. Chase, and Gen. Fremont also, refuse to believe the infalability of the President. They now see terrible wrongs in his administration, and for these wrongs the most scathing invectives and bitter epithets are unsparingly hurled at its devoted head with perfect impunity. All our disasters are directly charged upon his weak and vaccillating policy. But as this comes from a class of men who lay claim to a larger amount of "loyalty" than even the Lincolnites, and whose star is now in the ascendant, no Bulls or Anathmas comes thundering from the radical Press, no orders come stealthily over the wires for their arrest; even "military necessity" drops its head and silently bows to this new power.

The "support" of all Mr. Lincoln's whims and faucies is no longer the "support of the government of our common country." The Detroit Free Press and the Adrian Watchtower are no longer the only journals that teach the "new Gospel of Peace," though neither of them teach that kind of peace the gentleman, who writes editorials for the HERALD, would insinuate. There is a paper now published in an eastern city, called the New Nation. Has the gentleman seen it? That paper with scores of others throughout the country, are teaching a "new Gospel," which is now producing a similar phenomena among the rulers at Washington, to that which Belshazzar experienced when the hand writing on the wall declared him to be weighed in the balance and found wanting; and as the conduct of our own rulers throughout the land—for we have thousands of them—bare a striking resemblance at the present time, to that of the Eastern Monarch, when the fiat come forth that sealed his doom, found him and a thousand of his lords reveling in the wealth of a nation, and "praising their gods of gold, and their gods of siloer," may not then a similar hand writing have already recorded that they, too, are weighed in the balance and found wanting.

It is true however that the gentleman above referred to says a great many fine things about the "lofty patriotism" of our officials, and combats the idea that any partisan or selfish motives enter into their calculations, and in support of this, he says, that as soon as the war broke out, "the Predident sought to call around him the best talent and ability of the country, without regard to party; was cordially supported by Stephen A. Douglas, while he lived; has made of life-long Democrats a Secretary of War, a Lieutenant General,—and that to-day a majority of Major Generals," and other officers, "are members of the old Democratic party."

I am not much surprised that if the best talent of the country was called out, a majority of it was found to be Democratic; but I am surprised that the fact of a Commander-in-Chief calling men of all parties who were willing to serve under him, in the field, and who are as much under the control of his will as the servant is under his master's, should be regarded as an evidence of his nonpartisanship. Can the gentleman point to a single instance where a Democrat has been appointed to a civil office of any importance? He cannot do it, and I am surprised that he should refer to Secretary Stanton as being a Democrat. It is said he formerly was, and it is also said that Lucifer was once an Angel of Light, but that is no proof that he is now.

The truth of this matter seems to be, that Mr. Lincoln was deceived, as well as the masses of his party, by the preaching of demagogues during the Presidential campaign. They reiterated in endless strains—and we have all heard this song—that if the South did rebel, a few companies of Wide-Awakes could soon whip them into submission; but when the President waked up from this delusion, he soon learned that these heroes of the Wide-Awake fraternity could not do the work their leaders promised they could easily perform, he was therefore obliged to call around him "the best talent of the country,"—his own personal safety as well as thousands of his hungry followers required it—and thus by making a virtue of a necessity, his adherents affirm that President Lincoln is no partisan.

It is true that Stephen A. Douglas did, as every Democrat did, and ever will, cordially support every measure calculated to preserve and defend the National Constitution, and restore our glorious Union; but to say that Mr. Douglas, if now living, would support the present revolutionary and insane schemes of our radical madmen, is an unmitigated slander on the memory of that great man. If he were alive to-day, his noble voice would be heard ringing out in eloquent appeals to these fanatical men, to pause in their work of destruction, and listen to the wards of wisdom as handed down from the Fathers of the Republic; and to touch not with their unhallowed hands that Constitution, but let their work alone be devoted to the restoration of that Union, both of which he so manfully labored to preserve while with us. But his words were then, as they would be now, unheeded; and if his great soul is permitted to look down from the celestial spheres on this theater of his earthly career, how sad will be his feelings at the desolation and ruin now sweeping over this once happy land, by the unbridled reign of a mad radicalism. O.

The News

Wednesday, May 4.

Advices from Louisiana state that our forces were at Alexandria on the 24th.—An engagement took place between our forces and the rebels near Cane River.—The latter are reported to have lost 1,000 men and nine pieces of artillery.

The rebel Gen. Marmaduke is rumored to have had a fight with some of our forces in Arkansas, capturing 1000 prisoners, 240 wagons and artillery, but the rumor is not credited.

The House yesterday passed the bill increasing the pay of soldiers from $13 to $16 per month.

The 100 days' men in Ohio will reach 40,000 ready to march at the shortest notice.

The Congressional Committe, appointed to investigate the reported cruelties at the capture of Fort Pillow, report that the statements have not been exaggerated.

Thursday, April 5th.

Advices from North Carolina confirm the evacuation of Wnshington by our forces, after spiking the guns and destroying much useful property. It was done by order of Gen. Butler. The rebels, it is reported, have commenced massacreing all who accepted the amnesty proclamation, and pressing into their service all capable of bearing arms.

A rebel deserter from Lee's army states that his army numbers at present about 80,000 men. The soldiers of the rank and file are very despondent, but the officers are sanguine of success. Lee's fortifications are represented as being very extensive, and impregnable from a front attack. The removal of the archives and civil offices from Richmond is also confirmed.

A private letter from the 27th Michigan Infantry, dated at Warrenton Junction, Va., April 30th, arrival of the 9th Army Corps at that important point, all in excellent trim and ready to do their duty. Warrenton is about 30 miles southwest of Alexandria. Cannonading was hearh in front on Saturday, not over 20 miles distant.

The Army of the Potomac is reported "all ready" for a forward movement. The troops are in axcellent heart, and anxious for the advance under their new Commander-in-in-Chif. Burnside's cops is in a favorble position for co-operation. Fears are said to be entertained at Washington that Lee is about retiring to the fortigcations at Richmond.

The Richmond Examiner says that this is the last year of the war, whether one party wins or the other. If they lose the summer campaign their capacity for resistance will be broken, and if they succeed in holding Virginia through the season, the power of the North to perpetrate further mischief will be gone.

Newbern letters state that Beauregard is in command of the rebel forces in North Carolina. A body of 2,000 under Gen. Corse, is between Kingston and Newbern, and an early attack on the latter town is apprehended.

A caucus of Senators have resolved to oppose the resolution recognizing Frank Blair as a Major General.

In official dispatches from Gen. Banks, the battle of the 8th ult., is acknowledged to have been a disaster, but those of the 9th and 10th are claimed as Union victories, the rebels suffered immense losses.

☞ About 100,000,000 feet of logs have been got in during the past winter on the Muskegon River and its tributaries.

☞ Robert Davis has been appointed post-master at Grass Lake, Jackson county, vice James Dwelle, resingned.

☞ Large quantities of sturgeon are being caught in the river at Allegan. Over a hundred were caught in one day last week.

☞ The old hotel building on the corner of Monroe and Front street, Monroe, erected 30 years ago, is now being torn down to make room for a three story brick buling.

The Wine Plant.

The cultivation of this plant, and the manufacture of Wine from it, has engaged the attention of the citizens of some counties to a great extent, within the past year. The great profit to be derived from the investment of the capital and labor required, and the pleasantness and medicinal qualities of the beverage itself, have induced many to embark in the enterprise, and none, so far as we know, have yet been disappointed in their expectations. Read the following testimonials:

KINGSVILLE, March, 1864.

TO G. S. HULBERT:—I hereby express my confidence in the Rhubarb Wine,—having made a quantity of the same, which I deem superior to any manufactured of American grapes. It is now six months old only, and I have sold $160 00 worth already, at from $3 00 to $3.00 per gallon. I heartily recommend it as a wine of great medical efficiency, and a money-making business.

ROBERT SMITH.

I have been afflicted with bloating of the Liver, for more than a year and a half, to such an extent that it sorely troubled me to work, eat, or wear my clothes. In this condition I naturally sought medical aid, and expended much without benefit. My last resort was to try the "American Sherry," and, to my great surprise, found relief within two weeks. I am now entirely rid of this affliction.

S. K. CARTER.

KINGSVILLE, March 2, '64.

From the Binghampton Daily Times.

Dr. Marsh, Inspector of the U. S. Sanitary Commission for the Department of the South, says: "Rhubarb Wine is the best remedy for Dysentary and Diarrhœa yet known.

"This wine we should suppose would be in general use in our camps, for the benefit of our sick and wounded soldiers." Important, from one who has been five years in the business.

DOES IT PAY?—For an experiment I made, in Fall of 1858, about 100 gallons of wine from the "Strawberry Variety."

Since that time I have made from 1500 to 4000 gallons per annum,—making (exclusive of the 100 gallons for experiment) five crops of wine, in all, over 13,000 gallons. Nearly all of the above named amount of wine, of sufficient age, I have sold at $2.00 and $1.75 per gallon, according to quantity.

Profits per gallon.—I report my nett profits, to the Government Assessor, at One Dollar per gallon, above all taxes, interest, or other expenses. But in stating my profits, the present prices of everything are fully taken into account. * * * * The thousands of gallons I am selling of the "American Sherry" I have never sold at a less price, by the largest quantity, than $1 75 per gallon.

Merits and Popularity of the Wine.—For taste and flavor this wine is universally admitted, by competent judges, to be a very superior article; and some can scarcely be persuaded that it is not an extra quality of grape wine. No physician fails to count it an extraordinary medicinal wine, who has had the good fortune to become acquainted with it, and many are even very enthusiastic over its medicinal properties.

I. R. MUDGE.

BELVIDERE, ILL., Dec. 15, '64.

To Whom it May Concern.

This may certify that I have used successfully, as a stimulant alterative and medicinal diffusive agent, an article of wine manufactured from a particular species of rheum, well known, and extensively cultivated in this vicinity. I regard it as preferable to most stimulants, from its great purity and from its containing at the same time medicinal properties safe and reliable.

Union Livery Stable

"Union now, and Union ever,"
Shall be every freemon's cry;
Union formed to stand forever,
Union, the watchword, and reply.
The "UNION LIVERY," all do say,
Is just the place to go to,
To get a rig that's nice and gay,
With bells, and whip, and buffalo;

Horses gay, and safe, and fleet;
Buggies new, and nice, and strong:
Cutters fine, and all complete—
Just get in and go along.

It is the ladies' chief delight
To take a drive in our carriages;
Put on your fixen's boys, and try it,
They'll pay toll on all the bridges.

Come one, and all, by night or day,
We'll make the prices suit you,
For single rig, or four horse sleigh,
And drivers, too, to please you.

Our stables, too, are new and good;
Just drive your horses in and bait,
With hay, or straw, or ots or corn—
There's room enough, you need not wait.

The poetry machine has bu'sted. Good bye. Come and try us at the Union Livery and Feed Stable, betwen Haydens' and Tindall's Warehouse's on railroad street.

TO THE FARMERS.
THE EXCELSIOR
Horse Pitch Fork!
Is acknowledged to be one of the greatest
Time and Labor Saving Implements.
The Country Gentleman of Oct. 1862 says: "We have seen in operation no less than seven different Horse Hay Forks, some of which we had considered good ones. But when we saw the fork exhibited at Rochester by N. Palmer, all others were left clear in the shade. It is decidedly the most perfect Hay Fork that has ever been made, and one of the most commendable features in its manufacture is the price."
The Hon. L. F. Wright, Editor of the National Agriculturist, in his report of the Michigan State Fair, says: "Of the numerous machines intended as labor saving conveniences, there were none more highly commended than the Excelsior Horse Fork."

AYER'S CATHARTIC PILLS,
Are you sick, feeble, and complaining? Are you out of order, with your system deranged, and your feelings uncomfortable? These symptoms are often the prelude to serious illness. Some fit of sickness is creeping upon you, and should be arrested by a timely use of the right remedy. Take Ayer's Pills, and cleanse out the disordered humors—purify the blood, and let the fluids move on unobstructed in health again. They stimulate the functions of the body into healthful activity, purify the system from the obstructions which make disease. A cold settles somewhere in the body, and obstructs its natural functions. These, if not relieved, react upon the stomach and the surrounding organs, producing general aggravation, suffering, and disease. While in this condition, yielded by the derangements, take Ayer's Pills, and see how directly they restore the natural action of the system, and with it the buoyant feeling of health again. What is true in this trivial and common complaint, is also true in many of the deep-seated and dangerous distempers. The same purgative effect expels them. Caused by similar obstructions and derangements of the natural functions of the body, they are rapidly, and many of them surely, cured by the same means. None who know the virtues of these pills will neglect to employ them when suffering from the disorders they cure.
Statements from leading physicians in some of the principal cities, and from other well known public persons.

From a Forwarding Merchant of St. Louis, Feb. 4, 1856.
DR. AYER: Your Pills are the paragon of all that is great in medicine. They have cured my little daughter of ulcerous sores upon her hands and feet that had proved incurable for years. Her mother has been long grievously afflicted with blotches and pimples on her skin and in her hair. After our child was cured, she also tries your Pills, and they have cured her.
ASA MORGRIDGE.

As a Family Physic.
From Dr. E. W. Cartwright, New Orleans.
Your Pills are the prince of purges. Their excellent qualities surpass any cathartic we possess. They are mild, but very certain and effectual in their action on the bowels, which makes them invaluable to us in the daily treatment of disease.

Headache, Sick Headache, Foul Stomach.
From Dr. Edward Boyd, Baltimore.
DEAR BRO. AYER: I cannot answer you what complaints I have cured with your Pills better than to say all that we ever tread with a purgative medicine. I place great dependence on an effectual cathartic in my daily contest with disease, and believing as I do that your Pills afford us the best we have, I of course value them highly.
PITTSBURG, Pa., May 1, 1854.
DR. J. C. AYER. Sir: I have been repeatedly cured of the worst headache any body can have by a dose or two of your Pills. It seems to arise from a foul stomach, which they cleanse at once.
Yours with great respect, ED. W. BREEDE,
Clerk of Steamer Clarion.

Bilious Disorders—Liver Complaints.
From Dr. Theodore Bell, of New York City.
Not only are your Pills admirably adapted to their purpose as an aperient, but I find their wonderful effect upon the liver very marked indeed. They have in my practice proved more effectual for the cure of bilious complaints than any one remedy I can mention. I sincerely rejoice that we have at length a purgative which is worthy the confidence of the profession and the people.
DEPARTMENT OF THE INTERIOR,
Washington, D. C., 7th Feb., 1856.
SIR: I have used your Pills in my general and hospital practice ever since you made them, and cannot hesitate to say they are the best cathartic we employ. Their regulating action on the liver is quick and decided, consequently they are an admirable remedy for derangements of that organ. Indeed, I have seldom found a case of bilious disease so obstinate that it did not readily yield to them. Fraternally yours, ALEXDR HALL, M. D.,
Physician of the Marine Hospital.

Dysentery, Diarrhœa, Relax, Worms.
From Dr. J. G. Green, of Chicago.
Your Pills have had a long trial in my practice, and I hold them in esteem as one of the best aperients I have ever found. Their influence extends upon the liver makes them an excellent remedy, when given in small doses for bilious dysentery and diarrhœa. Their sugar-coating makes them very acceptable and convenient for the use of women and children.

Dyspepsia, Impurity of the Blood.
From Rev. J. V. Himes, Rector of Advent Church, Boston.
DR. AYER: I have used your Pills with extraordinary success in my family and among those I am called to visit in distress. To regulate the organs of digestion and purify the blood, they are the very best remedy I have ever known, and I can confidently recommend them to my friends. Yours, J. V. HIMES.
WARSAW, Wyoming Co., N. Y., Oct. 21, 1855.
DEAR SIR: I am using your Cathartic Pills in my practice, and find them an excellent purgative to cleanse the system and purify the fountains of the blood.
JOHN G. MEACHAM, M. D.

Constipation, Costiveness, Suppression, Dysepsy, Paralysis, Fits, etc.
From Dr. A. P. Vaughn, Mentor, Lake County, Ohio.
Too much cannot be said of your Pills for the relief of multitudes. Mothers of my fraternity have found them as efficacious as I have, they should join in recommending it for the benefit of the multitudes who suffer from that complaint, which, although bad enough in itself, is the progenitor of others that are worse. I believe nineteen twentieths to originate in the liver, but your Pills affect that organ and cure the disease.
From Mrs. E. Stuart, Physician and Medical Medium, Boston.
I find one or two large doses of your Pills taken at the proper time, are excellent promoters of the natural secretion when wholly or partially suppressed, and I consider them effectual to cleanse the stomach and regulate the system. They are so much the best physic we have that I recommend no other to my patients.
From the Rev. Dr. Hawker, of the Methodist Episcopal Church.
PULASKI HOUSE, Savannah, Ga., June 6, 1856.
HONORED SIR: I should be unpardonable for the relief your skill has brought me if I did not report my case to you. A cold settled in my limbs and brought on excruciating neuralgic pains, which could not be subdued by rheumatism. Notwithstanding I had tried all the usual remedies, the disease grew worse and worse, until by the advice of an excellent agent in Baltimore, I took the shaker of your Pills. Their effects were slow, but sure. By perseverance in the use of them, I am now entirely well.
SENATE CHAMBER, Baton Rouge, La., 8 Dec. 1855.
DR. AYER: I have been entirely cured by your Pills of Rheumatic Gout—a painful disease that had afflicted me for years. VINCENT SIBLEY.
☞ Most of the Pills in market contain Mercury, which, although a valuable remedy in skilful hands, is dangerous in a public pill, from the peculiar consequences that frequently follow its improper exhibition. These contain no mercury or mineral substance whatever.
Price, 25 cents per Box, or 5 Boxes for $1.
Prepared by Dr. J. C. AYER & CO.

Probate Notice

STATE OF MICHIGAN, County of Lenawee, s. s.—At a session of the Probate Court, for the County of Lenawee, holden at the Probate Office, in the City of Adrian, on Wednesday the thirteenth day of April in the year one thousand eight hundred and sixty-four.

Present, Robert R. Beecher, Judge of Probate. In the matter of the estate of Peter McCollum deceased. On reading and filing the petition, duly verified, of John McCollum administrator with the will annexed of the estate of said deceased, praying for the allowance of his final account and his discharge as such administrator.

Thereupon it is ordered, that Monday the sixteenth day of May next, at ten o'clock in the forenoon, be assigned for the hearing of said Petition, and that the heirs-at-law of said deceased and all other persons interested in said estate, are required to appear at a session of said Court, then to be holden at the Probate office in the City of Adrian, and show cause, if any there be, why the prayer of the Petitioner should not be granted.

And it is further ordered, that said Petitioner give notice to the persons interested in said estate, of the pendency of said petition, and the hearing thereof, by causing a copy of this order to be published in the Tecumseh Herald a newspaper printed and circulating in said County of Lenawee, for three successive weeks previous to said day of hearing.

☞ Mrs. McCoy has fitted up rooms in Richard's Block one door west of Van Tine & Smith's Ware rooms, where she has just received one of the largest and best assortments of Bonnets, Hats, Flowers, Ribbons, and everything belonging to the Millinery business, ever brought to this town. She is determined not to be undersold. Give her a call.

Always Something New.

Ketcham, our enterprising Bookseller, seems to be always on the alert to bring out something new. Yesterday he showed us samples of some new "Metallic Pens," for which he had just secured the exclusive agency for this town.—They are certainly the best pen we have ever seen, the ink flows freely from them, they will not corrode, and it is almost impossible to break them. We would advise all in want of a good pen, to call on Ketcham.

Union Township Convention.

All electors of the Township of Tecumseh, who are in favor of supporting the Administration in a vigorous prosecution of the war for the suppression of the rebellion, are requested to meet in "Union Hall," in the village of Tecumseh, on Thursday the 12th inst., at one o'clock, P.
